CUB ends Suspension

The College Union Board ended its week-long suspension of activities last Monday, after an agreement concerning funding of the club football team was made with Dr. Antonio Perez, dean of students.

At a meeting on Monday, Perez gave President John Dowling and Treasurer Thomas McTernan extra time to come up with their share of $1,250 to help fund the club football team.

McTernan said the money would be raised from a concert to be given by a "major group" at the Mid-Hudson Civic Center sometime in March. He said the concert will be co-sponsored by an organization from Poughkeepsie, but declined to name either the co-sponsor or the group. He would not verify rumors that the group will be the J. Geils Band.

Both Dowling and McTernan said the suspension of activities was successful.

"We made our point," said McTernan. "We got support from various campus groups and from the student body. We felt that any hurt to students would be minimal.

According to SG Treasurer John Davoren, the SG will be required to pay $1,250 from its budget. The remainder of the $2,500 will come from the budget of the club football team.

"If the federal government doesn't feel a college is making enough of an effort to hire minorities, it can be subject to fines and loss of funds and as a last resort, can be forced to hire a member of a minority," said Perez.

It is the feeling of President Linus Voy that Marist is committed to affirmative action and that it is the law, but because it is the right thing to do.

Affirmative Action Committee policies will be followed when academics hire a new full-time faculty member.

The Communications Department received 35 applications for the job. Dr. Lan­ning said he would make his decision after a weekend of interviews.

The seven remaining applicants were interviewed on campus. The department then decided who they wanted for the job.

Abernathy talks on it

Twin towers of trays

By Wendy Stark & Maureen Tully

Dining Service Director Joseph Lurent doesn't know how to interpret a group of students protesting the food service.

"By stacking up trays the students only said that something was wrong with the food," Lurent told The Circle last Monday.

John VanderVort, Ratskeller manager, would not comment on the protest. He said that as a result of public pressure the food service have improved their quality.

He said the protest created extra work for cafeteria workers who had to clear away about 300 trays left on tables by protesters. Three dishroom workers resigned as a result of the extra work added.

Security Director Joseph Lambert, student security guards and dining service managers patrolled the cafeteria, while students stacked towers 14 trays high, and tapped drinking glasses with forks, knives and spoons.

Lambert, assistant director of student security personnel, was asked to be on duty at dinner time, when cafeteria officials heard "through the grapevine" of a possible student protest.

"Nothing is secret at Marist," said Lambert. "We had to have security guards in the cafeteria for the student's protection, but the guards had strict instruction to take action unless students became violent.

A source close to the situation said security guards took names of students actively participating in the demonstration, and Lambert said he had the names of five protesting students.

Lambert said he talked to two of the five students about the incidents. Waters however, denied knowledge of the names of students involved.

Lambert said he asked the two students for suggestions on improving the dining service, but emphasized that no disciplinary action would be taken against them.

A recent survey conducted by the College Republicans showed that only 46% of the students support the changes, while 51% are opposed. The survey was conducted by telephone and involved 500 students.

Unintended but real

This week's lead story in the CIRCLE concerns discrimination, a subject so timely as to seem almost trivial.

Discrimination is perhaps the most devastating thing a person can endure. In a free society, it is unacceptable.

It is estimated that discrimination against any group of people affects at least 50% of the population. How many families are affected? How many neighborhoods are non-discriminatory? Despite this, the effects of discrimination are all too common.

We are frequently confronted with the question of whether discrimination is a result of prejudice or a result of necessity. The answer is that both are true. Prejudice is a learned concept that is passed down from generation to generation. Necessity is a result of the economic, social, and political conditions of a society.

The effects of discrimination are far-reaching. They can cause a person to feel inferior, to be denied opportunities, and to be treated unfairly. Discrimination can also lead to violence and riots.

We must work to end discrimination in all its forms. This is not an easy task, but it is a necessary one. We must work to change the attitudes of people and to create a society that is truly free from discrimination.

Wasteful thoughts

At the College of Staten Island, a football field is seen as a place to grow instead of a place to waste. Students are not able to visit the dining hall or enter their dorms. These are common occurrences at the College of Staten Island. It is important that we work to change these conditions.

Hot potato

The passing of the hot potato bill in the Senate has created a great deal of controversy. The bill is designed to provide funding for the construction of a new football stadium. However, the cost of building the stadium will be borne by the students.

The students are not happy about this bill. They feel that they are being asked to pay for something that they do not want. They feel that the money should be used for other purposes, such as improving the quality of life on campus.

We must work to change the attitudes of people and to create a society that is truly free from discrimination. This is not an easy task, but it is a necessary one.

Zeneone Naitza scored two of the three Marist goals in the 3-2 double-overtime victory over the Germania Indoor Tournament champions at Dutchess CC. It was Marist's second straight tournament victory and third Marist goal after Dowling won the ECAC Indoor Tournament for the second straight year.

The Germania goalie was equal to the challenge, coming up big twice on Zenone and Firmino before Marist's midfielder got his second goal. The Red Foxes fell behind on a two-on-one opportunity by Zenone and Firmino Naitza before the half. At halftime, Marist led 1-0. The Germania goalie continued to excel but couldn't stop Zenone and Firmino Naitza from netting the game-winning goal in the second overtime period.

The Red Foxes were hit with 26 turnovers in the game, a huge number that the Germania goalie was equal to the challenge, coming up big twice on Zenone and Firmino before Marist's midfielder got his second goal.
