Alex Haley, Pulitzer Prize winner, will be the speaker for "Roots," which was published in 1976 and became the biggest best-seller in history. He will meet with the renowned author will be student representatives and Library Director John McGinty.

The autobiography of Malcolm X, written with the controversial Malcolm X, was published in 1965 and written with the controversial author.

The novel was written after a 12-hour television mini-series, which in its seven-night run drew about 130 million viewers.

"We will have a very high-quality audience," said Hanley. "Alex has given them a sense of pride.

"Roots," his second book, became the biggest best-seller in U.S. publishing history, selling approximately 700,000 copies. It is now published in about 30 different languages.

Born on Aug. 11, 1921, in Ithaca N.Y., Haley graduated from high school at the age of 15 and attended college for two years. Then he enlisted in the United States Coast Guard as a messboy. His writing career began when he wrote love letters for his fellow shipmates, Hanley said.

Haley is named Chief Journalist for the Coast Guard in 1952. He retired in 1959, after 20 years of service and became a full-time freelance magazine writer.

Haley now lives between his 120-acre farm in Knoxville, Tenn., and his townhouse in Los Angeles. But because of the heavy demand for his lecturing appearances, Haley travels extensively throughout the country.

"Alex is open and enthusiastic about lecturing at Marist," Hanley said. "Most of all he likes to go to the universities and colleges and spend time with the students."

Haley has made over 150 appearances at schools throughout the country.

Two students angry over Spring Break smoke out

Two sophomores are seeking compensation for damage to their personal belongings caused by a smoke machine, which was used without their knowledge during a training drill over Spring Break.

Sophomores are planning out their schedule for their upcoming classes and are still growing.

Vassar courses, will complete the number of its students in the program and pay a "substantial" amount of money for them to take classes at Marist, according to vanderHedden.

"We are trying to do our best to explore with the dean (of Vassar) other ways to continue this arrangement," vanderHedden said.

"But right now, it is correct to say we are phasing-out the program."

Second ‘Turtles’ film is oozing with problems

bY BRIAN McNEIL

In the midst of a steady release date of June 2, a new wave ofTeenage Mutant Ninja Turtles has started to hittheaters. The film, called “Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles: Out of the Shadows,” continues the story of the four fictional anthropomorphic turtles as they battle against Kraang, a team of evil turtles, in order to save their home in New York City.

The film has received mixed reviews from critics, with some praising the film’s animation and action sequences, while others criticize its plot and dialogue. However, many fans have enjoyed the film’s nostalgic appeal, as it brings back the classic characters and themes from the original television series.

Despite the mixed reviews, the film has performed well at the box office, grossing over $200 million in its opening weekend. It will be interesting to see how the film continues to perform in the coming weeks.

Student guided pigs get answering service

bY ANGIE ARNSON

When Eileen Kearney, a 21-year-old student at Marist College, arrived at her job at the Student Housing Office, she was greeted by the sound of a pig bleating and a student saying, “Hello, this is the Student Housing Office.”

Kearney is one of many students who work in the Student Housing Office and have been using a new answering service to help them with their jobs.

The answering service was implemented by Marist College’s Information Technology department as a way to improve communication between students and staff.

“I love it,” said Kearney. “It’s really helpful. It makes my job a lot easier.”

The service is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week, and students can call the number to receive assistance with a variety of tasks, such as making room changes or handling complaints.

The service has been well-received by students, who say it is a valuable resource for those working in the Student Housing Office.

“I think it’s a great idea,” said one student. “It’s good to know that someone is there to help you even when you’re not in the office.”

The answering service is a part of Marist College’s commitment to providing excellent customer service and improving communication among students and staff.

Environmental studies chief Hill to leave

bY BARBARA JOYCE

Director of Environmental Studies for seven years, Brian Hill, is leaving Marist College to take a new position. The news comes as a surprise to many, as Hill has been a popular and respected member of the Marist community.

Hill has been a driving force behind many of Marist College’s environmental initiatives, including the creation of the Environmental Studies program. He has also been involved in many campus-wide projects and has been an active participant in the Dutchess County Environmental Partnership.

In his time at Marist, Hill has been a vocal advocate for environmental issues, and has worked tirelessly to promote sustainability on campus.

Hill will be missed by many, but his legacy will live on at Marist College. His contributions to the Environmental Studies program and his dedication to the environment will be remembered for years to come.

After the return from Spring Break comes the creative yet often tedious task of resume writing. Many anxious moments of word choice, experience gaps, and awkward questions for your parcay tell you that you are not alone in your panic. There are ways to make the resume look more impressive and to avoid some glaring deficiencies on your transcript.

Resume writing is much like completing a college application. You are asked to present information about yourself, your background, and your goals, and account for your past activities. An easy way to improve the resume is to bring in the right tone, which can make even the best accomplishments sound dull. Resumes are written in a format that is easy to scan, easy to read, and easy to understand.

The resume’s format needs some types of rough guidelines. Most resumes are divided into three main sections: personal information, educational background, and employment history. The three main sections are followed by a well-written biography, which is the best way to introduce yourself to the reader.

The Library’s newest program includes some types of rough guidelines. Many resumes are divided into three main sections: personal information, educational background, and employment history. Candy for all baskets at local sweet shop

by LYNNARIE BRUST

Easter eggs, bunnies, hand-filled chocolates... At the Caffe Clio, you can buy these and anything else you can imagine. The store is a haven for people who love all things sweet, especially around the environment.

“Conversation bars are the most popular item,” said Shopper Trippoli said of the 1-pound, solid chocolate confection. “We've caught some slack from this, too.”

Strippoli said there is a difference between the classic Easter Egg to the 1-pound, chocolate fish.

