Cigarettes leave
Marist in a puff
by Paul O'Sullivan

Concern over health and fitness prompted the administration to take action on cigarettes. "Kick the habit!" of cigarette sales on campus, according to Marist officials.

The decision, made this summer by the president's Cabinet, called for the removal of cigarette vending machines from the Center, Champagnat Hall and other buildings. Two machines located in Marist East and Donnelley residence halls moved to the basement of the classrooms.

In addition, cigarettes are no longer available on campus at the Sweet Shoppe, located in the Activities Center, and at the Student Union Bookstore. However, "that too will be phased out in the long run," said Anthony Campilii, chief financial officer.

Cigarettes leave many lives in danger as well. "The students don't know we have a smoking problem until they come to college," said Campilii.

"The college is trying to encourage good health," said Gerard Cox, vice president for student affairs. "This is clearly a health and welfare issue. All evidence shows that smoking is injurious to an individual's health."

Peter O'Sullivan, assistant dean of student affairs, estimated that 65 to 70 percent of the Marist community does not smoke, but he stressed the decision to discontinue cigarette sales was made out of a concern for health and not a desire to bend to majority rule.

Economically, the decision will have little effect. Marist received only a 15 percent commission on the machines. The machines, which were not very popular, were brought in and maintained by an outside vendor, said Campilii.

"The removal of cigarette machines was part of a larger plan to bring in vending machines that present good health and nutrition. We're trying to make the machines more health-oriented by having less junk food available," said Campilii.

Both Cox and Campilii noted the sale of cigarettes might encourage smokers to attend school.

"The college is trying to encourage good health," said Gerard Cox.

Few students tune in to the Great Debate
by Ilai Moriey

While millions of Americans viewed the Great Debate Sunday night, an informal circle survey showed that few of the Marist students were tuned in to watch the presidential candidates.

There were some reports of debate watchers scattered throughout campus, but a walk through the hallways and lounges revealed few students talking in the first debate of what may be their first election.

A survey of the lounges in Leo, Shawhan and Champagnat halls during the debate showed no television sets turned on to the presidential candidates.

One television in a Champagnat lounge was set to the right channel, but no one was there to watch it.

Of the students who did see the Republican candidate George Bush and Democratic candidate Michael Dukakis debate it out, most agreed neither candidate came out the clear winner.

"Both made their points and stated what they believe in," said sophomore Mike Larkiri, a registered Democrat from West Hartford, Conn. "But I tend to agree with what Dukakis stands for. He goes for the working man and the family. Bush goes for Big Business."

-Sophomore Pete Haviland, a registered Republican from Farmington, Conn., said despite past mistakes, the overall record of the present administration is proof enough that Bush will make the better president.

"He answered the questions directly and I agree with what he stands for," Haviland said. "If we have Dukakis as president, he'll ruin the fabric and the backbone of our nation."

A registered Democrat from Staten Island, N.Y. said although Dukakis talked too much about his family's immigrant background, both candidates evaded too many questions. "I thought they both made each other look like fools. They were immature," said sophomore Dan Bowman.

One freshman said he and his friends noticed a big difference in Bush and Dukakis' delivery. Bush had his head tilted and was looking at the panel, Dukakis looked directly into the camera. "I think that will be a factor in influencing the American people — maybe not directly, but it will have some influence," said Tom Morgan from Marlboro, Conn.

Some students said the quips exchanged between candidates proved the candidates were avoiding the questions and somewhat denying responsibility.

Interns hit road to sell a college
by Michael Hayes

Marist students are representing the college at more than 500 high schools and college fairs in the Northeast this year. Each will receive $2,100, a car, an unlimited expense account and 15 elective credits.

While this is an attractive internship, the interns agree that they are doing it for the experience.

"You're representing the college in a professional way," said Belik. "People look at you as a professional while you're still a student. I thought that was really attractive."

