Two assaults within ten days disrupt campus

By The Staff

Two Marist women were assaulted in the area of Champagnat Hall within the last ten days, according to Joseph Waters, director of Marist security.

The first assault occurred March 19 near the carport door leading from the rear parking lot to the basement; the second occurred in a stairwell on Monday near the elevator.

Both victims received minor cuts and cuts and there was no evidence of sexual abuse in either case, according to Joseph Waters, director of Marist security.

In reaction to the assaults, some Champagnat residents have asked their parents to make plans so that they can arrive at Marist around April 15. "I think it's up to the students to be aware of what's going on on campus and it doesn't happen again," said Maria Hoss, a sophomore from Dix Hills.

"It takes this school so long to do something when confronted with situations like this," said Joseph Waters, director of Marist security.

Marist College President Dennis Murray announced a plan to reorganize the college's executive administration. The decision to restructure was prompted by the Board of Trustees in light of the current and anticipated growth of Marist College.

And according to the Registrar's Office, the new system is an attempt to improve the current registration system, which Murray feels is currently inefficient.

The new system will face new registration procedures next year for the fall semester and will have to pay a late fee on the first day of class.

The case of the derelict door almost closed

by John E. Murray

It looks no different from the other. A simple door with a lock on the other side, a thumbturn on the other. But you can't get through the door, however, you may never get through the door.

The occupants of Room 607/608 downstairs, the door to the right of the elevators, has a rather difficult problem. The door in the room has been replaced with a new one, apparently, because the old one was damaged. The new one is located on the other side of the room, and the old one is located opposite the new one.

The problem is that the new one is locked in the „Do not enter“ position, and the old one is locked in the „Open“ position. The occupants of the room are unable to enter or exit the room, and the problem has been reported to the maintenance department.

The maintenance department has been notified, and they are scheduled to arrive sometime later today to resolve the issue. The occupants of the room are considering other options, such as using a spare key or calling a locksmith, but they are currently unable to enter or exit the room.

Disarming ideas

By Ronald Reagan

For years now, the press has been asking, "Is President Reagan going to make a move to disarm the nuclear arsenal?"

The answer is yes. I think it's important to get the public's support for disarmament. I think it's important to get the support of our friends and allies around the world.

It's important to understand that disarmament is not just about reducing weapons. It's about changing the whole nature of our relationship with the Soviet Union.

We've been working on this for a long time. We've been talking about it for a long time. We've been negotiating about it for a long time.

And now, I think it's time to take the next step. I think it's time to lay out a clear, comprehensive plan for reducing our nuclear arsenals.

We need to do more than just talk about it. We need to take action. We need to make progress.

In the next few weeks, I'll be making a major announcement about our plans for disarmament. I'll be joined by our friends and allies from around the world.

We'll be announcing a new strategy for reducing our nuclear arsenals. We'll be announcing new initiatives to reduce arms transfers. We'll be announcing new ways to cooperate on non-proliferation.

I'm confident that we can achieve meaningful progress in the months and years ahead. I'm confident that we can make the world safer for all of us.

Thank you for your support. I look forward to working with you to achieve a safer, more secure world.

Ronald Reagan

Looking for Mr. Good Pizza

Pizza stones serve alumna and non-graduates in Gregory House last week.

by Michael Rezovsk

For Marist College Regional Photographers, the time was 11:59 a.m. on Friday, March 29. After the final bell at the school, the students and faculty members who had entered the contest were left to choose which of the many Pizza Stones served in the Gregory House snack bar on Monday last week.

Contests of the type that were held around this time of the year were a feature of Marist College history. In fact, they are still held in the Marist College Library today. The contest consisted of writing a short story of no more than 100 words on the topic of "What is the best pizza in the world?" and submitting it to the staff of the Marist College Library.

$5. This is a stool (apparel) type meal with a very thick, cheddar crust. For people who like thick crust, this is a good pizza. However, it is not the best in terms of flavor. The sauce is too thick and the cheese is overcooked. This pizza is very filling and satisfying, but not necessarily the best choice for someone looking for a light meal.

Computer languages and their applications are discussed in the context of education and practical use. Del Colle emphasizes the importance of involving American youth directly in the workforce and the pragmatic approach needed to prepare them for jobs. Meadowcroft stresses the need for students to connect programming with real-world applications, advocating the use of languages like Pascal instead of APL. Despite concerns about APL's appeal, it is noted for its standardization and suitability for teaching programming basics. The article also mentions future events, such as the Children's theater performances and Seder supper Monday, which are relevant for students interested in cultural and social activities. The text concludes with a call to action for educators to consider the use of computer languages in education, emphasizing the importance of programming fundamentals and real-world applications.
