People sit cross-legged on the floor, as if in a circle. The lighting is low and the mood is somber.

A middle-aged man walks on stage. He tells the story of a 3-year-old boy, dying of leukemia, to an audience of veterans. The Vietnam veterans attribute his illness to Agent Orange, which the boy's father ingested. They say, "We want everyone to have a good time, but this concerns all of you. Anyone of you could be drafted and the government could treat you the same way."

There are many others at The Chance, in Poughkeepsie, who are members of the Vietnam Veterans of America. This organization, formed in 1978, sponsors events such as the one for 200 students to attend the Nov. 5 meeting. The Vietnam veterans attribute his illness to Agent Orange, a defoliant which contains dioxin, one of the most toxic substances known. Buryk said. Agent Orange was sprayed in Vietnam through 1970. Veterans exposed to Agent Orange suffer severe weight loss, migraines, headaches, nervousness, sleep disturbances, cancerous skin rashes, kidney disease, liver failure and sterility, according to Buryk.

"The government has admitted to the use of Agent Orange but the Veterans Administration refuses to accept its responsibility that the people contaminated have health problems that must be dealt with," Buryk said.

The Veterans Administration does offer Agent Orange screenings but these are not thorough enough, he said. "The VA won't do biopsies because if they did and found proof that a man was contaminated they would have to pay out millions of dollars in compensation which they and the government don't have. They say they haven't the time or the facilities," he said.

A thorough test would cost $250 per man plus hospitalization costs, he said. Everyone will be affected by the Agent Orange contamination, according to Buryk. "The men affected have to deal with the fact, he said, "but the contamination will not be passed on to generations."

The Vietnam veterans are running a campaign to increase public awareness of the dangers of Agent Orange. They are planning to increase public awareness in order to make sure that people realize about Agent Orange and that their government is going to do something about it.

Trustees approve ROTC; students also vote yes

by Eileen Hayes and Carl MacGowan

A Reserve Officer Training Corps program was approved by the board of trustees at last Monday's meeting.

In response to the disciplinary action that was involved in the event, LaMorte said that the advertising in the program was not the advertising implied that WMCR would not allow the bus to come on campus. LaMorte said that one person whom he did not know got up on the bus ride home and asked the students to take it easy when they got back on campus because the students would have to deal with the fact that they had to pay R.A. $5 an hour when they are normally paid $5.50 an hour.

LaMorte said that he was also concerned that the advertising implied that WMCR was involved in the event. Bob Weinman, general manager of WMCR, said, "It was a misunderstanding. Four individuals were involved."

LaMorte said that the event that WMCR was involved in was a marketing plan to attract students to the campus that night.

Off-campus party planners face penalty

by Rick O'Donnell

Disciplinary action has been taken against four students for failing to follow college norms. The result of their failure to follow college norms was a disciplinary action against four students for failing to follow the off-campus party at Cousin's in Hyde Park last Monday night.

The Rev. Richard LaMorte, assistant dean of student affairs, said that the disciplinary action was taken because the students were using improper advertising, soliciting on campus, and being over the quota for the number of students on the dean's list. LaMorte said that he would be forced to press the charges against the students.

Barnes, a resident of townhouse A-4, said, "We were just trying to have a good time, we were trying to do what we could enjoy everybody." He added that he felt it was not the fault of the students to prevent them from going to the party or to prevent them from going to the party. "It's the fault of the administration to prevent them from going to the party and from knowing that the students are not allowed to go to the party," he said.

Barnes added that the bus running from the event was going to be used to transport the students to the event and that they were going to be asked to stay on campus. "We wanted to have a party where we could enjoy everybody," he said.

Barnes said that the day after the flyers were distributed, the residents from the townhouse pulled up new flyers that did not suggest that students should get drunk. "We wanted to make sure that the students would always be able to go to campus and that it would always be open to them," he said.

Barnes said that the students were going to have a good time and that they were going to have a good time. "We wanted to have a fun time and we wanted to have a good time," he said.

To the Editor: When I came to Marist, I thought I would be an artist, and that I would be a place to test my theory of the best place to be. But after being here for almost a year, I realize that Marist has very different expectations for us all. We are expected to work hard, to be responsible, and to make the most of our time. It seems that the students here are truly committed to our studies and to our education. I have nothing but praise for the curriculum and the faculty. The only thing I would like to change is the dean's office. It is not very welcoming, and the staff is not very helpful. I hope that they will improve in the future.

Thank you,

Not WMCR

To the Editor: I would like to make one clear statement concerning the radio stations. WMCR and WMGR are both owned by the college, and yet the two stations do not cooperate. WMCR is a talk station, and WMGR is a rock station. Both stations have a large audience, and yet they do not work together. I think that this is a waste of resources, and I hope that the college will find a way to make the two stations work together.

Thank you,

Bernstein story

To the Editor: With the exception of great musicians like Bernstein, who have been praised and loved by millions, few classical composers are as well known and well liked by the general public. However, Bernstein is different. He is a composer who has written music that is both serious and accessible. His music is often compared to that of Mozart and Beethoven, but Bernstein is more modern and more experimental. He is a composer who is not afraid to take risks and to explore new ideas. His music is a reflection of his own life and his experiences. He is a composer who is not only a great musician, but also a great person. I think that he is a wonderful artist, and I hope that he continues to compose music for many more years.

