Galant is target of hearing by judicial board
by Donna Piper

The residents of the new freshman dorm have petitioned Marist to protest what they say is a lack of cleanliness in their dorm.

The biggest complaint is that the dorm is never emptied, there are three bags full of garbage at one point. We're always running out of toilet paper, and there's black scum on the shower stalls," said transfer student Maureen Kelly. "I can tell you that there was a gray film in the sinks for two days, at a time, proving that maintenance did not come in daily to clean.

Edward Waters, vice president of administration and finance, said: "It is believed that the main problem was a result of work being done to fill the facility. "We would have liked to have had everything perfect when the students moved in, but it just didn't have the time," Waters said. "The dorm, cleaned in the process, problems came up.

Residents of the new dorm had trouble finding someone to help them with their complaints, so they drew up a petition that was signed by everyone in the dorm.

"The dorm just opened; in the days at a time, proving that maintenance did not come in daily to clean."

According to the residents of the new dorm, the complaints have not been taken action, but a hearing might be held in the next few weeks. Dougherty refused to elaborate further.

Dean of Student Affairs Gerald A. Cox said the board is trying to get to some of the questions they have raised.

The Judicial Board is a seven-member board, which administers all hearings pertaining to students. Two members are elected to office, while three others are appointed by the CSL. These five members are students. The final two members are appointed for the faculty and administrative assistants.

Article 4, section 6 of the student constitution states that "The (Judicial) Board has jurisdiction over cases involving student governance, such as the removal of student of- ficers...."

A random incident involved a party given prior to this semester by Galant and Dirt Pit Manor, an unofficial student group, which was held at Butterfield's on South Avenue in Poughkeepsie.

"Galant said the party had no connection with Marist or the student government. He said Dirt Pit Manor made a profit from the venture. "We never intended to make a profit," said Galant, "but they didn't win back in one way or another."

However, I've never sought an involvement with their own local churches, and we can call upon — local churches, Protestants, Jesuits, Dutchess County Interfaith Council, and no problem we couldn't arrange for that," according to Sr. Eileen Halloran, Catholic chaplain. "A 'paper work foul-up' in the Financial Board has caused a Protestant chaplain to be held up. Freidland's replacement has not been selected in relation to the protestant chaplain. If the protestant chaplain is not selected, the protestant chaplain will have no job."

As Galanti pointed out, the protestant chaplain will have no job. This is the first year, however, that Marist has had a Jewish chaplain. The duties of a Jewish chaplain include the following:

New video system introduced on campus

by Paul Bechler

A new medium which utilizes the properties of video and computer technology is currently being tested on the campus and the response has been two-fold — excitement and trepidation.

According to Richard Steinberg, director of media and information technology, the video is able to control a video tape with a IBM personal computer. "The system can be used as a hard drive. This means you can make it a hard drive to any computer," Steinberg said.

The computer system which operates in conjunction with the video will allow students and faculty members to interact. "The program can be designed to interact with the video tape," Steinberg continued. "For example, students can watch modules of video, view the screen, view the tape, and the computer can respond to that."

"The system should be used as an addition to the student," Steinberg said. "The computer can't replace the video tape in many cases.

This system is a way of learning. We can use it in the classroom, in libraries, and in department meetings. This system will provide a way for students to interact with each other and with the computer, which will increase the learning experience."

"The system itself is not a goal, but a tool that can be used to enhance learning," Steinberg added.

Marist grad program sees increase

by Moira Medina

While undergraduate students continue to work for 10 hours every week at this time of the year, the American Jewish college's graduate program is in the planning stages for some future marking.

From cafeteria workers to football squad would be allowed an inconvenience to her, voided didn't tryout, and another girl at the last minute decided not to go for the basketball squad.

Roughly fifty students enroll in the college writing program each year at Idaho State University. While the program is done in a meaningful way, the focus is on writing and composition at Idaho State University. The program is designed to help students improve their writing skills and to provide them with the opportunity to learn about the writing process.

Football team trounced, 27-7

The early ones were the only ones for the football team as seven early Marist points were followed by 27 for St. John's in last Saturday's loss to the Redmen in Jamaica, N.Y. The defeat put Marist's record at 1-1.

The Red Foxes' defense, aided by St. John's turnovers, kept the game close until two fourth-quarter touchdowns by an overpowering Redmen offense secured the 27-7 victory and kept St. John's unbeaten at 3-0.

The Marist squad will be at home this Saturday against Pace at 1:30 p.m. in this year's homecoming game. Marist defeated the Foxes 27-20 in last year's matching at home.

The Redmen were held to just 10 first-half points even though their 158 offensive yards nearly doubled the Foxes' 79. Marist recovered two fumbles and senior defensive back John O'Leary intercepted two passes in the second quarter to help limit the scoring.

But the powerful Redmen offense continued to wear down the defense into the second half, advancing the ball 332 yards through the final two periods for a total of 490.

"I think the defense played great, it just played too much," said Brian Sewing, a defensive lineman. "They've got a good offense, though. We did the best we could with what we had..."

Todd Jamison, St. John's All-America quarterback, could complete only 10 of 20 first-half passes but paced his team finding receivers for 9 of 13 throws in the second half. He ended the game with 217 passing yards.

Redmen running back Dennis Bilgen had a good outing against the Red Fox defense as well, running for 146 yards on 26 carries.

Marist took the lead just one and a half minutes into the game after Chip Shepard recovered St. John's fumble of the opening kickoff on the Redmen 21-yard line. Marist was on the one several plays later, and Roy Watterson ran the yard to put the Foxes on top 7-0.

Then, in the third quarter and with the score unchanged, Marist got the ball on the St. John's six, first down and six yards to go for a touchdown.

Marist's lead held until the second quarter, when Nick Cara ran in from the seven-yard line. A field goal put the Redmen up 10-7 four minutes later.

The injury forced the Redmen to rely less on their quarterback's running ability. "Jamison stayed in the pocket, we were expecting him to run more," said Marist defensive end Timothy Dunn. "Instead, he handed off. They ran a lot more sweeps than we expected."

Despite the team's poor performance so far this season, first-year coach Valerie Cally is optimistic about the season. "This is only the third week of practice and I've already seen improvement," Cally said. "I expect more improvement from the team.

There are only two returning starters from last year's team, according to Cally. She said the team is "just learning to play as a cohesive unit".

It is a young team; with only two seniors: Hillary Palczewski and Kathy O'Connor. "The team has a lot of potential, but we're not near realizing it yet," Cally said. "We are getting a little better each game.

The key to improvement, according to Cally, is "the intangible thing of six bodies playing in unison."

Cally admitted that the competition this year would be more difficult because the team moved from Division B to Division A in the Hudson Valley Women's Conference. The team won the championship in Division B last year.

After Tuesday's match at Army, the team travels to Manhattanville College at Purchase, N.Y., on Saturday.
