Professor fighting tenure denial

by Steven Murray

Two Marist professors are challenging recommendations from the faculty's Rank and Tenure Committee that they be denied tenure.

John Pagliarulo, an associate professor of computer science, and Caroline Rider, chairperson of the physics department, have both filed grievances. Under college policy, professors who are not granted tenure are eligible to appeal the decision through the Faculty Grievance Committee, refused to comment on the cases.

The applicant's divisional chairperson and the academic vice president also makes a recommendation. Caroline Rider, chairperson of the Faculty Grievance Committee, refused to comment on the cases and declined to say what action, if any, is being taken. The grievance committee is composed of three elected faculty members.

Now the case is before the grievance committee. If the committee finds in favor of the grievant, the case will be submitted to the Faculty Handbook: procedural irregularity, inadequate consideration or bias in the application of the tenure criteria.

When the grievance is filed, the grievance committee must review the complaint and determine whether it falls into one of three categories outlined in the Faculty Handbook: procedural irregularity, inadequate consideration or bias in the application of the tenure criteria.

The committee comprises one person chosen by the grievant, one person chosen by the Rank and Tenure Committee and one person chosen by those two people.

Wild party 'shuts down' frosh dorm

by Chris Landry

Leo Hall was closed to outsiders over the weekend after a drinking party on the dormitory's third floor turned unruly Friday night.

One student broke his nose and was treated and released from St. Francis Hospital in Poughkeepsie. Six students face disciplinary action, according to Leo residents. One window was also broken during the student-organized party. Joseph Leary, director of safety and security, said.

Alcohol is prohibited in Leo, a freshman residence. None of the students involved has been identified.

Only Leo residents were allowed into the building from Saturday until Monday morning. "It was shut down because the Sunday was getting out of hand," Leary said.

"Confidentiality of their names will be honored," said Oitzinger. "If four cars can be broken into, then who is next?"

"There should've been preven­ tive measures taken before the fact," said student Melanie Winters, whose stereo system was broken into from her yellow 1982 Saturn. "Greater security doesn't help me now—it should've been there before..."

Because there is a shortage of security guards for all-night patrols in one area, Leary said he wants to implement a campus safety watch.

Leary had parked his white, 1980 Mercury Capri at 1 a.m. on Tuesday, October 4. At 3 p.m. that afternoon, Oitzinger returned to her car to find the right side rear passenger window smashed.

Although her stereo was not taken, it was damaged. From the stereo and the knob of the stick shift were, along with a container of audio files, according to Oitzinger. She said damage costs totalled $150.

At 4 p.m. the same afternoon, Winters found the front door window on her 1978 blue Toyota Celica on Oct. 2, passenger window smashed in.

In total, the items stolen amount to $315 plus replacement of his dashboard. "For the amount of money I'm paying to go here, my car should at least be protected," said Winters.

"The school makes you register your car and then when something like this happens, they assume no responsibility," said Oitzinger. The committee that the Leo residents relay any information, security will review it and keep it in mind.

"If students see anything unusual, get the license plate number or a description of the person," said Coughlin.

Legendary author to visit campus

by Paul O'Sullivan

Dr. Isaac Asimov, world-renowned author and intellectual, will speak in the Theater on Thursday, Oct. 27 at 7:30 p.m.

Admission to this installment in the Cunnen-Hackett Lecture Series is free. The topic of the lecture has yet to be finalized. The author, a retired professor of biochemistry at Boston University, has written a wide variety of subjects, both fiction and non-fiction, ranging from math and science to the Bible and Shakespeare.

The World Science Fiction Society has honored Asimov five times with its prestigious Hugo Award (The Oscar of science fiction writing). These include a special award honoring his Foundation Trilogy as the Best All-Time Science Fiction Series. He has also received three Nebula Awards from the Science Fiction Writers of America, one designating him a Grandmaster of Science Fiction.

The lecture series was established by Jack J. Garren, a first book-length work of science fiction, "Pebbles in the Sky." Since then, Asimov has written about a wide variety of subjects, both fiction and non-fiction, ranging from math and science to the Bible and Shakespeare.