State approves master's in computer science

By Mary Wall

The state of New Jersey recently approved Marist College's proposal for a master's degree program in computer science. The M.S. program is designed to provide advanced training in computer science and related fields. The program will be offered by the Marist College Computer Science Department, and it will be available to students who have completed a bachelor's degree in computer science or a related field.

The new computer science degree program will be a great asset to Marist. Students will be able to develop their skills in computer science and to gain valuable experience in real-world settings. The program will also provide opportunities for students to pursue research and to participate in hands-on projects. The program will be offered on a part-time basis, and it will be available in the evenings. The program will also be offered as a full-time program, and students can choose to attend classes on a part-time or full-time basis.

Division prepares proposal for advertising

by Nicole Whitbread

The Marist College faculty is currently considering a proposal for a major in advertising. A proposal for a major in advertising at Marist College was submitted to the Academic Affairs Committee, according to Mr. Andrew Molloy, Vice President for Academic Affairs. The proposal is now being considered by the Subcommittee on the Division of Management Studies in the Office of the President and by the Division of Communications, CU.

The proposal will be presented to faculty committees. If passed by the faculty, it goes to the state Department of Education for consideration.

The proposal is designed to meet the needs of the students interested in advertising and offers a mixture of advertising curricula, marketing, and communication arts, according to Mr. Piatt, chairman of the Division of Arts and Sciences.

The proposal will be tailored to the academic interests and occupational goals of the students, he adds. Mr. Piatt has said that the program will be approved if necessary.

The proposal includes a plan to develop a new major in advertising at Marist.

World hunger reflections

By Milton Teichman

1. To be human seems to be responsible for ending hunger. Hunger has everything to do with what one is.

2. I don't want to place any responsibility in burden or as guilt — but as the source of the quality of life on this planet.

3. My desire is to get in touch with that part of me which relates to world hunger. I am an American, but I want to be a citizen of the planet earth.

4. How a real sense, there's nobody out there. Everybody is it.

5. Despite all visions which say that ordinary individuals can make a difference, I say that ordinary individuals

Communication problems hinder SAC efforts

By Andrea Holland

The Marist College Student Academic Committee (SAC) is experiencing communication problems with faculty and students according to Dawn-Joy Oliver, committee member.

"The SAC's biggest problem is the lack of communication between the faculty and students," Oliver said.

"The SAC is the student voice of the college," she said. "The SAC needs to be able to express itself and to express the voices of the students."

"The faculty does not always communicate with the SAC in a timely manner," Oliver said.

"Communication problems between the SAC and faculty members are common," she said.

"The SAC is the only way for students to express themselves," Oliver said.

"The SAC needs to improve communication with the faculty," she said.

"The SAC should communicate more often," Oliver said.

"The SAC needs to be more visible on campus," she said.

"The SAC should be more involved in campus activities," Oliver said.

The Third World countries have the capability to change international relations and what the world economy, according to his talk, which was made by a group of ninety students last week at Marist.

"The main growing areas for a revolution in the Third World will be in Latin America and Asia, and global relationships do not lie in the advanced industrial countries, but in the Third World countries, because they are oppressed and exploited and has been for a long time," said Mr. Thomas, a graduate student of political science professor at Vassar College.

Soccer team wins twice, ups record to 12-5

The Marist College football team will face Albany this Saturday in Albany. The win, which was Marist's last home victory in the Statesman Ti-Sent Conference game, raised the team's record to 12-5. The Red Foxes are still ranked seventh in New York.

The scoring started fairly early when Peter Nargi booted the ball at the 3:40 mark with a pass from Wayne Cargill. Manhattan came back at the 12:02 point as Leo Demello scored right in front of the goal on a pass from Carlos Lopez. Manhattan kept up the pressure and at 3:36 Demello scored once again. This time, on a header assisted by John Parken.

The second half opened as a defensive war between the teams. Both teams' drives were stopped by the solid defense of both. However, at the 23:43 point Demello scored his third goal of the day when he ran in a routine kick back to the goalkeeper and easily booted it in.

After this goal, it was Marist's game for the rest of the day. At 31:15 Mark Adams punted the ball to Cargill, who then outfaked the Manhattan goalkeeper and eased the ball in.

Sporred on by the crowd's enthusiasm, the Red Foxes took charge, and by the 38:42 mark they had tied things up when Cargill lifted the ball over the goalkeeper's head with an assist by John Hintze.

The first half of overtime saw both teams batting for scoring opportunities to no avail.

The second half of overtime started much as the first; both teams playing aggressively for possession, so much so that a Manhattan player and Marist's Tito Diaz were given red cards. This aggressive play worked against Manhattan because with 2:43 left to play in overtime, Mark Adams scored on a penalty kick to give Marist the winning goal, the last one for the season.

In previous action last week Marist defeated Union 9-3. Cargill scored the hat trick, Adams had two goals, while Tony Udachi, Tim Buchanan, Mike Tertullian, and Diaz had one goal each.
