Security violations probed

By Dave Powers

Numerous violations of security officer's rules such as drinking on duty and leaving campus grounds are now being enforced, according to Director Joseph Waters, director of security.

The 10 mailboxes in Leo and Champagnat Halls, many of which were burglarized during the past three weeks, were noticed by thieves breaking glass viewing plates on the bottom of the mailboxes. Waters said he received several complaints about the mailboxes.

Theft of U.S. mail is a federal felony. The Circle was also told a student security officer was fired. The police report was made by Andy Neiner, a security supervisor.

More funding possible from Financial Board

By Maureen Jennings

Student organizations can review preliminary allocations and request additional funds from the Financial Board on Tuesday and Thursday, according to President John Leary.

The Financial Board allocated $25,000 this semester, a cut of $3,500 from last year. An estimated increase of between $5,000 and $6,000 is expected because of the breaking glass viewing plates on the pagnat Halls, only six of which contained money, but it is still undecided if this money will be returned next semester, Leary said.

Letters

Dear Editors:

I would like to comment on your editorial outlining the student security problem as a campus threat. I feel that the new policy represents an important step towards improving safety on campus, but I have some concerns about its implementation.

Firstly, the policy requires extra supervision and monitoring. While this is necessary, it may also lead to a decrease in the sense of freedom that students currently enjoy. There is a balance to be struck between safety and freedom. It is important to ensure that the new policy does not restrict student activities unduly.

Secondly, there is a risk of overreaction. In the past, the administration has sometimes taken a tough stance on matters of security. This has sometimes resulted in excessive punishment for minor offenses. The new policy should be applied with discretion to avoid such situations.

In conclusion, while I support the overall goal of improving security, I urge the administration to consider these concerns and take a balanced approach to implementing the new policy.

Sincerely,

Computer terminals moved, new service begins

By Clare Amico

The computer terminals that now share a room with the chemistry lab in Marist now reside in the second room on the first floor of Donnelly Hall.

One of the reasons for the move is the building and renovation of the second floor of Donnelly Hall, which will be open for student use 24 hours a day, and the space provides a more accessible location for students.

The terminals are currently in a room next to the computer room located on the first floor of Donnelly Hall, which is accessible from the computer room during hours when it is unlocked at night by a security guard.

There is an attempt to develop a new computer room according to computer monitor Harry Williams, who said that the room was not completed until the previous year.

The terminals are currently in use by students and are available for their use.

Other Marist finishers included Rich Schenkewitz, 23rd, and Marty Neville, 27th.

Jim Corbett releases pass under extreme pressure during Marist's 7-3 loss to St. John's.

St. John's stumbles past Marist 7-3

A young Marist team took their second loss of the season, Sunday against St. John's. The Red Foxes, finally coming alive on defense held the Redmen to only 215 yards while surrendering only one touchdown. "It was freshman mistakes that lost the game for us again," said head coach Mike Miel. "I really believe we were the better team," he continued. "No single player was beaten consistently, one guy was beaten on one play and another on the next. I still think we'll have a good team at the end of the season."

The Red Foxes gave up their only score midway through the first quarter. St. John's defensive back Frank Ferraro picked off a Marty Crapske pass and returned it to the Marist 24. St. John's run six plays that were capped by a 17 yard touchdown pass from Dave Whelly to wide receiver Tony Bopp; Warren Strauss at quarterback to try to put some life in the team by the end of the season."
