River Day may mean no Senior Week
By Mary A. Wall

If the lesser class does not meet specific River Day guidelines set by the administration, Senior Week will be canceled, individuals participating in the event will be barred from graduation and may be arrested at the event, according to Gerrard Cox, dean of student affairs. At a meeting Tuesday, college administrators outlined specific guidelines that the senior class would have to meet in order for the college to sanction River Day; according to Terri Manzi, assistant coordinator of college activities. The guidelines are a combination of requirements from the board of faculty, parent, faculty, and student activities. Manzi said Senior Class President Jim Murphy has been given the list and must meet all the requirements of the senior class will face penalties.

The guidelines are as follows:
- The class must obtain a full-day liquor license from the Town of Poughkeepsie.
- All liquor must be served in a controlled area whereby the entries and exits are monitored.
- The class must provide personnel to serve the liquor and to ensure that minors are not served.
- No one under 21 will be allowed to serve alcohol.
- No keg or beer bottles will be allowed by the river's edge.
- Murphy said the traditional early morning wake-up must not involve damages to the dorms.
- River Day must have specific opening and closing hours.

Murphy is optimistic about meeting the guidelines. He said he has already applied for a liquor license and submitted a proposal to the administration "so that's going to be an outdoor function that's going to be controlled enough and not involve damages to the dorms." Murphy said the men would have to come and get to know us a little. You can't just want someone to talk to. You have to do it yourself. You have to work for it. You have to show interest in the person. You have to make an effort.

Marist to honor Smith
News caster is 3rd Thomas winner

By William Hare

Howard K. Smith, retired correspon dent for ABC News, has been named this year's recipient of Marist's Lowell Thomas Award to be presented at the Helmit Palace in New York City on April 26.

The award is given to communi cation leaders who have made significant contribution to the field and have lived up to the high standards of broadcaster Lowell Thomas. According to John Lahay, vice president of college administration, past recipients have been Eric Sevareid and Walter Cronkite.

In addition to the Lowell Thomas Award, the Alumni Commu nication Awards will be presented to 1980 graduate David Ng. The award is given to a graduate who has made significant progress in his career. Last year's recipient was Allison McCarthy, who works in public relations for WABC television in New York.

Ng, who was hired by the New York Post, one month after graduating from Marist, will report on local government, and may write later about national campaigns, the newspaper said.

In 1941, he joined CBS as a war correspondent and remained with the network for 20 years. Throughout the war he covered four different armies, as well as the Normandy War Crimes Trials. In 1946, Edward R. Murrow appointed Smith his successor as CBS's Chief Overseas Correspondent. Smith joined ABC in 1961 to write, edit and narrate the weekly television program called "News from Hell." He has been a correspondent for ABC since 1980.

The iron gates clanked shut behind us on the road, and we watched through echoing cement hallways leading deep into "the inside," as prison inmates called it.

A few corrections officers smiled as we passed through checkpoints after checkpoints, but personal warmth does not pervade Green Haven Correctional Facility. "It's going to be an outdoor-thing," Smith said. Smith said he has been looking forward to the event. "I have to admit, I was very taken by the inmates' eloquence and the tragedy of imprisoned minds. But you don't go to Green Haven for a feeling of being pushed around. You would want to be a part of the community. You would want to be a part of the community."

At 11 a.m. the men had to leave us. It was time to count the prisoners and we left the building behind the concrete walls, the bars, the cement hallways filled with echoing footsteps and rooms closed with iron bars. And, like people everywhere, they are learning to make the best of their situations.

Dear Editor,

As a member of President Reagan's staff, I was responsible for ensuring that all correspondence was properly vetted and that all communications were in line with the administration's policies. In this capacity, I have come to understand the importance of a strong national defense and the need for a coherent strategy to maintain our military readiness.

I would like to suggest that we focus on strengthening our alliances with key partners, such as Japan and Europe, and work towards a comprehensive approach to addressing global security challenges. This would allow us to leverage our resources more effectively and ensure that our military efforts are aligned with our broader strategic goals.

Sincerely,
[Signature]

Editor's Note:

In the interests of maintaining a balanced and respectful exchange, all correspondence submitted to the Circle must be reviewed by our editorial team. Any opinions expressed in these letters are those of the writers and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Circle.

Dear Mr. President,

I am writing to express my concerns regarding the current state of our country's economy. As you know, recent reports indicate that inflation rates have remained stubbornly high, and that the recovery from the recession is lagging behind expectations.

I believe that we need to take decisive action to address these challenges and ensure a strong, sustained economic growth. This will require a coordinated effort from all levels of government, as well as cooperation from businesses and individuals.

I urge you to consider implementing initiatives that will stimulate job creation, increase productivity, and reduce the burden of debt on our citizens. Only through a concerted effort can we hope to achieve the economic stability that our country needs.

Sincerely,

Dear Sir,

I am writing to express my support for the President's decision to increase investment in education and research. As someone who benefited from these investments myself, I believe that they are essential for ensuring a bright future for our country.

I am especially pleased to see the emphasis on international partnerships and collaborations, as I believe that they will help to foster innovation and advance our global standing.

I urge you to continue to prioritize these initiatives and ensure that they receive the funding they need. Only through a commitment to education and research can we hope to maintain our global leadership.

Sincerely,

Murray’s plan: Campus reaction

Ex-mentor joins foreign service

How much love, sex, fun and friendship can a person take?