"I figured it would be something great to put on my resume," said Flour. "It would show that I'm responsible.""I'm glad that I was able to make money and attend college."

The interns leave Marist each Sunday and return on Friday after visiting places such as Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Long Island and the New England region. Once or twice a month they will spend a week at Marist working in the Admissions Office giving tours and doing paperwork, said Delgiorno.

Although this is the first week the interns will be on the road, they have been preparing for three weeks by meeting with department heads and other Marist staff. Throughout this period the interns were required to meet daily from 8:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m., far more time than the average 15 credit student spends in class.

To become an intern an applicant must meet certain criteria set by the Admissions Office. The internship is open to students of all majors, according to Delgiorno. The Admissions Office is hoping for a large applicant pool this year.

"We're looking for the kids who are sharp kids, who speak well, with good communication skills," said Delgiorno. "It's the kind of internship where you really have to love your product and our product is Marist College."

Work continues on campus patio, ME project

New courtyard is nearly ready by Joe Reynolds

A path behind Chapman that should be converted to a student common area is currently under construction on the Magic Rug.

The project is now in the formwork stage, according to Donaldson. State farm regulations prohibit the installation of a building on a portion of the space.

in addition to the tables, Tarantino said. "They will be permanent and will be covered."

On the patio, the name "The Circle." The Circle is a group of people who will meet on campus and discuss various topics.

So far, the project has included a new sidewalk, a new bench, and a new lighting fixture.

The project is expected to be completed in early November.

For information call the Civic Center at 454-5800.

"It's a good idea for the college and the community," said James Valente, a sophomore. "It should help the college, whether or not it wants to accept it."

The right to vote

On Sunday night, George Bush and Michael Dukakis squared off in Winston-Salem, N.C., in a debate to try and impress the American voting public.

Unfortunately, many of the members of that voting public are caught in a trend that includes political apathy and a general lack of interest in their government. The evidence speaks for itself. In recent years, the American public has neglected their right to vote. Voter turnout on many occasions has dropped to less than 50 percent.

Across the globe, people are being oppressed by governments that have been elected by a small percentage of the population. In Winston-Salem, N.C., in a debate to try and impress the American voting public, George Bush and Michael Dukakis will be vying for another smaller percentage of the electorate.

Voter turnout in many recent elections was less than 50 percent. What a disappointment it must be for them who are not planning on participating in this year's election process, a greater number of students work for a variety of organizations to represent and lead our nation, but many of us do not.

Rather than take an active part in the election process, many of us sit back and wait—willing to complain when the time is right but not willing to shoulder the responsibility of being part of a public whether we realize it or not. While some of us are registered to vote, we do not use this privilege and we must understand that we need to follow the recent trend we've set. If we fail to do so, the election will not be anyone's business but our own.

We cannot make excuses for not voting. If we want our country to move in the direction we wish to see it move, then we must vote. This is the only way we have to change the course of our country and to choose our leaders.

Sports: Darryl Clowers has resigned as the manager of the Student Employment Office.

We as voters towards the 21st century, continue to neglect our political responsibilities. The American voting public should be ashamed of itself.

The United States, as said by members of the British National Party, is "a shambles." This is true, but many of us do not live up to this reputation. The American public should be ashamed of itself.

Female vocalist... Young mom. You feel it in your bones. Debbie Gibson, 18, can put her finger on the pulse of the current generation, and in so doing, is blazing a new trail. It's not an easy one. The generation gap that defines so much of society today is redefining a generation of young women who do not share the same values. Gibson, a rising star in the music world, is using her talent to speak for the young and the disillusioned. With her voice, she is challenging the status quo and demanding change. Gibson's message is clear: we are a generation of the '80s, and we are not going to be ignored.

The Marist College soccer team is getting a lot of bad bounces lately.

The Red Foxes, 1-5 overall and 0-1 in the Northeast Conference, lost a non-conference game to nationally-ranked Adelphi 2-0 Saturday. It was the Red Foxes’ fourth consecutive loss.

