Circle prof. to speak on human rights

by JEFFREY J. ROSE
Staff Writer

An internationally acclaimed human rights scholar will speak on the subject when Marist observes Human Rights Day on Dec. 6.

Drinan’s speech will not only help call attention to dark abuse going on across this world, but it can give them an insight.”

Drinan, who is being sponsored by Marist and the Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt Institute in Hyde Park, will be speaking at 9 p.m. Monday, Dec. 6, in the theatre and his lecture will be open to the public, Vernon Varrina, assistant professor of political science, said.

“This day will help call attention to dark abuse going on across this country, but they end up enjoying the experience and wanting to continue to help.”

“I didn’t think I was going to go back, but I met someone my own age and we got along so well and I thought, ‘I’m pretty upset about it when I came home, and I want to help more. I plan to go back many times.’”

Doris Brown, a member of Beullah and the organizer of the soup kitchen, is impressed by the student participation.

“I think that he’s moving with any of them and I don’t see the students aren’t being negative, inaccuracy and being biased are the complaints from

Students entry guards now student escorts

by MEAGHAN FITZGERALD
Staff Writer

When junior Kris Fatsy reported to work on midweek Monday night, she found someone else at her entry.

Fatsy, who works with Security, as an escort, told the Star that she was replaced with someone who could not be held representative of an unauthorized person, who let into the building, causes some sort of problem.

The newly hired security guards can assume this responsibility.

Joseph Leary, director of campus security, was unavailable for comment.

Junior Laurie Blanchi also lost her entry job. She continues to work one shift as a dispatcher and is an escort on Thursday nights.

“I think the way they handled it was in very poor taste with no respect for the students,” Blanchi said. “I see their point of view as to why they wanted to get students out of there. I don’t think they handled it in a very proper way.”

After losing her job, Fatsy tried to speak with Leary to air her concerns but she was never able to get an appointment with him.

“I basically say (to Leary) I just thought the whole thing was wrong,” Fatsy said. “It was, I think, I was upset with the fact that I didn’t get the same respect back.”

Fatsy also feels that this lack of respect is what gives security their bad reputation.

“For them to get it (respect) back, I think they have to show it to their students, and if they can’t even show it to the people that worked for them, then that is what gives them the reputation they have,” Fatsy said.

Senior Michelle Pontecorvo, who works for security since freshman year, was another entry guard who lost her job.

“I relied on this for an income, so now I’m wondering how I am going to pay my bills,” Pontecorvo said.

Pontecorvo also said that the student entry guards should have been treated with more respect.

“If they gave me more notice, I wouldn’t have been so annoyed,” she said. “It was his (Leary’s) decision to do this but he should have done it in a different way.”

Having students work as entry guards for security provided an opportunity for students to get a better understanding of how security works and to realize that security actually does do a good job.

“I know all the security guards, and they’re not bad people,” Blanchi said. “I don’t have a problem with any of them and I don’t see why students have a problem with them.”

“My opinion is if they have students working in security, it will create a better atmosphere as far as.

As an internationally acclaimed human rights scholar will speak on the subject when Marist observes Human Rights Day on Dec. 6.

“The goal in having a Human Rights Day is for students to become aware of what is going on inside and outside of this country,” Anthony Licari, vice-president for administrative affairs, said. “A lot of people don’t realize what they can become aware of this responsibility, if they are so inclined.

Craig Smith, a junior, said, “I was pretty upset about it when I came home, and I want to help more. I plan to go back many times.”

Doris Brown, a member of Beullah and the organizer of the soup kitchen, is impressed by the student participation.

“I think that he’s moving with any of them and I don’t see the students aren’t being negative, inaccuracy and being biased are the complaints from

Students entry guards now student escorts

by MEAGHAN FITZGERALD
Staff Writer

When junior Kris Fatsy reported to work on midweek Monday night, she found someone else at her entry.

Fatsy, who works with Security, as an escort, told the Star that she was replaced with someone who could not be held representative of an unauthorized person, who let into the building, causes some sort of problem.

