Campus forum on proposed time schedule set for November 8

by Vic Small

A panel consisting of three students and three faculty members will meet on Tuesday, November 8th at 2:15 p.m. in the college theater to discuss the new midterm time schedule proposal.

Academic Dean Louis C. Zuccarello said he will make a decision on the schedule on or about, November 18.

Zuccarello and John H. Dwyer, registrar, said Jeff Blanchard, president of the student government, will select the panel. They will have at least one commuter and no two people from the same dorm or major should be on the panel.

Blanchard said he has sent letters to department chairmen to find interested faculty members. He said Dwyer and Zuccarello will not be panel members.

Blanchard said he will send flyers to students this week explaining the issue and the panel. He said questions for the panel will be accepted until one week before the discussion.

Blanchard added the student panel will have at least one commuter and no two people from the same dorm or major should be on the panel.

Zuccarello said the panel is an opportunity for the campus community to get together to hear differing points of view.

He said he hopes the panel will offer a range of views and "...not stack the deck one way or another."

Dwyer said the meeting will last anywhere from one to two hours, and anything beyond that will be repetitious. Several questions will be allowed after the discussion, but Dwyer said he doesn't want the meeting to turn into a "screaming contest."

Crash claims

Marc Toce, a senior business major at Marist College, was killed early Wednesday morning in an automobile accident on Route 9C in Hyde Park.

Toce was a passenger in a car driven by Ted McKibben, a non-Marist student, who received minor injuries. McKibben was charged by Dutchess County Sheriffs on a charge of driving while intoxicated.

Friends may call on Thursday from 3-6 p.m. at LaPorta Funeral Home on Litchfield Street, Torrington, Connecticut, his home town. Funeral services will be on Friday at 9 a.m. at St. Francis Church on Main Street. There will be a service on November 2 in the Marist College Chapel at noon.
Waters: “Marist will not fold”

by Alan Jackson

The fear that Marist College will continue to suffer due to financial difficulties is among other small colleges in New York State. According to Marist President Linus R. Belanger, “Marist is about five years away from its financial crisis.”

Marist College, which has been struggling for the past few years, is facing a $300,000 deficit this year. The college is attempting to cut expenses and increase revenue in order to avoid bankruptcy.

“Marist has been working hard to reduce costs and increase income,” said Belanger. “We have cut back on unnecessary expenses and increased tuition rates.”

Belanger also noted that the college is exploring new revenue streams, such as partnerships with local businesses and increased enrollment.

“Marist is committed to providing a quality education to its students,” said Belanger. “We will continue to work hard to ensure the college’s financial stability.”

Belanger added that the college is working with the Marist College Foundation to increase its endowment fund. The foundation has set a goal of raising $10 million by the end of the year.

To the Editor:

It has been called to our attention that the Marist, LaSalle, and Loyola campuses are in a period of transition. Our campus is in the process of a major change. This change will be beneficial in many ways. However, it is important that we understand the reasons behind this change.

The reason for this change is due to the fact that our campus has been growing in size. The population of our campus has increased significantly in recent years. As a result, we need to make adjustments to accommodate the increased student population.

It is important that we understand the benefits of this change. For example, the new facilities will provide improved learning environments for our students. In addition, the new facilities will also provide more opportunities for extracurricular activities.

We should also be aware of the challenges that this change will bring. For example, there will be a need to adjust our existing facilities to meet the needs of the new students.

In conclusion, we should be aware of the benefits and challenges associated with this change. It is essential that we understand the reasons behind this change and work together to make the most of this opportunity.

Sincerely,

Shanean Hill

Dear [Name],

I am writing to address the concerns that you have raised. I understand your frustration, but I assure you that we are working to address the issues you have mentioned.

Firstly, I want to acknowledge the impact of the change on our campus. It is true that some students may feel that their time and effort have been wasted. However, I believe that the benefits of the change outweigh the challenges.

Secondly, I would like to provide some context. The change is not just about improving our facilities. It is also about creating a more sustainable and inclusive environment for all students.

I hope this information helps address your concerns. If you have any further questions, please do not hesitate to reach out.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]

Fall 1977 winners

Fall 1977 winners of the CACC Invitational junior varsity race included F.G. Clarke of Iona College. Clarke carried the ball for seven minutes and 32 seconds in this time, and a way to get to know people at Marist. In keeping with the tradition of the concept, and long before we would have known it.

Booters drop heartbreaker to Quinnipiac

By Ralph Capone

The Red Foxes winning streak came to an abrupt end on Friday night following a heart-breaking 1-0 defeat at the hands of Quinnipiac at Leonidoff Field.

The win was Quinnipiac's first of the season over seven losses, and the loss at home for Marist was their first in two years.

In the game, however, the Red Foxes did just about everything except put the ball in the net.

"We weren't hitting the ball very well," coach Howard "Jerry" Scholder said, referring to the numerous missed opportunities his squad had during the game.

Marist outshot the visitors 32-12. The closest call for the Red Foxes came with two minutes remaining in the contest.

If saves, though, he was never really tested by the Red Foxes. It was just a question of Marist not putting enough good shots on goal.

The one time Androzzi was tested came at 12:35 of the first half when he made a diving stop to his right of a head shot by Fermino Naitza. Another header by Fermino, last four minutes later, got by Androzzi, but the referee called the goal and bouncing away.

In the second half, that saw Marist take 17 shots, Quinnipiac almost gave the Red Foxes the heartbreaker when Mike Morris sent the ball fullback pass to the goal Androzzi went away and raised just wide of the goals left corner.

"We didn't quite work hard enough," Goldman said after the game. "We were the better club, except we didn't prove it by winning. Sometimes, either you win or you lose, and we didn't win," said Goldman.

Four days earlier the profiles of the team's work were seen when the Red Foxes' winning streak reached five after they outscored all three goals in a 3-2 victory over St. Francis Community College September 12.

According to Goldman, the game was "physically tough," as both sides committed a total of 37 fouls.

Zenone's first score came at 9:37.

The team will enter two varsity eight, a women's pair, two four eights, and a varsity four at the Thomas Eckman Field of the Schuylkill Regatta in Philadelphia Saturday, Oct. 2.

The team has been using the new rowing boats in the McCann Center for the first time and Caldwell said they have been instrumental in teaching basics to freshmen and helping upperclassmen improve. He pointed specifically to Frank Ford and Anthony Lynch. The three rowed in the junior varsity boat last year but have moved up to the varsity eight since.

Men's Team Cut

Joe Ford, Butch Joseph, and Jim Palatucci, Anthony Lynch, Bo Mason, Frank Hildenbrand, Dave Schmidt, Dave Fein and coxswain Susie Dubatowka.

In the West Division where Tri-State and the Bearded Clams were in last with an 0-3 record, the Red Foxes are 2-1-1.

Heads were tied for third with 1-2 slates, Memory of Goober, Tool and the Soccer team with 11 goals three assists.
