CSL to set guidelines and review clubs

The Council of Student Leaders (CSL) this week is establishing a Chartering Committee in response to an increase in the number of groups requesting club status, according to student government.

The CSL invoked a moratorium — a temporary cease of chartering new clubs — on Feb. 7 to form the new committee and evaluate the status of all student organizations. According to Kevin Desmond, student body president, the moratorium will last at least until Feb. 28.

In addition, CSL will evaluate the status of existing clubs and organizations, in an attempt to weed out very low or non-functioning clubs. Such clubs could face sanctions or loss of their charters, according to student government. Desmond said the students have been relying too heavily on funding from the Financial Board and not on their own fundraising capabilities.

The number of chartered clubs has almost doubled over the last 18 months, Desmond said.

This semester clubs are finding tough competing, in part, from the allocation of an addition of $200,000 to the student government. The competition comes, in part, from the increase in clubs during the last three semesters.

Students, staff: African American, not black, is a statement of heritage

By HELEN ARROYO

While a recent survey shows more people nationwide prefer the term 'black,' Marist students and staff say they prefer 'African American' because it better symbolizes their heritage.

The national survey of 860 African Americans found 72 percent preferred the term 'black.' That figure has caused much discussion throughout the Marist community.

Conducted by the Center for Political and Economic Studies in Washington D.C., the survey also found that only 15 percent favored the term African-American.

Both staff and students were disappointed with the results of that survey and they question its accuracy.

Desmond Murray, assistant director of field experience, said he tends to doubt surveys. "I don't know that the people targeted, or what communities they targeted," said Murray.

Despite the results of the survey, many people prefer the term African-American as a statement of their uncertain heritage.

Debra Weller, a junior from Brooklyn, said she thinks people would rather be called African-American.

"From the people I've talked to, they would rather be called African-American; it makes them feel a sense of pride, a sense of heritage," said Weller.

Tara Parker, a senior from Dover Plains, N.Y., also said the term African-American is better than black.

"There is no continent or country called 'black,'" said Parker. "We need to understand that calling people black American defines not where you come from, but what you look like."

Others said the usage of the term black lends a negative connotation.

"I noticed that the more I learned about my culture, the more involved I became in politics and the more I learned the more I felt that there was a problem with the term black," said Parker.

Cobham said she thinks many try very hard to use "African-American."

"There is a small evolution coming, where people think that the term black lends a negative connotation."

"There is a small evolution coming, where people think that the term black lends a negative connotation," said Cobham.

Despite the results of the survey, many people prefer the term African-American as a statement of their uncertain heritage.

Desmond Murray, assistant director of field experience, said he tends to doubt surveys. "I don't know that the people targeted, or what communities they targeted," said Murray.

Despite the results of the survey, many people prefer the term African-American as a statement of their uncertain heritage.

Desmond Murray, assistant director of field experience, said he tends to doubt surveys. "I don't know that the people targeted, or what communities they targeted," said Murray.

Despite the results of the survey, many people prefer the term African-American as a statement of their uncertain heritage.

Desmond Murray, assistant director of field experience, said he tends to doubt surveys. "I don't know that the people targeted, or what communities they targeted," said Murray.

Despite the results of the survey, many people prefer the term African-American as a statement of their uncertain heritage.

Desmond Murray, assistant director of field experience, said he tends to doubt surveys. "I don't know that the people targeted, or what communities they targeted," said Murray.

Despite the results of the survey, many people prefer the term African-American as a statement of their uncertain heritage.

Desmond Murray, assistant director of field experience, said he tends to doubt surveys. "I don't know that the people targeted, or what communities they targeted," said Murray.

Despite the results of the survey, many people prefer the term African-American as a statement of their uncertain heritage.

Desmond Murray, assistant director of field experience, said he tends to doubt surveys. "I don't know that the people targeted, or what communities they targeted," said Murray.

Despite the results of the survey, many people prefer the term African-American as a statement of their uncertain heritage.

Desmond Murray, assistant director of field experience, said he tends to doubt surveys. "I don't know that the people targeted, or what communities they targeted," said Murray.

Despite the results of the survey, many people prefer the term African-American as a statement of their uncertain heritage.

Desmond Murray, assistant director of field experience, said he tends to doubt surveys. "I don't know that the people targeted, or what communities they targeted," said Murray.

Despite the results of the survey, many people prefer the term African-American as a statement of their uncertain heritage.

Desmond Murray, assistant director of field experience, said he tends to doubt surveys. "I don't know that the people targeted, or what communities they targeted," said Murray.

Despite the results of the survey, many people prefer the term African-American as a statement of their uncertain heritage.