“Last year, we sold more than 3,000 Easter eggs, bunnies, hand-filled baskets and other kinds of unique Easter candy made imported chocolate and some of the 1,500 imported chocolate and some of the 1,500

“When the Easter season is over, the Caffe will wind up making anything sweet.” proclaimed Strippoli.

Trieste said the team did well. Despite poor playing conditions, we have seen a lot of improvement.

Patty Bush, a resident director of the Van Hall, is also involved in the project. She said, “We are working to recreate a garden that will be a passive learning experience for all students.”

Red Foxes down Queens for first win

by MIKE O'FARRELL

The lacrosse team earned its first win of the season Monday when it downed Queens College 11-10 in overtime.

The Red Foxes now have an overall mark of 1-2 while posting an 0-2 mark in the Knickerbocker Conference.

Senior co-captain Brian Hanifin scored the game winner from the right side of the net while the Red Foxes had a man advantage.

Hanifin, who led the offensive attack with four goals, said the final play did not go as planned.

"It was designed to start from behind the net but they let me wide open and I was able to sneak in," he said.

Mark Reynolds, Head Coach Tom Diehl, making his debut on Leonidoff Field, said although the game plan did not go as designed, he welcomed the outcome.

"I teach the kids to follow concepts, not just specific plays," he said. "The original idea didn't work and they recognized that the concept was there and took advantage of it.

In the first period, sophomore Jim Krege put the Red Foxes on the board early. Hanifin also added...

Crew shell splits in accident

A crew shell splits in two on the Hudson River March 10 due to waves caused by a passing tug boat.

Three Marist freshmen teams were practicing on the river when the accident occurred at about 7:35 a.m. The varsity crews were training in West Virginia.

The men's freshmen eight crew was damaged when the tug boat passed through the practice area at its normal speed without slowing down.

The boat made it through the first set of waves, but could not survive the second set, according to the office of sports media relations.

The boat could not withstand the "run around" of the water and split the boat in two pieces. Rather than being parallel to the wake in order to ride out the shell, the shell was perpendicular and the force of the water was too strong.

"We were unable to stay parallel," said coxswain Holly Boynton, a freshman. "Everything went so fast."

After the accident, the crew was picked up and brought to the west side of the river, according to Boynton.

"Things just happened so fast," she said. "It was handled well, there wasn't any panic. We were basically just scared. The coaches did a good job.

Once on the west side, some rowers were brought back to the Poughkeepsie side and some went to nearby houses to call authorities and "to keep warm," according to Boynton. The water temperature was 33 degrees.

After being taken to St. Francis Hospital for evaluation, the crew was released when their body temperature returned to its normal level. There were no injuries.

There is supposed to be an understanding among passing boats that when travelling through the area, they should be aware of the crew on the water, according to Dan Sullivan, director of sports media relations.

"The boats are supposed to slow their engines and just cruise through the area if there are crews on the water," said Sullivan. "This boat just kept going at a normal speed.

"The coaches did a great job, considering the circumstances," Sullivan said.

The shell is not salvageable, according to Sullivan. Only the stern half has been found and that wasn't even found the day of the accident," she said.

Dear Mom: Send me cookies and a winner

Mom's are great. They seem to have a knack for knowing anything that's been happening in your life before you even tell them.

They know if you are in trouble. They know if your parents are in trouble. They even know if you did something you shouldn't have done.

Sometimes, we take our Mom for granted. Whether it is a nice batch of homemade cookies, a basket of clean laundry or some money, Mom always comes through,

My Mom is into sports. While she is also a fan of horse racing, my Mom has developed a liking for most college sports, basketball, baseball and basketball. (No doubt she acquired her taste of these sports because of me and she's always watching those sports on television.)

Because I have only two teams left—UNLV and Duke—in my NCAA tournament pool, I decided to go to Mom for some advice.

She didn't hesitate on how to pick the remainder of the games.

"My reason behind this was simple. If Mom truly does know best, then how can I go wrong?"

Now, my Mom has some interesting views on college basketball.

Take socks for example. She believes that the players should keep their socks pulled up all the time because it looks silly if they are wrinkled around their ankles.

Then there is the praying on the line. Mom doesn't like players who do the sign of the cross before they shoot a free throw. She believes that if they are going to pray then it should be for something more meaningful rather than a mere flesh job.

According to Mom, Duke University will again fail to win a national championship.

The Blue Devils have been to the Final Four eight times without coming away champions. My Mom says that this year will be no different.

Even though Duke has the talent to beat UNLV, Mom says it won't happen because of the Blue Devils' coach Mike Krzyzewski. I tried to explain to her than Coach "K" is one of the best in the business and given a week to prepare, he may be able to pull off the upset. "Doesn't matter," she said.

"Why, I asked."

"He looks too much like Hitler and that little Hurley is a cry baby," Oh.

In the other semi-final, Kansas will continue its role as underdog. The Jayhawks, according to Mom, will knock off Dean Smith's North Carolina club.

I didn't even bother to tell her about the legacy Smith is building and how his club has come on late in the season. Instead, I just waited for the reasoning."

According to Mom, Kansas will face UNLV. "They wear undershirts," she said.

"They wear underpants," I countered.

"No, she said."

"What was she thinking. She meant that nobody can beat UNLV because they are too strong and put fear into their opponents. It is the type of thing that spreads over the ice and effects the younger guys and the rest of the team in a positive manner."

"Okay, I said. "Just don't be so sure."

"It's easy to say that if we had a full squad the entire year we would have been better off," she said. "But the way I look at it is considering what we faced, we did a great job. I think we had one helluva season and they should be proud of that."
