A proposal that the Pub become non-alcoholic two days per week has been accepted and will become effective tonight, according to John Cummins, manager of the Pub.

Tuesdays and Thursdays have been selected to be the non-alcoholic days in the Pub, according to Cummins.

The idea was proposed by Gerard A. Cox, dean of student affairs, earlier this semester in order to provide a place for those Marist students who are new to young to drink legally to socialize. The proposal, according to Cox, was accepted Feb. 21 by the administration.

"The purpose of making the pub non-alcoholic was not only for those under 18 but to have a place where all students would be able to socialize without a bar atmosphere," said Cox.

The Coffee House, usually held in Firstside Lounge on Thursday nights, will be moved downstairs to the Pub for entertainment on Tuesday nights, according to Cummins.

"This non-alcoholic days in the pub is a good idea. It gives the entire campus a place to socialize during the week," said Cummins.

Members of the Council of Student Leaders said they were upset that they had no input in the decision-making process.

"It is encouraging to see that the administration is providing alternative social events for students under 19," said senior class president, Ted Percansky. "However, there are many other possible places for such events. I feel that student governments should have had some input in the matter, at least been notified. This policy change is a surprise to me!"

Commute University President Greg Lota said, "I am not opposed to non-alcoholic events on campus, or in the Pub for that matter. I do object to the way in which this policy was implemented and that the administration should have included more of the campus on the decision. Perhaps re-evaluation of their procedure should be considered."

J. B. Fleming, president of the Non-Traditional Student Organization, agreed, "It seems to me that the administration would have had the courtesy to at least consider the Council of Student Leaders. It would appear to me that the administration has no regard for our positions as campus leaders, or as students capable of making a valuable contribution to school policy," Fleming said.

When asked why the Council of Student Leaders was not officially notified on the approval of the policy, Cox, said, "I planned to inform them at the Jan. 21 C.S.S.L. meeting; however, the agenda was rather lengthy, and I never got the opportunity."

Coordinator of College Activities Betty Yeaglin, who had input in the decision-making process, according to Cox, was apparently not in attendance this week's announcement. However, the announcement did not appear. Yeaglin refused to comment on the subject.

Other members of the student body also expressed dissatisfaction with the administration's decision. Some of those who can drink consisted that they are being penalized because they will have to go off campus on the non-alcoholic Pub days. The Pub is the only place on campus that serves alcohol.

Resident Assistant Dawn Surratt said, "I agree that there should be a place provided for people to congregate without alcohol, but it should be somewhere other than the Pub. I think that there will be very little business down there on Tuesdays and Thursdays."

Students who are under the age of 19 and not able to drink legally appeared to have mixed feelings about the Pub change. Freshman Edward Flynn said it might be a good idea because under-age students are turned away at alcoholic events, so the Pub would be unable to mingle and spend sometime in an area where they are usually not allowed.

Andrew Crecca, president of the freshmen class, said, "I am glad to see an effort being made to accommodate freshmen; however, I don't understand why the Pub is a long-term answer. There should be a permanent place where people can socialize all week long."

When asked whether the administration planned on using the Pub permanently as a site for non-alcoholic events, Cox said, "It is not the final answer. It is just until we set up a permanent area, which involves construction and money."

Pub: No more alcohol on Tuesdays, Thursdays

by Lou Ann Seelig

In order to use Marist's limited classroom space more efficiently, time-table scheduling will be changed next semester, according to Academic Vice President Richard Molloy.

Under the new schedule, the semester will have five minutes longer than they are now, and an extra time-table will be added that runs during the dinner hour.

Currently there is a break between the end of day classes at 4:50, and the beginning of night classes at 5:40. The new schedule includes a 5 to 6:20 p.m. class.

Also for next semester is a change in the academic calendar. Dr. Elizabeth Ross, registrar, said she is currently working on a calendar that will include: one that runs Tuesdays from 8 to 9:20 a.m. Classes that meet three times a week will meet for 55 minutes each time, and there will still be 10 minutes between classes, Smith said.

The addition of five minutes to each class period is "arbitrary in that we are above the minimum," said Molloy. The extra minutes will insulate a class period that the college will meet the state requirements.

In addition to the 5 p.m. time-table, other new times-table include: one that runs Tuesdays from 8 to 9:20 a.m. and Thursdays from 9:30 to 10:50 a.m.; two that run three times a week on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays; and another also runs from 8 to 9:20 a.m. on Wednesdays and Fridays.

Also scheduled for free-slots on Thursdays from 11 a.m. to 12:20 p.m.

The Student Affairs Office made another decision for the students this past week. This time the decision was dealing with dorm rooms in the new complex. It is safe to say that this was not the decision that anyone was looking for.

The decision to change the configuration of the dorm rooms was not something that was taken lightly by the Student Affairs Office. Several factors were considered in making this decision, including the need for more space, the desire to create a more open and comfortable environment, and the need to comply with fire safety regulations.

However, the decision was met with a great deal of resistance from the students. Many students felt that the decision was unfair and that it took away from the sense of community that they had come to expect. The decision also raised questions about the role of the Student Affairs Office in decision-making processes.

The decision has also raised concerns about the impact on the new complex. Students had been looking forward to moving into the new rooms, and the change in configuration has caused a great deal of frustration.

The Student Affairs Office has stated that they will continue to work with the students to find a solution that works for everyone. However, the students have been quick to point out that they do not feel that their voices have been heard.

What does it mean?

When the administration cracked down on students, they were reacting to a perceived increase in vandalism. However, the administration's actions have been met with resistance and frustration from the students.

Heat problems blamed on building structure

The lack of heat in cheer pages is a dual problem caused by the structure of the building and the actions of the heating fuel. The south side of the building is not well heated, and the heating system is not sufficient for the needs of the building.

In response to the request began to take place in the college's graduate admissions for Marist. This is a way to inform the people in the college that they must have a heating system that is not too cold.

Red Foxes roll over FDU at home, 76-72

by Joe Didziulis

Steve Smith scored his 2000th career point and Marist Red Foxes raised their ECAC Metro conference record to 6-6 in a 76-72 win over Fairleigh Dickinson at the McCann Center. The win was Marist's third in a row and the fourth win in its last five games.

Smith led Marist in scoring with 21 points while Tom Meekins added 17. Bruce Johnson, who entered the game with 19 points for the season, broke 2,000 career points in the evening.

Steve Smith, the first Fox to hit the mark for 2,000 career points, scored his 2,000th point midway through the first half and caused the Red Foxes to rally from a 10-point deficit to win the game.

In the second half, Smith led Marist to victory with 14 points, including a three-point shot with 1:35 left to play in the game. He finished the game with 23 points, the highest total of the season.

Steve Smith's achievement was recognized by coach Tom Petro, who presented him with the Dunkin Donuts Dunk Award for the 2,000th point milestone.

The win continued Marist's recent success in the conference, and the Red Foxes are now looking forward to their next game against another strong opponent.
