The ad details the new Communication and the Arts division, which recently split from the old Arts and Letters division, and states a strong preference will be given to candidates who have earned a doctorate or have proven themselves in the field of communication arts; who are innovative leaders; and who can understand and appreciate "emerging communication technologies" in the telecommunication era.

"This person will have to have impact in and out of the college," Cool said. "He has to represent communication arts for the college. He has to get our name out there."

"And it would help if he walked on water," she said jokingly. There is no deadline for applications, but the expected starting date of the new chairperson is July 1, as listed in the ad.

"We've gotten off too much of a late start, we'll be lucky to get anyone," said Berry jokingly. "I think the Marist student body has been the biggest asset to promoting the school," said Wood. "The enthusiasm of the students and faculty is exceptional."

Applications up from previous year

Marist has received more than a five-percent increase in freshmen applications for the fall semester of 1992, according to a Board of Trustees Report.

"We have 4,332 applications this year; up from last year's 4,110," said Vice President of Admissions and Enrollment Planning Harry Wood. Marist enrolled 904 freshmen last year, its largest class, despite a national recession in high-school graduates, a decrease in state and federal aid and proposed budget cuts.

According to Michelle Erickson, director of admissions, Marist will only accept 830 freshmen this fall, to ensure students receive adequate housing and have smaller classes.

Marist could lose $500,000 in Bundy Aid, state aid given to students, and another $500,000 in Tuition Assistance Program (TAP) funds, if Gov. Mario Cuomo's proposed budget cuts are passed.

Because it is concerned about losing some aid monies, admissions is expanding private and corporate scholarships to create financial-aid packages for those students who need help paying college bills, said Erickson.

"Marist is battling the competition by creating a competitive financial-aid package in order to attract future applicants," said Erickson.

Marist has received 432 early-decision confirmations from applicants. According to Wood and Erickson, a number of factors account for Marist's success in increased admissions applications such as a new Public Relations strategy, an increased number of new publications, a multi-image slide feature and the increased involvement of faculty and students. The slide feature on Marist was created by an outside public relations firm and is used for on-campus tours and promotion.

Faculty and students get involved in the admissions process by phone calling prospective students before and after the student's acceptance.

"I think the Marist Student body has been the biggest asset to promoting the school," said Wood. "The enthusiasm of the students and faculty is exceptional."

Applications sponsored an Open House for accepted students on April 5 and will sponsor another one on April 11. "We will be giving students an opportunity to visit Marist if they haven't already and to also meet the faculty, administration and students," said Erickson.

This fall's class is coming to Marist from a diverse geographic area and is expected to be comprised of 55 percent women and 45 percent men. The traditional demographic emphasis on New England/college-Berkshire school population, has shifted greatly. In the past, the majority of students came from New York/Connecticut areas, but now the largest number of students are coming from other northeast areas.

"Marist now has a diverse and a regional representation of the Middle Atlantic and New England states," said Wood.

According to Admissions figures, for the first time, there are more out-of-state than New York/New Jersey area students. Farmers of the freshmen are from New York and there has been a 34 percent increase in the number of up-state New York students.

Enrollment in New England has also increased 70 percent with Connecticut being the replacing New Jersey as the neighboring states. New Hampshire and Pennsylvania have quadrupled the number of students coming to Marist, as well, said the figure.

Marist has also increased its number of minority students, who account for over 10 percent of the freshmen class.

When Melissa Berry's alarm clock went off at 7:30 Thursday morning, she slowly rolled out of bed with only five hours of sleep after eating her breakfast bagel and skimming through morning newspapers. "I am so dedicated to something," Berry said. "I think it reflects who I am."

In Hollywood, Oscars fail to silence 'Lambs'

Once again the academy winners have come and gone. They may have presented in a show piddling out only 9 minutes of some semblance in their value. For the most part the audience were done with some style, and pin officials after much analysis merely used the X-Men Clip as a means to an end. Now, it's time to talk about the dust.

The decision made the most shocking of the night; which is the winning of last year's best picture, "Lambs," by Kevin Lebov.

"Lambs" is a film that failed to silence its own critics. After an eight-year hiatus, the film finally received the award after a record deal! The late father, and continually insists records. Also, check out "The End of Silence," which I adored. I didn't know much about the band but it was still visually pleasing and showed some nice shots. The first single is called "The end."

Proovative 'Thunderheart,' a thriller with a different style

by MARC LEPIS

When I first saw the promo for this film, I was a little skeptical. I mean, "Thunderheart?" Really? This is one of the first movies to be produced by Martin Scorsese and Mel Gibson, and is inspired by the novel written by Martin Scorsese and Gibson. I don't want to sound like a snob, but I'm kind of excited to see this film as it's inspired by the book of Saint Wenceslas. The plot follows the life of a young man, who is known for his kindness and generosity. He is a symbol of hope and a beacon of light in the dark.

