Candidates Prepare For Elections

BY CANDI DAVIS

"I was really surprised, I had a lot more response, and interest than I thought I would," said Debi Allione, Commissioner of Student Government, and Financial Board elections.

Miss Allione was chosen as commissioner bychip Ernihi, acting president of Student Government. She was selected because she is a work-study student and is not involved with S.A.C., C.U.B. or Interhouse Council.

Elections must be held three weeks after the commissioner is chosen. Petitions must be handed in by Thursday, November 13. Candidates night will take place noon Saturday, November 15, and end two days before elections. Elections will be held on campus November 20 and 21.

Miss Allione's responsibilities as commissioner are to put up posters notifying the student body of the elections, draw up petitions, make sure the names are valid on petitions, set up candidates night, oversee campaigning procedures, tabulate votes, and inform the rest of the campus. Miss Allione is receiving $60 for her job as commissioner.

People close to the election have informed the Circle that some of the prospective candidates for the office of vicepresident are Rick Bolt, John Woodin, Moira Cofey, Don Fitzgerald, Ed Jennings, Andre Green and Raul Quintano. Prospective candi­dates for vicepresident are Kevin Bliss, Brian Benest and Joan D'Emie. Joan Segenga is a prospective candidate for secretary, and John Davers is a prospective candidate for treasurer. Prospective can­didates for Financial Board are Kathy Walsh, Tony Wilger, Victor Olivera, and Yvonne Risik. Miss Allione is glad to see that there is so much interest in the elections, and a genuine concern by the prospective candidates for Student Government and Financial Board.

Commercials "Sell" Marist

BY FRED KOLTAY

The admissions office of Marist is spending $1,440 for television advertising. This is part of an "increasing student enrollment," said David M. Flynn, Director of Admissions.

The "medium mix" campaign began on October 11 and as yet, Mr. Flynn conceded, the goal set has not been achieved.

The project came about last spring when Mr. Flynn selected a team of "Influencing a World of Learning and Living" to create a thirty second commercial. The team consisted of fifteen students.

On November 1 and 2 of this year the Kaylix Films Company shot 90 minutes of 16 millimeter film costing $6,000 for full production. From this, the company edited a thirty second commercial.

A World of Learning and Living is the theme of the commercial.

"We tried to capture the spirit of the students, and the faculty-student relationship being on a campus," States Mr. Flynn.

Kopec of the Development Office. Ms. Kopec is assigned to accompany reporters to various headquarters to observe election coverage.

The night began for the group when each person went to his assigned district to wait for the results to be called so that he could record them and return them to the Journal. Various groups were arranged and assigned to accompany reporters to wherever their stories would take them. Most of the people visited the headquarters set up by County Executive William Bartilts at the Holiday Inn. There they got a chance to interview Mr. Bartilts themselves. Another stop by the groups that night was the headquarters of Ed Schueler, another County Executive candidate, at the Hellenic Center in Poughkeepsie. Mr. Schueler ultimately won the election. The students then returned to the Poughkeepsie Journal to observe the newspaper as reporters began writing their stories.

The event was planned by Mrs. Mimi McAndrew, teacher of the Journalism class and also a Journal reporter. The point of such an experience was that it enabled the students to observe first hand how a reporter covers an election, what kind of insights gained by the students will hopefully increase their ability to deal with a reporting situation.

The Questioning Cameraman

BY RICH SELKERS

This week's question: What do you think is the most important feature of Marist College? Where: Asked: Around town.

John Blue CBE: I think it has little to do with the fact that Marist College is an ideal spot. It's pretty much isolated, but it's not an idea city. It's on the Hudson River, which is a short distance from New York City. But the most important thing is the sense of community. The students are very friendly and supportive of each other. The campus is also beautifully located.

Mike D'Allesio: It's a small school. It's not easy to get to know everyone really well and feel like a part of the community. But the Marist College community is very close-knit.

Jack White: I think it's the fact that the students are passionate about their education. They are always looking for opportunities to learn and grow. The faculty is also very supportive and dedicated.

The Questioning Cameraman is proud to introduce its new column, "The Questioning Cameraman." The column will feature questions and answers about the Marist College community. The column is open to all students, faculty, and staff. We encourage everyone to submit their questions and share their thoughts on what makes Marist College special. Let's make this column a space for everyone to come together and share their perspectives.
Vikings Trounced 21-8

by THOMAS MCTERNAN

Fullback Charlie Vito scored twice from a yard out and the Redmen had four key Marist turnovers, leading to two 90- and one 80-yard drives in a 21-8 victory over the Vikings in Jamaica last Saturday.

With injured backfield partner Sal Ali seeing limited action, Vito carried the ball 32 times for 206 yards on a variety of draw plays and trap screens.

"He is a good football player," praised head coach Red Levie.

"We just couldn't tackle him and their offensive line blocked very well.

The same couldn't be said for the отметить quarterback. S.T. John's, like our other recent opponents, was so big they just shut the middle off," Levine commented. "There is very little outside Viking blockers. "St.
