LaPietra, Zuccarello, Waters Discuss
Curriculum Vote With Student Government

The Student Government of Marist College recognizes the important part played by both faculty and students in the study of the curriculum in the last two years, the structural revision now being discussed, and the work on curriculum at the departmental level.

In recognition of this joint participation, the magnitude of the revision and the effects it will have; that these effects will weigh most heavily on the students, we call for an equal voice in the implementation of the current proposal and those to follow.

That is, more precisely, we the Student Government of Marist College call for an equal vote of both faculty and students on the current proposal and those to follow.

The following are excerpts from the Student Government meeting on Monday night September 28, 1970. The meeting concerned itself with the statement issued by the Student Government at its previous meeting. Present to answer the questions of the Student Government were Brother Richard LaPietra, Academic Dean; Dr. Louis Zuccarello of the Academic Policy Committee and Mr. Edward Waters of the Faculty Policy Committee.

Charles Meara: We would like to know who would be responsible for this decision?

LaPietra: Well, I think to a certain extent if you want to trace it back, it will ultimately reside with the Board of Trustees, and then bring it down to certain levels, the President would certainly have some sort of say in terms of the recommendations to the Board of Trustees, but right now it is not a decision that falls in any particular lap. In other words, it is up to the faculty alone to say how we are going to do the voting.

Mr. Waters: The President is working on that now and Dr. Zuccarello of the Academic Dean; Dr. Louis Zuccarello of the Academic Policy Committee and Mr. Edward Waters of the Faculty Policy Committee.

Charles Meara: Mr. Waters: Well, I think the President wouldn't necessarily do it, but rather would consult with the full committees.

Zuccarello: I favor a subcommittee and that committee is in the process of being formed, I think the President would seek advice and counsel from the various elements in the community that are concerned with the question. Ultimately it would be the decision of the Board.

Glennon: What would we like to know right now, what would we all like to know, if per chance the proposal has already been drawn up and we wanted to take it to somebody tomorrow to get some action on it, where would we go?

LaPietra: I would say you could take it to the President, but the President would not act unilaterally on it.

Meara: Who would the President take it to?

LaPietra: Well, I think the President would seek advice and counsel from the various elements in the community that are concerned with the question. Ultimately it would be the decision of the Board.

Mr. Waters: The President is not going to recommend it to the Board unless the groups are in general agreement to the proposal.

Glennon: I would like to ask Dr. Zuccarello, Brother Richard and Mr. Waters to comment personally on this preliminary proposal.

Dr. Zuccarello: I favor a proposal which recognizes the important part played by both faculty and students in the study of the curriculum in the last two years, the structural revision now being discussed, and the work on curriculum at the departmental level.

In recognition of this joint participation, the magnitude of the revision and the effects it will have; that these effects will weigh most heavily on the students, we call for an equal voice in the implementation of the current proposal and those to follow.

The Anatomy of a Pig

By Peter Salter

In recent years, some of the best known students on college campuses throughout the country have been engaged in public struggles for peace and social reform. One of the most notable of these struggles was the conflict at the University of California at Berkeley. The story of this conflict has been told many times, but the experiences of the students who were involved have not been widely known.

The conflict began in the fall of 1968, when a group of students occupied the administration building to protest the war in Vietnam. The occupation lasted for several days, and during this time the students were able to win concessions from the administration, including the right to form a student union and to have a say in the hiring of the next president of the university.

The students were successful in their efforts, but they were also met with resistance from the administration. The conflict continued for several weeks, and during this time the students were able to win additional concessions, including the right to form a student newspaper and to have a say in the allocation of funds for student programs.

The conflict eventually ended with a settlement that provided for the establishment of a student government and the creation of a student-run university newspaper. The students were able to achieve many of their goals, and they were able to do so without violence or bloodshed.

This story is important because it shows that students can be effective in demanding change, and it shows that a peaceful approach can be successful in achieving goals.

The students at Berkeley were able to win many of their goals through a combination of peaceful activism and direct action, and they were able to do so without violence or bloodshed. Their success shows that students can be effective in demanding change, and it shows that a peaceful approach can be successful in achieving goals.

AND THE WAR DRAGS ON

Circle Photographer
Spends Summer
In Vietnam

Richard Bresnaren, Circle photo editor, spent the summer in Vietnam as well. He was in Saigon for one week in June, and then flew to Phnom Penh in Cambodia for another week. While in Saigon, he was able to get interviews and pictures of the Vietnam War, as well as the refugee camps in and around the city. In Cambodia, he was able to see the damage caused by the war, and the people waiting for the war to end so they can go back home.

Farms and rice paddies have been abandoned, and the people are out of the countryside; and into the refugee camps where they can be watched over remotely. Everything is in a state of flux, and the people are waiting for the war to end so they can go back home.

His impression of the war now is that it has become more orderly. The fighting has become more predictable, and the people are able to plan their lives accordingly. However, the war is still far from over, and the people are still in great need of help.

La Frontera

Book Review

By Paul Brown

When a Latin author is published in the United States he has an extra measure of praise, partly because Latin literature is often translated and published for the sake of introducing a little of that literary tradition which is often in general use only in the Latin countries, partly because Latin authors attract the literary reviewer. This is true indeed of the Latin authors in whose country the country has a biography on him, and whose books they have published and read for years in the language of the Latin nations.

