Former commuters who are now participating in the "Week Plan" are responding favorably to dormitory life. Students have found relief from winter driving, and generally enjoy the enlarged social activities of on-campus living.

As students were settling into their dormitory life they spoke informally about the transition. Most impressive are the three move Video Cassette Recorders (which are used like a cassette recorder. Sound is heard through a pair of earphones), while a picture is seen on a Sony color television, mounted directly above the V.C.R.

The guards pursued the intruders and security personal prevented removal of the stolen property from the building.

As a result of this incident, noted Dean Lambert, new security measures are being looked into by the college. "We're reviewing our present lock system in all the dormitories." There's a new lock system on the market that works without a key. It's a dead bolt and as soon as the door closes there's no way to get back in without punching the correct sequence of numbers. "Right now," he continued, "we're checking into costs, as much as well as other college buildings and universities where this system is presently in operation."

"It's a pretty good program if you don't have the regular room and board cost. The cost was $6,500 for the "move" as they did last year with the dual purpose of construction. There are also records and filmstrips available. There's a new lock system on the market that works without a key."

The new carpeting, combined with the acoustical ceiling makes the Student Lounge, yet to be completed, one of the best equipped communities available. "forget" to check out their books. There have been grumblings about clocks, which are soon to be installed.

The year '75 is on forever. Yet, some of its problems linger on for us to deal with now. Whether or not this was intentional or just plain forgetful still remains to be seen. Time has proven that problems can sometimes take more than a day to go away. As we stated tomorrow in hopes that they will just go away.