Desmond Murray, assistant director of field experience, said he tends to doubt surveys. "I don't know that the people targeted, or what communities they targeted," said Murray.

Despite the results of the survey, many people prefer the term African-American as a statement of their uncertain heritage.

Desmond Murray, assistant director of field experience, said he tends to doubt surveys. "I don't know that the people targeted, or what communities they targeted," said Murray.

Despite the results of the survey, many people prefer the term African-American as a statement of their uncertain heritage.

Desmond Murray, assistant director of field experience, said he tends to doubt surveys. "I don't know that the people targeted, or what communities they targeted," said Murray.

Despite the results of the survey, many people prefer the term African-American as a statement of their uncertain heritage.

Desmond Murray, assistant director of field experience, said he tends to doubt surveys. "I don't know that the people targeted, or what communities they targeted," said Murray.

Despite the results of the survey, many people prefer the term African-American as a statement of their uncertain heritage.

Desmond Murray, assistant director of field experience, said he tends to doubt surveys. "I don't know that the people targeted, or what communities they targeted," said Murray.

Despite the results of the survey, many people prefer the term African-American as a statement of their uncertain heritage.

Desmond Murray, assistant director of field experience, said he tends to doubt surveys. "I don't know that the people targeted, or what communities they targeted," said Murray.

Despite the results of the survey, many people prefer the term African-American as a statement of their uncertain heritage.

Desmond Murray, assistant director of field experience, said he tends to doubt surveys. "I don't know that the people targeted, or what communities they targeted," said Murray.

Despite the results of the survey, many people prefer the term African-American as a statement of their uncertain heritage.

Desmond Murray, assistant director of field experience, said he tends to doubt surveys. "I don't know that the people targeted, or what communities they targeted," said Murray.

Despite the results of the survey, many people prefer the term African-American as a statement of their uncertain heritage.

Desmond Murray, assistant director of field experience, said he tends to doubt surveys. "I don't know that the people targeted, or what communities they targeted," said Murray.

Despite the results of the survey, many people prefer the term African-American as a statement of their uncertain heritage.

Desmond Murray, assistant director of field experience, said he tends to doubt surveys. "I don't know that the people targeted, or what communities they targeted," said Murray.

Despite the results of the survey, many people prefer the term African-American as a statement of their uncertain heritage.

Desmond Murray, assistant director of field experience, said he tends to doubt surveys. "I don't know that the people targeted, or what communities they targeted," said Murray.

Despite the results of the survey, many people prefer the term African-American as a statement of their uncertain heritage.

Desmond Murray, assistant director of field experience, said he tends to doubt surveys. "I don't know that the people targeted, or what communities they targeted," said Murray.

Despite the results of the survey, many people prefer the term African-American as a statement of their uncertain heritage.

Desmond Murray, assistant director of field experience, said he tends to doubt surveys. "I don't know that the people targeted, or what communities they targeted," said Murray.

Despite the results of the survey, many people prefer the term African-American as a statement of their uncertain heritage.

Desmond Murray, assistant director of field experience, said he tends to doubt surveys. "I don't know that the people targeted, or what communities they targeted," said Murray.

Despite the results of the survey, many people prefer the term African-American as a statement of their uncertain heritage.

Desmond Murray, assistant director of field experience, said he tends to doubt surveys. "I don't know that the people targeted, or what communities they targeted," said Murray.

Despite the results of the survey, many people prefer the term African-American as a statement of their uncertain heritage.

Desmond Murray, assistant director of field experience, said he tends to doubt surveys. "I don't know that the people targeted, or what communities they targeted," said Murray.

Despite the results of the survey, many people prefer the term African-American as a statement of their uncertain heritage.

Desmond Murray, assistant director of field experience, said he tends to doubt surveys. "I don't know that the people targeted, or what communities they targeted," said Murray.

Despite the results of the survey, many people prefer the term African-American as a statement of their uncertain heritage.

Desmond Murray, assistant director of field experience, said he tends to doubt surveys. "I don't know that the people targeted, or what communities they targeted," said Murray.

Despite the results of the survey, many people prefer the term African-American as a statement of their uncertain heritage.

Desmond Murray, assistant director of field experience, said he tends to doubt surveys. "I don't know that the people targeted, or what communities they targeted," said Murray.
Up to Date

THAT'S ENTERTAINMENT

• See tracking shot in the Finale Lounge at 3 p.m. Tonight.

• Attend a showing of the African American sculpture exhibition in Lowell Thomas room 121.

• See "The Blues Brothers" at the Mid-Hudson Civic Center. Shows are at 8 p.m.

