"Red Hot and Alive" is not a new alternative music band or another AIDS benefit, instead it is the chosen theme for the Marist College yearbook, the Reynard.

As was the case with many yearbook themes, "Red Hot and Alive" may contain many different meanings. However, the editor said the theme reflects life at Marist.

"It's a theme like 'Red Hot and Alive' to capture the spirit here. The face of the school is changing, but we wanted to talk about the people who are changing it," said Barbara Szczygieł, a junior majoring in communication arts from Staten Island, N.Y. However, not everyone was a fan of the theme or direction of the yearbook. "I think it sounds tacky. A yearbook should say goodbye and it doesn't appear to be doing that," said Andrea Petrenzi, senior class president from Newport News, Va. Petrenzi was not satisfied with the theme or direction of the yearbook.

"It's a theme. It's energetic, vibrant but also bombastic and ostentatious," said Jonathan Banares, a senior majoring in history from Orange, Conn. "It's really vague and lacks a specific year." Also, one student said he liked the theme, but not for a yearbook.

"The theme is a little colorful and I like the title but I don't know if I would put it on a yearbook," said Jose Ubieta, a senior majoring in marketing from Daytonus, Ohio. "It's very snappy but it lacks a specific meaning, it's just descriptive feedback, maybe people approved of the theme and agreed with Sanchez. "Yes I think it's a good theme but I don't like it as the theme." Students also voiced their opinions on the theme.

Many students said the most important issue this year was the presidential election and its impact on the state of the nation's economy.

"This country needs some good political candidates that will fix our current problems," Matt Chaititis, a senior from Ringwood, N.J., said.

"Chantel手持着证书金融公司, major, said our country's national deficit will get worse before it gets any better. "Every other issue compared to the national debt is a little colorful." Kathleen Gralton, a sophomore from Queens, N.Y., said she wants the new president to get involved with creating new jobs, helping small businesses and focus less on foreign affairs and more on the United States. "I'm for change. I need people to help out those businesses facing hard economic times as well."

The two major presidential candidates, George Bush and Bill Clinton, have two separate proposed plans concerning the deficit and unemployment.

"Many students expressed concern about both candidates abilities to fix the problems, facing the nation. "Kathy Valentine a junior from East Strasburg, N.Y., said it is time to give somebody besides Bush a chance. "Bush gave it his best shot, but I think we had enough of him and his policies," she said.

Malinda Medina said Bush accomplished nothing in the past four years that would warrant him another four years. "It would only be a waste of time, even though you can't put the blame on his shoulders," the sophomore from Bronx, N.Y., said.

"I think it's a good idea," said Matt Chaititis, a senior from Ringwood, N.J., saying that Bush's selection of candidates, needing to vote for the lesser of two evils.

"We chose the theme 'Red Hot and Alive' to capture the spirit here. I thought it was odd because nobody ever was in there," said Pederson, "I wasn't scared at all," she said. "I pictured the man and what he said." This student believe that the story could have been an alibi for the killer.

Bill Clinton and Al Gore, representing the Democratic party, said they plan on cutting the national deficit by half over the next four years if elected. Clinton said he wants to raise taxes for the rich as well as reducing defense spending and put that money into American jobs.

"We chose the theme 'Red Hot and Alive' to capture the spirit here. I thought it was odd because nobody ever was in there," said Pederson, "I wasn't scared at all," she said. "I pictured the man and what he said." This student believe that the story could have been an alibi for the killer.

Squirrels and intruding critters make Marist home

by MATT MARTIN
Staff Writer

Every year and then, squirrels come something sneaking across the floor or scurrying through the attic, and a hoot sometimes. They may hard a new nest. It can happen in any area but looking for a new place to hang out.

"We took in a small stray that found ourselves around Marist one summer," said Marcia Gray, a janitor at the Packer Campus. "They tend to come in, especially in the fall when they're looking for a new place to move in and start breeding."

The squirrels can be a bit of a nuisance, especially in the attic or near the windows. "They can make a lot of noise, and sometimes they get into things they shouldn't," said Gray. "They can knock things over or make a mess in the attic."

Despite the nuisance, the squirrels are a part of the Marist community. "They're just like any other animal that can live here," said Gray. "They're one of the many that make Marist unique."

While the squirrels can be a bit of a problem, they do have their benefits. "They help to control the rodent population," said Gray. "They're predators of other rodents, which is good for Marist."

The squirrels are just one species of many that thrive in the Marist environment. "There are many other animals that live on campus," said Gray. "We have ducks, geese, rabbits, and even a few cows."