The newly hired security guards can assume this responsibility.

Joseph Leary, director of campus security, was unavailable for comment.

Junior Laurie Blanchi also lost her entry job. She continues to work one shift as a dispatcher and is an escort on Thursday nights.

“I think the way they handled it was in very poor taste with no respect for the students,” Blanchi said. “I see their point of view as to why they wanted to get students out of there. I don’t think they handled it in a very proper way.”

After losing her job, Fatsy tried to speak with Leary to air her concerns but she was never able to get an appointment with him.

“I basically say (to Leary) I just thought the whole thing was wrong,” Fatsy said. “It was, I think, I was upset with the fact that I didn’t get the same respect back.”

Fatsy also feels that this lack of respect is what gives security their bad reputation.

“For them to get it (respect) back, I think they have to show it to their students, and if they can’t even show it to the people that worked for them, then that is what gives them the reputation they have,” Fatsy said.

Senior Michelle Pontecorvo, who works for security since freshman year, was another entry guard who lost her job.

“I relied on this for an income, so now I’m wondering how I am going to pay my bills,” Pontecorvo said.

Pontecorvo also said that the student entry guards should have been treated with more respect.

“If they gave me more notice, I wouldn’t have been so annoyed,” she said. “It was his (Leary’s) decision to do this but he should have done it in a different way.”

Having students work as entry guards for security provided an opportunity for students to get a better understanding of how security works and to realize that security actually does do a good job.

“I know all the security guards, and they’re not bad people,” Blanchi said. “I don’t have a problem with any of them and I don’t see why students have a problem with them.”

“My opinion is if they have students working in security, it will create a better atmosphere as far as.

As an internationally acclaimed human rights scholar will speak on the subject when Marist observes Human Rights Day on Dec. 6.

“The goal in having a Human Rights Day is for students to become aware of what is going on inside and outside of this country,” Anthony Licari, vice-president for administrative affairs, said. “A lot of people don’t realize what they can become aware of this responsibility, if they are so inclined.

Craig Smith, a junior, said, “I was pretty upset about it when I came home, and I want to help more. I plan to go back many times.”

Doris Brown, a member of Beullah and the organizer of the soup kitchen, is impressed by the student participation.

“I think that he’s moving with any of them and I don’t see the students aren’t being negative, inaccuracy and being biased are the complaints from

Students entry guards now student escorts

by MEAGHAN FITZGERALD
Staff Writer

When junior Kris Fatsy reported to work on midweek Monday night, she found someone else at her entry.

Fatsy, who works with Security, as an escort, told the Star that she was replaced with someone who could not be held representative of an unauthorized person, who let into the building, causes some sort of problem.

The newly hired security guards can assume this responsibility.

Joseph Leary, director of campus security, was unavailable for comment.

Junior Laurie Blanchi also lost her entry job. She continues to work one shift as a dispatcher and is an escort on Thursday nights.

“I think the way they handled it was in very poor taste with no respect for the students,” Blanchi said. “I see their point of view as to why they wanted to get students out of there. I don’t think they handled it in a very proper way.”

After losing her job, Fatsy tried to speak with Leary to air her concerns but she was never able to get an appointment with him.

“I basically say (to Leary) I just thought the whole thing was wrong,” Fatsy said. “It was, I think, I was upset with the fact that I didn’t get the same respect back.”

Fatsy also feels that this lack of respect is what gives security their bad reputation.

“For them to get it (respect) back, I think they have to show it to their students, and if they can’t even show it to the people that worked for them, then that is what gives them the reputation they have,” Fatsy said.

Senior Michelle Pontecorvo, who works for security since freshman year, was another entry guard who lost her job.

“I relied on this for an income, so now I’m wondering how I am going to pay my bills,” Pontecorvo said.

Pontecorvo also said that the student entry guards should have been treated with more respect.

“If they gave me more notice, I wouldn’t have been so annoyed,” she said. “It was his (Leary’s) decision to do this but he should have done it in a different way.”

