River Day party sent off campus by Laverne C. Williams

For the first time in recent years, college officials forced River Day party off campus as students marked the unofficial holiday last Monday with the traditional morning wake-up call, drinking and revelry.

The event, traditionally held in the spring, occurred in the fall this year because of the upcoming in the New York state drinking age from 19 to 21, according to seniors at the north end.

Approximately 150 students with 11 a.m. last Monday until they were asked to leave by campus security, according to Joseph Waters, director of security.

Police Department, where students were able to pick up their keys with proper receipts, Waters said.

Students transported the kegs to a field at the Veterans of Foreign War post on Parker Avenue and Route 90 in Poughkeepsie, where the party ended at 6:30 p.m., according to Waters.

Water's unauthorized use of college's van system to take some students back to campus.

Unlike some recent River Days, there were no serious injuries or little damage to campus, except for one broken window in the Hall.

There have been no arrests in connection with this year's River Day.

In 1983, drinking age in New York was 19 to 21, according to senior Ken North railroad police and turned over the to the Town of Poughkeepsie

Alcohol policy due; Nov. 15 deadline set by Donald R. Godwin

With New York State's legal drinking age increasing to 21 in little over a month, Marist College has formed a committee to determine an alcohol policy for drinking on campus once the change takes place.

The new Alcohol Policy Committee comprises college administrators and student leaders, according to Susan Ryan, student body president. The committee's goal is to make a proposal to the administration regarding an alcohol policy to be effective Dec. 1, the date the law takes effect throughout the state.

The committee has a deadline date of Nov. 15 to reach a final proposal concerning the policy, fractions resulting in the punishment were: failure to register the party with housing; charging admission at the door; the presence of a minor at the party; and the inappropriate behavior of a student towards housing officials outside the front door of the townhouse.

Residents of the townhouse said they disagree with some of the alleged infractions. The students said they had a verbal agreement with North End Residence Director Marguerite Pakozdi to have the party. Pakozdi refused to comment.

The students also challenged the alleged infraction involving the minor. "The handbook cites the infraction as serving a minor. We had a minor present at the party, but he wasn't drinking," said Ryan.

The Marist administration announced it would deliver its final salary offer in the negotiations for a new contract with the administration. The administration, according to Robert Carney, C-7 resident, said the last offer was made to the negotiating team.

Marist said the contract was in agreement with the administration. The contract was not signed, but the negotiations were terminated.

The administration had been talking about the negotiations for the last offer for a year. Marist had been making offers for a new contract for the administration for five years. The negotiations had been going on for five years.

A token gesture

"Convocation Day" the students asked. "Was there a Convocation Day last week? We didn't notice anything."

But my wife and I have to differ. We were not the only ones who were not aware of Convocation Day last week. Students on campus as well as those who were not had not noticed anything. But most of those who were not aware couldn't be bothered to listen to the North Shore News or the local radio station of Oct 15" as required for students who wanted to come.

What kind of a gesture is this? Convocation Day did not reopen until Wednesday noon, about three hours after Convocation Day and then special lunch passes were issued to the students.

Another gesture was made by Oct. 15" as required for students who wanted to come. Ronna Gossett in the Local History Room in the Marist College Library.

Now that vacations are over, it's time to catch-up-with-the-weekend. The weekend is a time of leisure and joy, of relaxation and adventure. It's a time to pursue our hobbies and interests, to socialize and to enjoy ourselves. It's a time to recharge our batteries and to prepare ourselves for the week ahead.

Ah, the weekend. A time of freedom and relaxation, a time to let loose and enjoy ourselves.

But what if you're not sure what is available, much less what you're interested in? There are so many options, it can be overwhelming.

That's why I recommend you try something new, to explore new hobbies and interests. It doesn't have to be difficult or expensive.

Marist and the new drinking law

by Chris DeSante

The new alcohol beverage law has created a lot of controversy on the campus.

There have been a few problems, specifically, that have arisen due to the new law, but overall, the students seem to be adjusting to the new regulations.

The second reason for my belief that the changes will be a non-alcoholic event was that the Board has sponsored many non-alcoholic events in the past. In the past, the Board has hosted non-alcoholic events, and the students seem to enjoy them.

For some, college is the first time they have been exposed to non-alcoholic events. For others, it is a new experience. But for everyone, it is a positive change.

So, let's celebrate this new beginning.

Life of a freshman

by Andrea Klein

Freshman life is radically different than anything I've experienced before. It is hard to imagine what my life will be like in the future, but I feel that life here at Marist is on an emotional level and it is hard to describe those terms.

How will I ever figure out how I did? As Dr. Kutzner said in her Convocation address, "we are all students of life."