Gabriel Garcia Marquez is one who has made this. His English translation of Carlos Fuentes' La Frontera, the best-selling book in Mexico for the past two years, has been published by Doubleday, and the book has been translated into English. The book tells the story of the beautiful yellow man, who is a kind of job and who is a kind of hero. The story is set in the fictional town of La Frontera, which stands for the border between Mexico and the United States.

The novel contains several heroes who are per-sonally involved in the affairs of their own lives, and in their own ways, develop the theme of the novel. One of the heroes is a young man who is the son of a wealthy family, but who is also a member of the lower class. He is a rebel against his family's social position and is determined to assert his own identity. Another hero is a young woman who is the daughter of a poor farmer, but who is determined to educate herself and to assert her own independence.

The novel has been praised for its vivid and powerful portrayal of the lives of the characters, and for its examination of the social and political issues of the time. It has been translated into several languages, and has been read by millions of people around the world. The novel has been compared to the works of other great Latin authors, such as Gabriel Garcia Marquez and Mario Vargas Llosa.
The Vikings of Marist College opened up their season last Saturday by squeezing by Plattsburg State by a score of 14-7. It was the first time that a Viking team has won their home opener on Leonidoff Field.

Once again it was the strong defense that saved the day for the Vikings. They stopped the Plattsburg offense time and time again through out the game. Don Hinchev, Cotton, Nash, Mike Ets, Henry Blum, and Paul Lacobbe turned in fine performances for the Vikings.

The Vikings were the first to score after a tough first quarter in which there was no score. Henry Blum blocked a Plattsburg punt early in the second quarter to give the Viking offense the ball on the Plattsburg 40 yardline. Some fine running by Dick Harbrouck and Chuck Browne brought the ball down to the Plattsburg 3 yardline. From there Dick Harbrouck went in for the first touchdown of the game. Bob O'Reilly kicked the point after attempt. The score was 7-0 in favor of the Vikings.

The Vikings did not hold the lead long as a Plattsburg interception gave them the ball deep in Viking territory. Peter DiDonato, the quarterback for Plattsburg, hit Chris Cringle with a 30 yard pass for a touchdown. The score was 7-7. It was the first time they had scored on a drive. The passing of DiDonato behind the line of scrimmage for a big loss. Paul Lacobbe came up with a big play on fourth down by stopping a Plattsburg reverse before it could turn the corner. The Vikings took over with only four minutes to go. Staying on the ground they ran out the clock for their first win of the season.

Charlie Van Nostrom and Tom Cardinale did a fine job of opening holes on the left side of the Viking line. Both are newcomers to the team. Chuck Brown, the Vikings halfback, showed great form in running and also in catching the ball as he lead the club in receptions. The Vikings go on the road for three with a trip to Rhode Island to take on Providence.

Plattsburg tied the score at 7 all. Plattsburg, hit Chris Cringle with a pass on the Viking 20 yardline. From there the Plattsburg team ran seven plays with the help of a pass interference call, it was to no avail as the famous Viking defense held tight after time. With 3 down and 8 to go for a touchdown Don Hinchev along with Cotton Nash caught DiDonato behind the line of scrimmage for a big loss. Paul Lacobbe came up with a big play on fourth down by stopping a Plattsburg reverse before it could turn the corner. The Vikings took over with only four minutes to go. Soccer Team Off To Slow Start

The Soccer team started off its season last Wednesday afternoon against Sacred Heart University, in Bridgeport, Connecticut.

The McGuigan brothers, Pat and Joe, scored four goals between them, to lead the Sacred Heart University soccer team to a 5-4 victory over Marist.

Inside left Joe McGuigan, a member of the United States Olympic team, scored four goals almost without hindrance as he literally dribbled through four defenders each time to shoot at will. Three goals were on breaksaways and one was on a set shot.

His brother, Pat, opened the game in the first period by scoring on a break away.

The Outstanding performance of the day was turned in by Bob Mayerhofer. The meet was one of the larger events in the area this season. The Vikings travel to Rhode Island to take on Providence.

Runners Lose In Opener

This is the first time that Sacred Heart has beaten Marist in five years. According to Marist coach Dr. Howard Goldman: "We knew that McGuigan was on the team and we played him before, but he never exploded on us like he did this season. We should have been able to get at him a little better." It was to no avail as the famous Viking defense held tight after time.

Scoring the opening goal for Marist was Pete Walaszek, an outside left, on a cross by Tom Rabbitt. Walaszek then returned the favor to cross Rabbitt for the second Marist score. In the play on John Scallon, Pete Walaszek crossed on a cross by Walaszek and in the fourth period Gary Westfall sailed over the head of Sacred Heart goalie Mike Murray and in to the upper left corner of the goal.

In their home opener last Saturday afternoon Marist was defeated by Manhattan College, 6-1.

Jack Shrimpt proved to be too much for Marist goalie Pat Parcells as he scored four of Manhattan's goals. High scorer for Marist was Pete Walaszek. Walaszek's 2 goals. Don Sobenko got one when he