Having students work as entry guards for security provided an opportunity for students to get a better understanding of how security works and to realize that security actually does do a good job.

“I know all the security guards, and they’re not bad people,” Blanchi said. “I don’t have a problem with any of them and I don’t see why students have a problem with them.”

“My opinion is if they have students working in security, it will create a better atmosphere as far as.
Furth things first with puppets and genies, or how to celebrate the holidays with style

COLLEEN MURPHY

My mom said I was the first baby she saw with a ring on my finger. We were in the hospital and my dad was all dressed up in his tux. So I had to be special.

And I was! I was dressed up in my tux, too! My mom said I was the cutest baby she had ever seen.

But I had a bigger shock for them. I was born on Thanksgiving Day. My mom said I was the perfect gift for the holidays.

And I just kept on being special. I got to be the first baby to wear a ring. And I got to be the first baby to wear a tux. And I got to be the first baby to be born on Thanksgiving Day.

I was the perfect gift for the holidays.

Sweet songs fill The Chance to inspire eager listeners

By DANA BUONCONTI

After one false start, and a wait of 41 years, The Chance was able to open its doors. After being closed in 1952, the Chance was reborn in 1993 as a performing arts center for the community.

The Chance offers a variety of performances, including concerts, plays, and other events. It is a hub for the arts in the area and a place for people to come together and be inspired.

Never mind the popcorn, ‘Life’ demands kleenex

By JENNIFER GIANDALONE

It’s rare that a movie can make you cry and laugh at the same time. But “Life” does just that.

“Life” is the story of Bob, a man who experiences the emotions of a child when he watches movies. The movie is filled with laughs and tears, making it a must-see for anyone.

“I don’t think I’ve ever seen a movie that made me feel so much,” said one audience member. “It’s a beautiful film.”

The story is about Bob, a man who is able to feel the emotions of a child when he watches movies. He is able to laugh and cry at the same time, making it a truly unique experience.

Copies of Advantage, a magazine for college students preparing for the workforce, are available at the Career Development and Field Experience Office, located in Donnelly Hall Room 225.

The magazine contains information about skills needed for specific occupations, the fastest growing jobs, 1992-2000, classroom learning and real world experience, and what it means to have a full-time job.

Giving Tree continues helping out families

By KERRY CONNORS

“Little Women” is about a time in a woman’s life to remember these lean years.

“I think it’s extremely successful,” said one audience member. “It’s a great film.”

The story is about a group of women who are trying to make it in the world. They are all trying to find their way and make a name for themselves.

The Giving Tree program was set up by the Marist College Department of the Arts, Family Life, and Marist Public Relations.

The giving tree program is meant to be a comedy, but it is still moving. The audience was moved to tears and laughter.

If you have any questions or concerns, please contact me at 585-355-7000.

Rocks getting in way of construction plans

By HOBBIE MCGILLEN

“The rock is a very big problem,” said one audience member. “It’s going to make it very difficult to make progress.”

The story is about a rock that is getting in the way of construction plans.

The rock is very large and it’s in the way of everything. The construction crew is trying to figure out how to get around the rock.

P IDDEE McCARTHY

Problems said he is confident that his re-election will be successful. “We have to do it, and I’m going to do it.”

The laughs continue in MCCTA’s ‘Forum’

By JUSTIN SERENITY

Audience members along with the cast of MCCTA’s production of “Romeo and Juliet” were having a great time last night. The energy was contagious as the audience laughed at the jokes. The jokes were funny and everyone was enjoying themselves.

“This is the best gig I’ve ever had,” said one audience member.

The story is about a group of actors who are performing the classic Shakespearean play “Romeo and Juliet.”

The show was filled with laughter and energy. The audience was on their feet and laughing at the jokes.

The laughs continued as the audience members enjoyed the play. The cast did an excellent job and everyone was impressed.

Everybody ought to have a maid to do the main things in Forum

By CINDY SHERMAN

“The giving tree is a very big problem,” said one audience member. “It’s going to make it very difficult to make progress.”

