A late start, a labor strike and changes in design plans all contributed to the delay in completing Marist's new Garden Apartments, according to Marist housing officials and the contractor for the project.

By Sept. 2, the six units were completed by Sept. 1, but the sixth, the F Section, still was not finished. The delay has forced the college to place 72 students in temporary housing. An additional 200 Marist students have been housed in various locations. In order to be completed on time for students' arrival, Marist housing officials notified them of the completion date, notifying them of the completion date.

Angered by the delay and forced to move into already full housing units, many of the 72 students assigned to the F Section expressed their dissatisfaction through a petition to college President Dennis Murray demanding partial refunds of housing fees.

Housing staff made phone calls to students requesting them to come to the end of August, notifying them of the completion date.

According to Eberhard, poor southeasterly winds also caused a change in design plans. Originally, there were to be three buildings in the complex; however, because of poor weather conditions, the engineers had to redesign the entire layout of the buildings.

Also, the project got off to a slow start because of a delay in getting a building permit from the Town of Poughkeepsie. According to Eberhard, some of the apartments might not be ready for occupancy by the start of the school year.

More delays occurred because of the weather conditions.

"We've been on the mercy of the weather," said Eberhard. "By December we were froze out." Problems with subcontractors for such things as plumbing and electrical work cropped up. "I tried to give them (Marist officials) answers, but I also had to coordinate subcontractors," said Eberhard. "Sub-contractors don't always come when they are supposed to or they don't bring enough men.

"There's so much construction in this area," said Eberhard, "that there's a terrible manpower shortage."

Largest frosh class causes overcrowding

by Douglas Dutton

Marist College is currently working on a solution to the overcrowding in Leo and Sheahan halls caused by the largest frosh class in the college's history, according to Steve Sansola, director of housing.

According to Richard Brennan, Leo/Sheahan residence director, 35 two-person rooms were housing three students at the beginning of the semester, but as of Monday, eight of those rooms had been converted back to doubles.

The date students submitted their dorm deposit regulates which students are rehoused from a tripled room, Sansola said. "The last student to pay his dorm deposit is the one relocated," he said.

An unexpected high yield from the freshman accepted this semester created the exceptionally large class, resulting in overcrowding, according to James Daly, vice president of admissions and enrollment. Yield is the percentage of students accepted to the college who actually attend.

According to Daly, admissions had calculated a resident yield of about 30 percent for this semester. The actual 34 percent yield caused a surplus of 72 students.

Admissions is an art, not a science," Daly said. "The preference is to have a few too many students matriculate than not enough." There are approximately 750 frosh students enrolled.

Sansola said that the resident assistants and mentors are "sensitive to the special circumstances" caused by the overcrowding and are emphasizing programming in the freshmen dorms. The program includes sessions on time management, developing space and developing relationships.

Although they say they are not excited about their current living arrangements, many freshmen say that as far as they have been able to adapt to the limited space. "It hasn't really been bad," said Mike Beers, a Leo resident from Huntington, N.Y., "the only problem is the room's built for two people."

"It's been alright except for the space," said Joe Eriele, a Leo resident from East Greenbush, N.Y. "But I still haven't unpacked most of my stuff.

Daly said that he does not foresee any problems next semester when more students are matriculated.

"There will probably be only about 25 resident students added for the spring semester." Daly said.

Maher appointed acting VP, but the search continues

by Anthony DeBarros

Dr. Julianne Matur, dean of the school of adult education at Marist College, has been appointed acting vice president for academic affairs. Mahar will hold the office until a search can be permanent replacement for Dr. Andrew Molloy, vice president for academic affairs, who resigned the position July 1.

A search conducted this past summer by a Marist committee was unsuccessful.

"The search committee recommended three candidates who meet for two days of meetings with myself, Dr. Murray (Marist President Dennis Murray), members of the administrative cabinet and some faculty," said Lahy. "As a result of the meetings, there did not emerge a strong consensus that any were as strong a candidate as the job deserved.

"The search was done relatively late last year, so most of the good candidates had already made commitments to their insitutions," Lahy said. "I think we could do better in reopening the search now. We'll attract a better pool of people."

The college will red erase for the position before the end of September, and Lahy said he hopes to secure a permanent vice president for academic affairs by the end of the fall semester. However, he said a more realistic date would be July of 1986, since many candidates would not be available until then.

Maher, who was a member of the summer search committee, said she will seek the permanent position.

"I made it clear that I would only take the acting vice president for academic affairs position if it could be considered for the permanent job," Mahar said.

Lahy said Mahar could become a candidate in the new search. "She was not a candidate for the search that just ended," he said. "Depending on how she performs, she could become a viable candidate. I did not place any limitations on that."

The student petition drive was started by senior Christian Mordesci, chairman of the College Union Board's senate committee. A leader among the officers of the student body, Mordesci said the purpose of the drive was to "address such issues as the theater, residence halls, and the security measures on the campus."

Mordesci said the drive had been set up to "obtain the student point of view so that the administration has a chance to hear the students' opinion."

The students plan to address such issues as the theater, residence halls, and security measures on the campus. The drive is being supported by the student body, and the administration has been informed about it. The students plan to continue the drive until the issues are resolved.

Marist Abroad students are invited to luncheon

A luncheon in the Pub will celebrate the return of Marist Abroad students and their experiences of college and various universities in England and Ireland. The luncheon will be held on September 12th at 5:30 p.m. in the Banquet Hall.

More parking added

Marist has added additional parking in the north lot of Marist Hall and the parking lot in front of the library. According to Ed Walk, the hospital parking lot is now closed to parking for the first time. The hospital parking lot was previously used by students and staff. The new parking lot will be used by students and staff.

Marist plans change in college alcohol policy

The college is considering a change in its alcohol policy. The policy change would affect all students and would be implemented in the next academic year.

The change would allow students to purchase alcohol from off-campus vendors, but would require them to provide proof of age and to purchase alcohol in small quantities.

The change is being considered by the college administration, and a decision will be made by the end of the semester.

Sound barrier

In the northern end of Seoul, there's a covered shelter left behind by its former owner. The government has decided to use it as a storage area for their garbage collection. The shelter is made of wood and covered with plastic. It is about 10 feet wide and 20 feet long. The shelter is surrounded by a 6-foot-high fence, and it has a locked gate.

The government has decided to use the shelter as a garbage collection area, and the people living near it are upset. They say that the shelter is a eyesore and an odor problem. They also say that it is a danger to children and animals who might get into the garbage.

Change in the south

Bob Dylan released his latest album, "Empire Burials," on Tuesday, making everyone who'll go back to church singing the gospel. "We are the world!" says the song, "We are the children!"

"Here is a true spirit," said Biko, "It is not enough to cease writing. We must begin a program of reparation."

"And Bishop Tutu can dance on Guys, this is not funny," said Biko.

"The letters are from a certain number of artists who benefit from the world's best-selling albums - as long as the underdeveloped do not live in the countries. The letters were addressed to their fellow American, which might rightfully make us wonder whether they're just talking out of their own mouth.

Men runners win at Fairfield; new women's team takes second

It was a day of firsts for Marist's cross-country teams at the Saturday's Fairway (Cerrone) University Invitational meet.

For the second straight year, the men's squad won the meet, with 35 points. The team and its eventual returning starters Marie Bernhard, Sue Blazejewski and Victor VanCarpels will provide a strong nucleus for the team to build around.