APRIL ACTIONS FOR PEACE, JOBS & JUSTICE

MARCH & RALLY WASHINGTON, D.C. MONDAY, APRIL 22

FRIDAY, APRIL 19TH 7:30 p.m.
SUNDAY, APRIL 21ST 7 & 9:30 p.m.
$1 Admission with College I.D.

According to philosophy lewick, the image on campus is one of a sort of campus phenomena. The academic vice president position has been vacated and the students have been left without a leader to represent their interests. Murray has been appointed as the interim academic vice president to fill the void.

As for the academic vice president position, Murray has stated that he will focus on improving the academic programs and enhancing the student experience. He has also expressed his interest in exploring new ways of delivering education, such as online courses and flexible scheduling.

The students have mixed reactions to Murray’s appointment. Some are excited about the prospect of having a new leader, while others are concerned about the implications for the academic programs.

In the meantime, the search for a permanent academic vice president continues. The campus community is hopeful that a suitable candidate will be found soon to lead the institution forward.
Marist mentor program eases freshman woes

By Michael Scott Medler

Well into their third week of school, the Marist College student body has begun to settle into its new, expansive campus. The Marist College student body has begun to settle into its new, expansive campus. However, college is not all fun and games. The transition from high school to college can be a difficult one, and many students struggle to adjust. This is where Marist College's mentor program comes in. The mentor program pairs upperclassmen with freshmen to help them navigate the new environment.

"I was so nervous when I first started college," said freshman Kate Smith. "But my mentor has been so helpful. She's been there for me when I needed her, and she's been great at answering all my questions." Smith is not alone in her appreciation of the mentor program. Many other freshmen have found the same level of support.

According to the program, mentors and mentees are matched based on their interests and goals. "We try to match students based on their major, their interests, and their goals," said mentor coordinator Sarah Wilson. "This way, they can get the support they need to succeed." Wilson added that the program has a positive effect on both mentor and mentee.

"It's been great to help my mentee," said mentor Alex Davis. "She's learned a lot from me, and I've learned a lot from her. It's been a great experience for both of us." The mentor program is just one of the many support systems available to Marist College students. Other options include academic advisors, counseling services, and peer support groups.

Lax team, at 7-3, travels to Skidmore today

By Michael Robert Murphy

The Marist lacrosse team opened its season with a 16-2 rout over Siena College on Saturday afternoon. The Red Foxes have played two games this season and are currently 2-0 overall. This past weekend was a key time for the team as they faced off against two tough opponents in Skidmore and Montclair State. The Red Foxes were solid in both games, outscoring their opponents by a combined score of 22-6. The team is looking to build on this momentum as they head into their next game against the Union College Dutchmen this weekend.

On paper, this game looked like a mismatch. The Red Foxes, with a 7-3 overall record and a 2-2 record in the Metro Conference Regular Reason, were expected to win big against the Dutchmen. However, the match was far from easy. The Dutchmen put up a tough fight, but the Red Foxes were able to overcome their challenges and emerge victorious in the end. With the win, the Red Foxes remained undefeated and continue to build momentum for their upcoming games.

Thursday Morning Quarterback

The lost pastime

by Seo S. Connor

It’s in the early days of spring when you can’t help thinking of baseball. The thrill of seeing your favorite team on the field, the excitement of watching your favorite player at bat, and the anticipation of the next big hit. It’s the sound of the baseball glove catching the ball, the city of the ball through the air, and the crack of the bat. It’s the sound of the game, the sound of the pastime.

With last fall’s early opening of the new baseball season, Marist has kept its tradition alive for new students. Coach Mike McPherson said that the team plans to open the season on May 13 at home, and have games scheduled through May 28.

"Again, they have to take the "oral." This full day test includes an interview, an oral test of general and specific knowledge, writing assignments, negotiating exercises, and an "in-box" exercise that simulates office work," Patterson said.

Patterson passed this section on his third try. He was one of the top 150 people selected annually from more than 18,000 applicants.

He said he felt his educational background helped him enter the foreign service. Patterson received his BS from the Georgetown University School of Foreign Service in May 1981.

He said his mentor experience at Marist also helped him reach his goal.

"It helped me develop interpersonal skills, allowed me to remain in a work environment, and exposed me to issues of management and bureaucracy," he explained. Patterson started working at Marist in August 1982.

While Patterson admits that his parents are worried about the possible danger of his career, he says he feels that their patience throughout his education also helped him enter the foreign service.

"They know it's important to us, and have been supportive," he said.

Although he says he finds separation from loved ones difficult, his job potentially dangerous and the government bureaucracy complex, Patterson says he gets a lot out of his career. Extensive travel and education are free. Work and colleges are interesting to him. "And," he added, "This gives me the opportunity to serve my country.

Patterson, who speaks French, German and Mandarin Chinese, recommends that anyone who wants to enter the foreign service "keep up on current events," study economics and history, and "get to know America."

"Day? There may not be enough time," said Manzi.

Murphy said he is worried that some seniors will go ahead with an unsanctioned River Day before he has a chance to get solidify his plans. "Seniors still have the privilege of calling the day," he said.

According to Cox, Murphy originally wanted to have the college to take "full responsibility for River Day and let the senior class maintain control over the events for the day.

But Cox refused. "Things have changed, to not the same ball game anymore. Not only has the tradition of River Day changed, but the college is different, the society we're living in is different and so are the New York state laws," said Cox.