The results of Tuesday’s game against Fordham were unavailable as press time. The Red Foxes’ next game is Saturday at Oneonta State at 1 p.m.

In Northeast Conference news, St. Francis (N.Y.) was declared ineligible for this season’s conference tournament in March, to determine which team will get a bid to the NCAA tournament.

The Marist game — as is Marist’s previous game, a 3-1 loss to Robert Morris — the Red Foxes played well, but their opponents just played better, said coach Howard Goldman.

“We had a good day, but they had a better one,” Goldman said. “For a while it was anybody’s game, but they scored their first goal (in the first half) and that helped their confidence.”

Adelphi was ranked ninth in the country going into the game.

Goldman said that freshman defender Phil O’Hara was Marist’s standout player against Adelphi.

O’Hara, who stands 5 feet, 8 inches tall and weighs 140 pounds, was outstanding marking Adelphi’s top scorer, Larry Davis.

Davis, however, managed one of Adelphi’s two goals.

Offensively, the Red Foxes continued their season-long scoring drought.

Marist has scored more than one goal in a game only once this season — in their only victory of the season, a 2-1 win over Fairfield on Sept. 8.

Marist’s next conference game will be against Loyola on Oct. 15. Loyola earned a berth in the NCAA tournament last season. After that game, the Red Foxes’ only other conference game will be against Long Island University on Oct. 26. LIU also made the tournament last season. Both games are away.

Crew opens with strong showing at Head of Hudson by Tim Beser
The crew team rowed its way to first, second and fourth place finishes at the Head of the Hudson Regatta last Saturday at Albany. The Marist crew capped off its season by placing in the regatta.

The Marist crew, rowing in the 3.3 mile course in 19:45 to take first place for the third year running.

The running Red Foxes have sprinted to a 26 and 2 record after only three meets, defeating 13 runners at the King’s Invitational on Sept. 8.

Women’s coach, Maryanne Ceriello, was pleased with their effort coming off the injury list. Ceriello said, “why not?” said Ceriello. “I coached high school for a couple of years in the Syracuse area and I was a co-worker of Ceriello’s at All Sport,” says coach Ceriello.

“College runners are fun people to be around. The girls are here because they love the sport and they want to improve themselves. My position as coach is to provide them with the proper training to do Just that.”

Harriers win another King’s Invitational by Ken St. Onge
The running Red Foxes have sprinted to a 26 and 2 record after only three meets, defeating 13 runners at the King’s Invitational meet, last Saturday.

Winning the King’s Invitational has become a tradition for Marist as the Foxes ran away with first place for the third year running.

Plagued by sickness and previous commitments, the women fielded a team of two runners. Senior, Trish Webster placed 16th with a time of 20:42, followed by Marist (21:06), Ithaca (21:06), Skidmore (21:20) and SUNY Albany (21:50).

“It is the first time we beat Ithaca in the heavyweight eight in 10 years,” said Davis. “We beat Ithaca twice last season and they hadn’t beat our first boat. We beat them by a fair margin. The seconds is three-four boat lengths.”

Ithaca won the men’s race in 19:45, followed by Skidmore (20:03), Ithaca (20:04), Marist (20:18) and SUNY Albany (20:59).

The team of (bow to stern) Ed Scott Kendall again led a determined Marist squad, placing sixth in 27:06. Coach Rich Stevens last week predicted the return of Peter Antes to the varsity lineup would impact the race, and he was right as Antes placed a solid 10th in 27:31.

Freshman Shane Pidgeon’s first effort coming off the injury list was impressive as he placed 17th. Coach Bob Dural placed similarly after being by a sore ankle as he finished 37th but with a respectable time of 18:56.

Marist was able to place eight runners in the top 50 of a 96 runner field. The next meet is October 15 at Le Moyne College. Race time is noon.