The director дов gui the movie is very different from the novel. The producer, Simon Farrow, is known for his work with Martin Scorsese, so I'm sure he will do an excellent job with the film.

Also, I heard Desperado was helmed by a director who was known for his gritty, realistic style. This director is different. He is known for his poetic, experimental style. I think this will make for an interesting film.

I can't say I enjoyed this film. The acting was terrible, and the plot was a mess. It was all over the place and didn't make any sense. I don't recommend watching it unless you're a big fan of experimental cinema.

No. 12 in the "New American" series, Defilin set out finding imagination.

"It was the beginning of my novel," said Defilin, "and I knew I was doing something different."

In fact, he did want to do something different. Defilin had just finished writing a novel about commercial fishing, exploring the world of the fisherman and the use of artificial intelligence. He was looking for a new way to express himself.

The book, titled "The Blue," was published in 1977 and has since become a classic in the genre. Defilin has since written several more books, including "Coyote Bird," which was published in 1987.

Local hiking trails let students escape

As the weather grows cooler, many students begin to search for outdoor activities to escape the dorm.

"One popular pastime is the local hiking trails," said Steve Sansola, a 1977 Marist graduate and law school peer counselor.

To improve this college’s largest major, hiring a chairperson to head the Communications and the Arts Division must only be the first step.

By July 1, 1992, students studying communications — the college’s largest major — and students studying the arts should have a new divisional chairperson.

The academic restructuring which will create the Communications and the Arts Division could affect, according to the restructuring supporters, the communications major by increasing its visibility, improving the lines of communication (how fitting) between the faculty and administration, and using more student input in the decision-making.

To the 700-plus communications majors, all sounds positive.

Yet, if Marist is going to market itself as a “Communications school,” it must work towards recruiting and retaining students who aren’t even second rate.

It’s time to get serious.

"We know the Hudson," said Bruce Mathews, "It makes sense if we're going to win a race." The club's skipper, Bruce Mathews, left, said the club has a strong team this year.

"It's a good day to have a regatta," said the club's commodore, Jack O'Brien. "It's a good day to be in the Hudson River, for sure." The commodore said the club has a strong team this year.

SPRING is in the air, but wins are missing

by MIKE O'FARRELL

Close your eyes and think about Spring for a minute. No doubt you picture your yard in the summertime. You can see the trees coming to life after a long, dull winter. Birds chirping and people laughing while they enjoy themselves outdoors.

Spring means happiness. It makes people chummy and fills them with life as they enjoy the fresh, cool breezes and sunshine.

Now close your eyes and think about Spring sports at Marist. No pretty sight is it.

As of yesterday morning, the baseball, basketball, lacrosse and tennis teams have played 40 games, seven of which have been losses. Simple arithmetic means the Red Foxes have had something to write home about.

There are some factors to consider. The obvious is the baseball and softball teams are competing for the first time in school history.

However, the baseball squad (3-11) has had opportunities. The Red Foxes recently dropped four games by just one run. Act Smart's club has just put together a balanced pitching and hitting performance.

The softball team (2-10), trying to recover from a disastrous performance against Rutgers, has managed to avoid many mental mistakes all season.

The lacrosse team, comprised of many underclassmen, has yet to have a game in eight tries.

Tennis anyone? The men's tennis team has had the best season so far for any spring team thus far. Jim Parady's club is 3-3. Not bad for (note pacco)

Granted, the baseball and softball teams aren't going to win a regional championship for some time. But, I doubt anyone thought it would be this bad.

The lacrosse team is facing some stiff competition, but right now they are doing a good imitation of the women's basketball team's skid at the beginning of the winter season.

The tennis team has always been competitive and it probably always will be. Head Coach Jim Parady has brought enthusiasm to the program, but what is going to happen in the 1992 season is anyone's guess (Jim Parady's clup).

You have to do well, because you're not running for yourself anymore. You're running for other people who believe in you, says Swift about his family's influence.

"We have to do well in that match," said Parady. "However, we have to start closing out our sets more." Yes, the Softball team (2-10), trying to win a game in eight tries.

So, what can we expect from the Red Foxes this year? Not bad for someone who didn't know where he was coming from when I first met him.

"Dave's an interesting character," said Colaizzo. "I don't know where he was coming from when I first met him. Swift, a sophomore from Mid-Manhattan, has produced over 20 All-American at William and Mary, who was the star.