Halloween '85: Originality is in

by Fred Dover

Today is the day when make-believe personalities come alive. The art of dressing up relies on the lenient way in which the art of costume creation is treated. The costume store on Main Street in Poughkeepsie, may not resemble a costume store but according to volunteer Alice Kaba, all the necessary ingredients are available for those wishing to use formal and odd clothing that can create great Halloween creations.

Various stores in the Poughkeepsie area accommodate the new breed of creative costume buyer. The shop on Main Street in Poughkeepsie, may not resemble a costume store but according to volunteer Alice Kaba, all the necessary ingredients are available for those wishing to use formal and odd clothing that can create great Halloween creations.

Kaba said, “Although the thrift store sells the traditional types of children's costumes, Kaba says these are not as popular as those becoming more sales because, they are not buying their children facemasks,” she said.

Kaba said she felt purchasing a pre-made costume was not as much fun because an originality or imagination is involved. “You can dress your kid in a popular movie character instead of Strawberry Shortcake, and it’ll be just as much fun with the same level of music for less money but no originality or imagination is involved.”

Another costume store on Main Street is the M&M costume store. This store has a large selection of costumes for sale, including those for children.

M and M carries a full line of costumes for men and women. This store also carries vintage clothing that can be used as costumes.

Speaker: Apartheid hits closer

by Brian O'Shea

The demonstration is being held on the!? campus, as a major protest against the apartheid policies of the South African government. The rally is scheduled to begin at 11 a.m. on the main Quad, and is expected to draw thousands of students and community members.

The atmosphere at the rally was tense, with signs and banners expressing support for the anti-apartheid movement. Many participants carried red, black, and green flags, the colors of the Pan-Africanist Congress, and chanted slogans against apartheid.

The rally featured speeches by prominent anti-apartheid activists, including President Nelson Mandela of the African National Congress (ANC), who delivered a powerful address denouncing the violence and repression of the South African government.

Mandela, who was imprisoned for 27 years under apartheid, called on the international community to impose sanctions against South Africa until the release of political prisoners and the end of apartheid. He also urged South Africans to continue their struggle for freedom and equality.

The rally ended with a march through the campus, where participants made their voices heard through loudspeakers and banners. The march concluded at the main Quad, where a final rally was held to encourage continued action against apartheid.

The demonstration was one of many across the country, as South Africans and their supporters around the world continue to fight for justice and equality.

The game against the St. John's Red Storm was another exciting one, with both teams putting up a good fight. The Marist College men's basketball team emerged victorious, with a final score of 81-76.

The team will continue their preparations for the upcoming season, with hopes of bringing home another championship title. Stay tuned for updates on their next match!
Football team logs 5th shutout; plays Pace Sat.

by Dan Piatrafesa

After Siena became the fifth shutout victim of the Marist defense, the football team will seek to turn the lights on against Pace University in the final home game of the season on Saturday.

Marist will be entering the game with a 5-2 record coming off a 20-0 loss against Rensselaer. The victory secured Marist its first winning season since 1976.

The Setter season also included a tough 30-27 defeat at the hands of the top ten ranked Merchant Marine Academy.

Setting Head Coach George Maier will bring a revamped offensive game to the table. In addition to quarterback Kevin Entelis, who has thrown for 10 touchdowns and four touchdowns so far this season, Rich Johnson and Rob Fenrenbach are expected to do their part.

The receiving team with 332 and 213 yards respectively, Senior Bruce Kenison leads the running attack with 427 yards on 142 carries.

The Marist offense may not have some problems establishing a running game, but the Setters are only allowing 723 yards rushing in their first seven games. The defense is led by Rich Middlebrook who has 72 tackles and 7.5 sacks to his credit.

In last week's 20-0 victory at Pace University, their first seven games. The defense is led by Rich Middlebrook who has 72 tackles and 7.5 sacks to his credit.

The Foxes will be sure to make the news if they upset the defending National Champions as they look to keep the ball out of the Marist hands.

Winning first place trophies in Invitational singles play were Jodie Stephenson, Allison Block, Paula Stinson and Laura Murray. The doubles teams of Stephenson-Stinson, Block-Shelley Bradford, and Murray-Beth Ana Saunders also took first place trophies in the tournament.

In team play, the Foxes, en route to first place, defeated the University of Notre Dame 6-1.

The Number One player, SUNY Purchase and Quinnipiac prior to the tournament.

The Foxes defeated the Marist champions in the first quarter on a 19-yard power sweep to the right side by Christensen. Late in the first quarter, Christensen led Siena's 37-yard power sweep to the left side.

The Marist defense was effective in stopping the powerful running attack of Siena. The defense was led by Larry Caranusa who recorded a safety in the third quarter, and Franklin Davis who had two interceptions. Davis also booted a 63-yard punt, breaking the previous school record of 62 yards.

The trip to Pace University will be a test for the Marist defense, which has given up 14 touchdowns in the first seven games. The defense is led by Rich Middlebrook who has 72 tackles and 7.5 sacks to his credit.
