Students press apartheid issue

by Bill DeCennaro

The Progressive Coalition at Marist College remains actively involved in educating a student body on the different issues of apartheid.

Last weekend, several students from the Progressive Coalition met with students from Northeast colleges at Trinity College in Hartford, Conn. The focus of the conference was to learn strategies on how to increase pressure on colleges to divest.

According to James Falanga, acting director of the Computer Center, students at the University of the Witwatersrand in Johannesburg, South Africa, have resulted in the elimination of 112 student accounts because of apartheid.

Concra and the members of the coalition are pursuing two different means of educating the students at Marist concerning apartheid and divestment.

"A apartheid awareness week is scheduled for either the first week in February or the first week in March. Concra has already received commitments from faculty members to give speeches on the economics and morality of apartheid. The coalition is also circulating 38 petitions. "Basically," Concra said, "the petitions say that we want the administration to make a position statement on their feelings toward investments in South Africa."

The coalition said the Progressive Coalition will continue to hold discussions on this topic, as they will discuss not only apartheid, but other matters which may be of interest and concern to students.

"I think students can come and oppose us about anything. It's necessary, because we all need to learn about apartheid and divestment, that we hear different opinions."

Concra noted that the meetings, which attract as many as 40 or 50 people, may deserve attention and debate such topics as President Ronald Reagan's recent speech on "Star Wars" defense and South Africa's efforts to achieve self-rule.

"As Concra stressed that divestment is a complicated issue. "People need to understand at first if they are going to be able to make a decision about divestment," Falanga said.

Problems curtail CMS use

by Regina Rossi

Technical problems and misuse have resulted in the elimination of some CMS computer accounts, according to James Falanga, acting director of the Computer Center. However, CMS accounts required for certain writing and computer courses have not been removed, Falanga said.

"The main reason for the change was the Computer Center's inability to keep up with the technical demands of the rapidly growing system. "It had expanded beyond our means of controlling it," Falanga said.

Falanga said the center has had problems finding disk space for the CMS accounts. The center also has had problems managing the expanding number of CMS accounts, he said.

"Information in the MUSCB system is easier to store because permanent disk space is used only when a file is saved. In the CMS system, each account requires 100,000 to 500,000 bytes of disk space. Unlike MUSCB, storage for CMS is performed manually by Computer Center staff members.

Another reason for the elimination of accounts was "procedural misuse of CMS by several students, Falanga said. Some used other people's accounts in order to store more information, sometimes locking out the account's actual owner or losing the owner's files, he said.

Also, some students were misusing BITNET, a telecommunications network used to exchange scholarly work between universities, Falanga said.

Although BITNET is designed only for academic purposes, some students used it for social purposes, calling "chatting," he said. Some users also sent copyrighted programs over the network, another.

The number of corollaries written about the tragic demise of the Space Shuttle Challenger and its seven United States astronauts has been overwhelming — even Marist President Dennis Murray has released a statement concerning the event. This is deservedly so.

We feel there are no new words we can write — no way for us to express the sorrow we, as all Americans, felt on that day. Suffice to say, our hearts are with the victims’ families. That is how it should be.

“Sensationalism” is usually linked with television network coverage of such a dramatic event, because it is used to gain maximum mileage out of every story. We have all watched television reporters treat stories of death and disaster in a most humanitarian manner. Where that happens, our sense of compassion gets heightened.

But there was little that was other than the tragic as we tooled through the news reports that day. Once we heard and read about the explosion, who would have tempor­arily in sympathy for anyone else’s pain.

There was no criticism and no scrap searching, just a deep regard for the loss of human life. As we read through our statements in opposition to violence, our words failed us for any sign of hope, and end of the story.

In these frantic minutes immediately after the explosion, the news agencies kept the nation calm as the first searched information came in. We must admire the extreme professionalism it took to carry on in the face of such despair.

Although this may signal an end to network ‘sensation­alism,’ we respect the necessity to treat the space shuttle incident with kindness and sincerity. It was a path well chosen.

The Awakened Sentiment

When anticipating the beginning of a new school year, students naturally did not fail to change their schedule. Regardless of what changes, they would have to tempor­arily in sympathy for anyone else’s pain.

In terms of marketing, it is a good idea to have a plan. The goal is to create a single and popular album. This plan helps to keep the album's sales up. If you don't have a plan, the album may not sell as well. The plan should include a strategy to promote the album. A strategy that promotes the album can help to keep the sales up.

The plan should also include a strategy to sell the album. A strategy that sells the album can help to keep the sales up. The strategy should include a strategy to sell the album in different countries. A strategy that sells the album in different countries can help to keep the sales up.

Think you can beat April 15? Guess again

By Lisa Ash

The deadline for filing your state and federal income tax returns is fast approaching. As of Tuesday, February 6, 1986, you will be only ten days away from the April 15th filing deadline. If you haven't already had your taxes prepared, now is the time to begin preparing them. Here are some tips to help you beat the April 15th filing deadline.

1. Start early: Don't wait until the last minute to start preparing your taxes. Start early and make sure you have all the necessary documents, such as W-2 forms, 1099 forms, and bank statements.

2. Organize your records: Keep all your records in one place. This will help you find what you need quickly and accurately.

3. Use the software: There are many tax preparation software programs available that can help you prepare your taxes. These programs can save you time and reduce errors.

4. Seek professional help: If you are unsure about how to prepare your taxes, consider seeking the help of a tax preparer or accountant.

5. Check your refund: Use the IRS website to check the status of your refund. This will help you know when to expect your refund and plan accordingly.

Remember, it's never too early to start thinking about the tax season. By starting early, you can ensure that you have enough time to prepare your taxes accurately and efficiently.

Tuition cut set at Bard
by Les Johnson
Bard College in Annandale-on-Hudson, New York, has announced a tuition cut program that would offer several percent reductions in tuition costs. The move is in response to increasing competition between public and private schools for the best students. The new program, which will begin this fall, will pay for tuition, room and board at a public college in their local public college.