• Hear "The Voice of Latin Rock" in WAMC's "Sunday at 2 p.m. Ticket prices for about three and a half weeks, 2 p.m. in the Campus Theatre.

• Clown around at the Royal Hanneford Circus, see above.

• Attend a discussion about the African American sculpture exhibition in Lowell Thomas room 121.

• Attend a showing of the African American sculpture exhibition in Lowell Thomas room 121.

• See "The Blues Brothers" at the Mid-Hudson Civic Center. Shows are at 8 p.m.

• Hear "The Voice of Latin Rock" in WAMC's "Sunday at 2 p.m. Ticket prices for about three and a half weeks, 2 p.m. in the Campus Theatre.

• Clown around at the Royal Hanneford Circus, see above.

• Attend a discussion about the African American sculpture exhibition in Lowell Thomas room 121.

• Attend a showing of the African American sculpture exhibition in Lowell Thomas room 121.

• See "The Blues Brothers" at the Mid-Hudson Civic Center. Shows are at 8 p.m.

• Hear "The Voice of Latin Rock" in WAMC's "Sunday at 2 p.m. Ticket prices for about three and a half weeks, 2 p.m. in the Campus Theatre.

• Clown around at the Royal Hanneford Circus, see above.

• Attend a discussion about the African American sculpture exhibition in Lowell Thomas room 121.

• Attend a showing of the African American sculpture exhibition in Lowell Thomas room 121.

• See "The Blues Brothers" at the Mid-Hudson Civic Center. Shows are at 8 p.m.

• Hear "The Voice of Latin Rock" in WAMC's "Sunday at 2 p.m. Ticket prices for about three and a half weeks, 2 p.m. in the Campus Theatre.

• Clown around at the Royal Hanneford Circus, see above.

• Attend a discussion about the African American sculpture exhibition in Lowell Thomas room 121.

• Attend a showing of the African American sculpture exhibition in Lowell Thomas room 121.

• See "The Blues Brothers" at the Mid-Hudson Civic Center. Shows are at 8 p.m.

• Hear "The Voice of Latin Rock" in WAMC's "Sunday at 2 p.m. Ticket prices for about three and a half weeks, 2 p.m. in the Campus Theatre.

• Clown around at the Royal Hanneford Circus, see above.

• Attend a discussion about the African American sculpture exhibition in Lowell Thomas room 121.
The older you get, the diller your birthdays seem to become

By DAN HALL

The circle of joy was more festive the evening before than any time since you were a child. But why? How can it be that you, the one that everyone looks forward to, the birthday boy, is so sad today? Everything was wonderful before, but now it's different. People are no longer as happy as they used to be.

The reason is simple: the birthday party is over. You've reached a new level of maturity, and with it comes a new set of responsibilities.

As you grow older, you must become more self-sufficient. You can no longer rely on your family and friends to take care of you. You must learn to take care of yourself.

Furthermore, you must begin to think about your future. You must start to consider what kind of person you want to be and what kind of career you want to pursue.

But most importantly, you must start to think about the legacy you want to leave behind. You must start to think about the kind of person you want to become.

So, the next time you celebrate your birthday, remember that you're not just another year older. You're a new person, with new responsibilities and new goals.

And don't forget to look back on your past, and to cherish the memories you've made. For they are the foundation upon which your future will be built.
BIOGRAPHY

Desmond's work on stage included

BIOGRAPHY

Desmond's work on stage included

BIOGRAPHY

Desmond's work on stage included

BIOGRAPHY

Desmond's work on stage included
Despite milestone, women drop two

Galarneau reaches 1,000

In the opening minutes of the game against Mount St. Mary's, Danielle Galarneau scored her 1,000th career point. This achievement was significant not only for Galarneau herself, but for the entire Mount St. Mary's team as well.

Galarneau joins the ranks of only a few players to reach this milestone in the history of the program. Her achievement is a testament to her hard work and dedication to the sport.

The game was a close one, with both teams putting up a strong fight. However, Galarneau's performance was the highlight of the night, and she proved to be an invaluable asset to her team.

With this milestone achieved, Galarneau's focus will now shift to helping her team secure a victory in the remaining games of the season. Her leadership and experience will be crucial in leading her team to success.

Hockey

The Lady Red Foxes fell to the Mount St. Mary's Mountnuns 3-1 earlier today.

Although the game started off well for the Lady Red Foxes, they were unable to capitalize on their early chances and ended up on the losing end.

In the first period, the Lady Red Foxes controlled the play and had several scoring opportunities. However, the Mount St. Mary's defense held firm and prevented the Lady Red Foxes from breaking the deadlock.