Parking crunch hits Marist lots

by Michael Hayes

Limited parking and the potential for cars on campus has forced Marist to create special parking passes for faculty and students in lots 50A and 50B. The parking passes are available for $10 each and will be sold on a first-come, first-served basis. The passes are valid from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. on weekdays and 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. on weekends.

Senior to study Presidency

by Mady Wey

Marist students watching the regular press coverage of the presidential campaign may have caught a glimpse of a Marist student who is a serious contender for the presidency. Bill Clinton, a Marist alumnus, has been frequently mentioned as a possible candidate for the Democratic nomination. The press has focused on his personal and political background, his foreign policy experience, and his ability to connect with voters. Clinton's college years were marked by his involvement in campus politics and his leadership roles in the student government.

Voices together

Audio lectures on campus will feature the work of prominent scholars in the field of political science. The lectures will be held in the Student Union Theater and are open to all members of the Marist community. The series is sponsored by the Marist College Center for the Study of the American Scene.

Frosh punishment a step toward future?

"The prevention and/or use of alcohol by any student within residence halls and residence housing facilities is prohibited.
This is Marist's policy, as enunciated in the Employee Handbook and the dormitory's Leary's, and is in effect during the school year. Last Friday night, the residents of the third floor of Leo Hall enjoyed a policy that many students believe is in which those who attended and even room to room means different.

Of course, this action was in direct violation of college rules. Radio station WAMC made a move away from the dorms and the actions of Leo's residents. Housing officials sustained all visitors from entering the building. And for the punishment was unclear, what other action could have been taken in the case of a major policy violation.

Resident attitudes are aim of ‘electronic’ meeting
by Michael Kinane

A three-hour electronic town meeting that took place Oct. 20 actually had no residents in attendance, however, organizers said several of those who voted did so from as far away as New York City.

The event, which was advertised in The New York Times, was a call-in meeting where hundreds of people from throughout the state could participate in the discussion of local issues.

The meeting was held at the New York State Department of Education in Albany and was broadcast on the local radio station.

The meeting was attended by about 300 people, organizers said, and was conducted using a telephone poll and a video conference.

Organizers said the event was a success and that they plan to hold similar meetings in the future.

"We want to hear what people have to say about local issues," said Michael Kinane, the director of the group organizing the meeting.

"We think this is a great way to get people involved in the community and to have their voices heard."
For remaining Brothers, Marist tradition lives on

by Andy West

Thirty years after he graduated from Marist College, Paul B. Belanger returned to Poughkeepsie in 1988. He left the university with the class of '58 and went on to become a successful lawyer and businessman. During his time at Marist, Belanger was a member of the Brothers' basketball team and later served as an administrator. He returned to Marist to attend the 50th anniversary of the class of '58.

NCAA has chance to display strengths

by Tim Bauer

The NCAA is planning a major tour of college campuses next spring to showcase its organizational strengths. The NCAA's goal is to demonstrate its ability to handle the complexities of running a national college sports organization.

The NCAA tour will include stops at Marist College, where the marquee event will be the Marist Invitational cross-country meet. The meet will be held on the campus of Marist College and will feature top runners from across the country.

The NCAA tour will also include stops at other Marist College events, such as the Marist Invitational track meet and the Marist Invitational soccer tournament. The NCAA will also feature its state-of-the-art facilities, including its headquarters in Indianapolis.

The NCAA has been facing criticism for its handling of recent scandals, but it is looking to use the tour as an opportunity to show its strengths.

The NCAA tour will begin in January and conclude in April.

Women net 3rd at Hunter race

by Kevin St. Ongue

The Marist College women's cross-country team finished third at the Hunter Invitational on October 23. The meet was held on the campus of Hunter College in New York City.

The Marist team finished with a score of 88, trailing only New York University and Hunter College. The Marist team was led by senior Sallie Johnson, who finished 11th overall.