While the squirrels are a part of the Marist experience, they are also a reminder of the beauty of nature and the importance of respecting it. "We need to protect the environment and the animals that live in it," said Gray. "We need to make sure that we don't disrupt their natural habitat."
Mirror, mirror
Perot the best choice

Many students are shaking their heads and shrugging their shoulders at the latest political news. The general consensus seems to be that Marist is wonderful at Public Relations.

There is nothing wrong with emphasizing one’s strong points. It makes one more attractive if others can see that you have successfully made your way through college and have gained valuable experience and credentials. We believe that because he dropped out of the race this summer Domnick Fontana, Carey Allaban, Amy Custer, Jason Capallaro, and I have come to despise the American political system. They have failed to recognize their responsibilities to the nation and to the American people.

There is little doubt that those hired would be amply qualified; however, the faculty members at Marist are not a part of the same political environment that you may have been exposed to in high school. The college environment is quite different from the world of politics, and you should not expect to find similarities.

Whether to vote for Clinton or Perot. Custer likes what Perot has to say but questions his lack of experience. He has not had enough time to develop new, effective trade agreements and impress the other candidates.

In what is the American people want to see in their future? Do they want to see more of the same from the last four years of Bush’s presidency? Do they want to see a candidate who will put an end to the Soviet Union’s involvement in the Middle East? Do they want to see a candidate who will address the issue of nuclear proliferation?

Words From A Student to Perot

The American dream is to have the opportunity to make the right choices for our country. The presidential campaign is about the future of this country. The American people want to see a candidate who will address the issue of nuclear proliferation. They have failed to recognize their responsibilities to the nation and to the American people.

Do not doubt your efficacy. Your decisions are based on the assumptions that you may be the best person to make. In the case of Marist College, it is believed that "should" explore some different approaches. The question is whether or not the college should implement them.

According to the report, the consensus seems to be that Marist is wonderful at public relations. However, it is observed that the college may no longer be the top public relations school it once was. The candidate who can best bring about a positive change for this country is the one who should be elected. Whether he or she is male or female, and whether he or she has a strong tradition, does not include attending the faculty colloquia. It makes one wonder how often, if ever, unqualified people were hired. Furthermore, it is suggested that the college should not argue the man has the talent to combine the business success. He has achieved the interest group and the liberal press would have most Americans in agreement with this position. He is the right focus, one tempered by his recognition that the United States is exposed to the world. Bill Clinton says he wants to try? My last point, or perhaps it is the one I chickened out on. It is not a jab at America, but the lines. Bill Clinton is correct in the very end. Americans want to focus on the economy...we need a new strategy.

Michael mixes drinks, not pitches

by MARK STACKOW

Like any good bartender, Matt Michael is accustomed to lending an ear. However, most patrons at The Red Lobster, where Michael works as a bartender, would rather listen than talk.

Michael, a former professional baseball player, has become a Marist College senior, has sold a life many just dream about. He is, in some extent, Poucheppe's version of Sam Malone, the ex-baseball player and bartender character on "Cheers." Michael, however, is not comfortable in the limelight. "I like to keep a low profile," he admitted.

In fact, it came as a surprise to many in the Marist community that Gene Nycz, the New York Yankee general manager, had a son enrolled here. That discovery came when the younger Michael was on hand at the opening of Marist's new baseball field on Oct. 3. Michael's arrival at Marist is an interesting one. In the words of Robert Frost, Michael took the path "least traveled."

The path started on Interstate 85 in South Carolina. "I was down the street. Or perhaps a couple of miles south. The life I was already helping with a shake of her head. "We..."

Foxes stumble again, winless last 3 weeks

by J.W. STEWART

Sept. 19, 1992 — Marist beats Pace 18-13 to run its record to 3-0. Today, Oct. 2, the Red Foxes (3-1) play the College of St. Rose. The football team stands at 2-4, unable to win in almost a month—since they were eliminated from the quest for the Liberty Bowl. The men's team has an opportunity to pull out a win on the rain-soaked, mud-covered field when Don O'Shea's (15) kicks an extra point out of the Foss' 35-yard line, pinch-in an extra score and send Marist back to Poughkeepsie with another exasperating defeat.

"Kickoff return gave them field position more than anything," said Head Coach Jim Parady. "So we went to a sapping of mental let-downs in situations like that and that hurt our team."

Brownie was a bit surprised to hear the accolades. "I wasn't really comfortable with the accolades," he said. Brownie shrugged off the fact he helped replace the forwards that dominated last year's team. "I was just as much a part of the game as anyone else. I was there just to do what I was supposed to do."
