Townhouse water supply problems persist

by Paul Crowell and Jodi Gayton

The water supply problems, which have delayed the completion of the $2.5 million Townhouse project for a year, remain unresolved as a result of a conflict between the Town of Poughkeepsie and the Dutchess County Department of Health, according to Town Supervisor Ann Buchholz.

The conflict stems from a 1978 Health Department-imposed moratorium on the addition of new connections to the City of Poughkeepsie's water supply.

The Town of Poughkeepsie buys its water from the surplus created by the City's water supply. According to Jack Hill, of the Dutchess County Department of Health, the Town is currently consuming the entire surplus.

Hill said that for the moratorium to be lifted, the Town of Poughkeepsie would have to come up with an on-line supplementary water system.

Buchholz said, "We've developed a system which will provide 1.7 million gallons a day over a three week period." She added, "It's beyond the planning stage and any water supply problems with new construction at Marist (which is located in the Town) are not of our making."

The Town's supplementary project has already been approved by the Environmental Conservation Agency and according to Buchholz an application has been placed with the New York State Division of Audit and Control. The application is for permission to spend the money on the project which will eventually be financed by a bond issue.

If the Health Department not lift the moratorium, Marist could be forced to drill its own wells at a cost of over $50,000, according to Edward Waters, vice president of administration and finance.

Hill would not say exactly what factors were being considered in the Health Department's decision. He did say that the Division of Audit and Control's decision would affect the "timing" of the Health Department's decision.

The decision of whether or not to lift the Health Department's "no new connections policy" should come within a month, according to Hill. Marist officials said that if the decision does not come by early April, the scheduled July completion date for the townhouses will not be met.

If Marist is forced to dig its own wells, a licensed water plant operator will have to be hired to test the water and maintain daily records, according to Waters. "If later we get the permission to use the town water, we will have wasted a lot of money and our efforts will be pointless," Waters said.

Dr. John Zuane, superintendent of the Poughkeepsie Public Water Works, said that the moratorium should be lifted. "It is my personal opinion that the moratorium will be lifted because of the Town's on-line supplementary system," Dr. Zuane said.

Marist had been granted water use from the Town in August for fire protection use only. The Health Department's decision will determine whether drinking water for the townhouses will be supplied by the town or from wells.

Waters expressed dissatisfaction with the situation. "Marist is a community-oriented college. We have been involved in all kinds of activities with the community and we're being had," he said.

Marist mourns classmate's death

If people have trademarks, Richard Berger's was his wink.

"He'd make a comment, then he's wink, meaning, 'I'm just kidding; you know I can't mean this.'" remembered Berger's friend, Tim Sullivan. "I guess it was a sign of love."

Berger, 19, died Friday after being shot in the head during a robbery at a Long Island gas station. Berger was a sophomore at Marist.

Last Monday students gathered in the Marist Chapel for a prayer service held in his honor. A list of students drove to Long Island that morning. A Mass was offered the previous Monday. More than 300 students and Marist community members filled the pew.

When I heard about it, I was shattered. I didn't want to believe it. It's not right," said Mike Sciannamea, a fraternity brother and friend.

Dave President of Sigma Phi Epsilon Glenn Berger said of his friend's death, "Things in life just aren't fair, and there's not much you can do about it. I'm gonna miss him a lot."

Berger was the vice president of Sigma Phi Epsilon. "He was very enthusiastic about the fraternity. His heart was in it," Berger recalled. "He spent a lot of time on fraternity matters."

When Sciannamea was pledging the fraternity, Berger was a pledge educator.

"He made me feel really comfortable because I didn't know anybody here," Sciannamea said. "He was sort of my guiding light for awhile."

Richard Berger's ongoing and friendly nature became known to many. "He was very friendly," said Sullivan. "Sometimes we'd sit in the coffee shop in Donnelly. When people were sitting by themselves, he'd ask them to come join us."

Berger's Little Sister in the fraternity, Karen Flood, a Golden Hearts member, said, "There was something special about Rich. If you could really feel at ease with him and laugh, talk and have a good time."

Sullivan and the Rev. Richard LaMorte recalled Berger's search for a personal knowledge of God.

"On several occasions, he came up to me and attacked me with questions. He's get really intense," Sullivan remembered. "I believe some good will come out of this."

Berger was his wink. "I believe some good will come out of this," Sullivan predicted. "People have become closer. Deep underneath, people love each other."

"If you want to tell someone you love them, you better tell them," added Sullivan.

El Salvadorans respected their right to choose a leader enough to march over miles of dusty roads just to vote for a 60-member assembly. This is because not voting is an act of protest. This is a defenseless group of Marist students. This obstacle may be encountered by the students of Marist in the future.

The upcoming elections offer every student the opportunity to vote. They should do so, for themselves, not the candidates.

We are asked to believe that his decision was for the good of the system. "If they have to use a point system, then some students who are good students will get a bad deal even if they get good grades. They don't have enough points," said Craig Harrigan, a freshman, agrees with her. "I think it's unfair to people who are good students."

The role of college leadership is so often important that the students of Marist do indeed cast a vote for the candidate that major workcamp or for the student government will begin. Norton's fulfillsations

The faculty I know personally are responsible, but they are not always good teachers. It's important to consider the quality of teaching and the effectiveness of the courses offered. Norton's contributions are predominantly people who are members of this faculty for several years; I have yet to meet a member of this faculty who is not a member of the faculty. Dear Friends of March—All,

After considerably less of an appraisal, I hope you were as satisfied as I was about the public speaking experience I had the pleasure of enjoying. As the program continued, and I listened to the various speakers, I was left with the feeling of genuine amusement at the February—because of the people who were not for them and they should be against them. The feeling was that the idea was too stupid to even think about. This experience has brought to my mind the idea of public speaking. I have noticed a few instances of public speaking, where I felt a sense of satisfaction about the idea of public speaking. I have noticed a few instances of public speaking, where I felt a sense of satisfaction about the idea of public speaking.

The impact of November, most of the major points of view were kept up in their minds, even though there were a few dissenters, they were kept in mind. This is not the case in public speaking.