The Marist team also had a strong showing in the women's race, with junior Christy Little finishing 10th, junior Kristin Farina finishing 15th, and junior Melissa Morgan finishing 18th.

The Marist team will continue its season with a home meet on November 6.

Nutters go 0-3

by Chris Shin

The Marist College men's soccer team suffered a 2-1 loss to New Paltz on October 21. The defeat was the third straight loss for the Marist team, which is now 0-3 in its conference.

The Marist team was outplayed in the first half, allowing New Paltz to take a 1-0 lead. In the second half, Marist had several scoring opportunities but couldn't capitalize.

The Marist team will continue its season with a home meet against Vassar on October 28.
Basketball teams begin practicing

by Tim Besser

The basketball season has begun. With a fanfare akin to that at football tryouts at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, the women’s basketball team began practices for the 1988-89 season Friday night at midnight. The men began practicing just 8 1/2 hours after the women ended on Saturday.

As the clock reached midnight, seniors Susanne Lynn, Annette McKay and Jaclyn O’Neill took the three locks off the ball rack and the new season was underway.

Women’s basketball Coach Ken Babineau said he had been toying with the idea of beginning the season with a little “Midnight Madness” prior to last season, but decided to hold off on it. He decided to go through with the plan this year as a way to get his team off to a good start.

“IT was kind of a psychological ploy,” said Babineau, who is in his third year as the Marist helm. “If I told them we were the first team in the Hudson Valley to practice and the first team in our league, it was a good way to get the team back in the race.

After breaking the balls out at midnight, the team practiced until 1:30 a.m., said Babineau. They had begun working on stretching and doing conditioning drills at 11:30, something they’ve never done, even on the road.

They averaged 8.2 points per game before suffering the injury. She started 13 of 15 games before getting injured.

Problem with scholarship resolved

by Michael Hayes

A misunderstanding in the administration of a scholarship fund, which has led to sanctions against the Marist football program, has been cleared up, according to Marist Athletic Director Brian Colleary.

The scholarship, presented annually by the Charles Van Norstrand Memorial Scholarship Fund, is available only to students who played football at either Poughkeepsie High School or Our Lady of Lourdes High School, also of Poughkeepsie, and attend Marist College.

John Herman, the treasurer of the fund, thought the recipient had to at least try out for the Marist football team, thereby making the award an athletic scholarship, a violation of NCAA Division III rules, said Colleary.

In going under the assumption the individual must at least try out, Herman receded the award to last year’s winner, Steve Maloney, who had two operations to correct broken bones in his left knee.

The award was established in the memory of the Charles Van Norstrand who died four years ago at the age of 40. Van Norstrand was a student and football player at Poughkeepsie High and later played for Marist. He went on to teach and coach at Our Lady of Lourdes. The award is given by the foundation in an effort to tie the three schools together.

League honors for RPI hockey

by Jay Reynolds

The Marist football team travels to Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute Saturday for the last of five consecutive road games before returning home on Oct. 29 to face St. John’s University.

At RPI, the Red Foxes will be looking to even their record at 3-2 after dropping a 19-0 decision at the U.S. Coast Guard Academy last Saturday.

RPI has won all six meetings with the Red Foxes, including a 44-14 victory last year, but is coming off a 27-0 loss at the hands of Union last Saturday.

The Red Foxes were plagued by injuries against Coast Guard last year, but five starters had to leave the game.

Laxmen cop fall shootout by Tim Besser

The lacrosse team swept the annual Knickerbocker Shootout last Sunday at Keane College in Union, N.J.

Marist, which finished third in the Knickerbocker Conference last spring, defeated Keane 6-5 in its opening game and later went on to win the championship game against Montclair State University.

In the championship game, the Red Foxes were defeated by last-second goal. Montclair reached the championship by defeating Sully Northern in its first game.

In the all-star game, Donnellan was named the MVP by the voters, who gave him the most votes in the field. For his efforts in the all-star game, Donnellan was named the MVP by the voters, who gave him the most votes in the field.