In the second period, the Mount St. Mary's offense finally started to click and scored two goals to take a 2-0 lead. The Lady Red Foxes were unable to find the back of the net, and the game continued into the third period.

In the third period, the Mount St. Mary's offense continued to put pressure on the Lady Red Foxes defense. Despite their best efforts, the Lady Red Foxes were unable to find the back of the net, and the game ended with a 3-1 victory for the Mount St. Mary's Mountnuns.

Despite the loss, the Lady Red Foxes showed their resilience and fight. They will look to bounce back in their next game and continue to work towards their goal of securing a playoff spot.

Alumni cagers return to court

By STEVEN SCHMITT

The Red Foxes lost their last game of the regular season to the Mount St. Mary's Mountnuns 73-66. The loss marked the end of the Lady Red Foxes' season.

The game started off well for the Lady Red Foxes, who were able to take an early lead. However, the Mount St. Mary's defense was able to hold them off, and the game continued into the second half.

In the second half, the Mount St. Mary's offense took over, scoring several key goals to take the lead. The Lady Red Foxes were unable to find the back of the net, and the game ended with a 73-66 victory for the Mount St. Mary's Mountnuns.

Despite the loss, the Lady Red Foxes showed their resilience and fight. They will look to bounce back in their next game and continue to work towards their goal of securing a playoff spot.
Globetrotters' showmanship still dazzling

by BRETT RIOLO
Staff Writer

The Harlem Globetrotters' 65th Anniversary season stopped in Poughkeepsie last Saturday and put on an entertaining show for the thousands gathered at the James J. McCann Center.

Although the outcome was expected — the Globetrotters defeated the Washington Generals for the umpteenth time — some of the highlights witnessed by the audience will be in the crowd's memory for the first time.

"This is the first time I have seen them live," said Marist sophomore Tom Arcuri. "It is a much better show live then on television. Everyone was laughing — teens, teens and children — it was just a great time for everyone involved!"

Half court shots, fancy passing and a whole lot of jokes were many of the highlights witnessed by the audience.

"They are the best," said 12-year-old Mike Borello. "I have seen them on TV and it is great when they fake the other team out."

Although others enjoyed the showmanship, there were other aspects of the game that were enjoyed.

...See GLOBE page 11

Tonight, the men's basketball will try for its longest winning streak of the year — three games. Marist, fresh off of two straight Northeast Conference victories, will be in Brooklyn, N.Y. this weekend when it attempt to average a tie with St. Francis (N.Y.)

The Red Foxes will also be looking for their second straight road victory. Monday night's 72-67 defeat of Long Island University-87,85, thanks to a last second layup by Bobby Reasbeck.

The winning streak started last Thursday at the McCann Center when the Red Foxes beat Mount St. Mary's, 98-92. It was the first conference win for the Red Foxes since January 25. Against Long Island, Reasbeck, making his third start of the season, quickly turned from the goat to the hero.

Steve Patao then inbounded the ball for the Red Foxes to Fred Ingles, who then found Reasbeck running toward the basket. Ingles pass was on target and Reasbeck was able to avoid the Long Island defender.

Ingles led the Red Foxes on offense with 12 points, 26 of which came in the first half, and grabbing 12 rebounds. Ingles was double-teamed effectively in the second half.

Reasbeck, Patao and Andy Lake each notched 11 points for Marist. Reggie Gaut, who did not play against Mt. St. Mary's, chipped in with 10 points.

Reasbeck may continue to find himself in the starting lineup for the last two games of the regular season because Marist has won every game in which he has played.

Defensively, the Red Foxes shot Long Island down late in the second half, holding them to just two points in the last eight minutes of play.

Marist played Long Island without the services of Brett Bouch and Deorene Bronson. The freshmen were missing for missing a scheduled academic meeting, a violation of the team's academic policy. Neither player made the trip to the game. The last time Marist played a game in 1990, the freshmen Regina Chambers curfew when the team was on the road.

Last week against St. Mary's, a different Marist team emerged from the locker room. Perhaps it was the return of senior captain George Slaughi, who had been sidelined with injuries since Jan. 4. Perhaps it was the insertion of Tom Fitzsimmons and Bobby Reasbeck into the starting lineup. Whatever it was, it was effective.

Both teams played well in the first half, as the Mount went into halftime with a 45-41 lead. However, in the second half, the Red Foxes came firing and never looked back.

"We should be playing this well," Coach Magarity said. "It was a combination of things, we got the breaks and got some big contributions from people." Ingles broke out of his two game slump to lead the Red Foxes with 30 points and nine rebounds.

"With Ingles having a big game, we are in a position to win some ball games," said Magarity.