The story is about a tree that is getting in the way of construction plans.

The tree is very large and it’s in the way of everything. The construction crew is trying to figure out how to get around the tree.

“IDDEE McCARTHY

Problems said he is confident that his re-election will be successful. “We have to do it, and I’m going to do it.”

The laughs continue in MCCTA’s ‘Forum’

By JUSTIN SERENITY

Audience members along with the cast of MCCTA’s production of “Romeo and Juliet” were having a great time last night. The energy was contagious as the audience laughed at the jokes. The jokes were funny and everyone was enjoying themselves.

“This is the best gig I’ve ever had,” said one audience member.

The story is about a group of actors who are performing the classic Shakespearean play “Romeo and Juliet.”

The show was filled with laughter and energy. The audience was on their feet and laughing at the jokes.

The laughs continued as the audience members enjoyed the play. The cast did an excellent job and everyone was impressed.

Everybody ought to have a maid to do the main things in Forum

By CINDY SHERMAN

“The giving tree is a very big problem,” said one audience member. “It’s going to make it very difficult to make progress.”

The story is about a tree that is getting in the way of construction plans.

The tree is very large and it’s in the way of everything. The construction crew is trying to figure out how to get around the tree.

“IDDEE McCARTHY

Problems said he is confident that his re-election will be successful. “We have to do it, and I’m going to do it.”

The laughs continue in MCCTA’s ‘Forum’

By JUSTIN SERENITY

Audience members along with the cast of MCCTA’s production of “Romeo and Juliet” were having a great time last night. The energy was contagious as the audience laughed at the jokes. The jokes were funny and everyone was enjoying themselves.

“This is the best gig I’ve ever had,” said one audience member.

The story is about a group of actors who are performing the classic Shakespearean play “Romeo and Juliet.”

The show was filled with laughter and energy. The audience was on their feet and laughing at the jokes.

The laughs continued as the audience members enjoyed the play. The cast did an excellent job and everyone was impressed.

Everybody ought to have a maid to do the main things in Forum

By CINDY SHERMAN

“The giving tree is a very big problem,” said one audience member. “It’s going to make it very difficult to make progress.”

The story is about a tree that is getting in the way of construction plans.

The tree is very large and it’s in the way of everything. The construction crew is trying to figure out how to get around the tree.

“IDDEE McCARTHY

Problems said he is confident that his re-election will be successful. “We have to do it, and I’m going to do it.”

The laughs continue in MCCTA’s ‘Forum’

By JUSTIN SERENITY

Audience members along with the cast of MCCTA’s production of “Romeo and Juliet” were having a great time last night. The energy was contagious as the audience laughed at the jokes. The jokes were funny and everyone was enjoying themselves.

“This is the best gig I’ve ever had,” said one audience member.

The story is about a group of actors who are performing the classic Shakespearean play “Romeo and Juliet.”

The show was filled with laughter and energy. The audience was on their feet and laughing at the jokes.

The laughs continued as the audience members enjoyed the play. The cast did an excellent job and everyone was impressed.
Townhouse L3 learns painting the hard way

by KRISTA SHEPARD
Staff Writer

The residents of L3 were faced with such a problem when another paint job was needed and the paint job was needed for the ceiling. The residents had to decide if they were going to pay for it or not. There was a total of 10 people who were involved in the decision-making process. The residents had to discuss the cost and decide whether or not to pay for it.

"We decided to do it ourselves," said one resident. "We wanted to cover the wall, but in a unique way," said another. "It sure beats beer posters," said a third.

The residents of L3 had to consider the cost of the paint and labor, which they may pay $1600. There was a lot of unforeseen paperwork and administration involved in the process.

"We have hired as many people as possible," said one resident. "Fridays and Saturdays are the best times for us." Said another.

The residents of L3 had to decide if they were going to pay for the paint job or not. They had to consider the cost and the time it would take to complete the job. They had to decide if they were going to pay for the paint job or not.

"We don't want to be at the beck and call of every single student," said one resident. "We're going to have guidelines. One of them is not going to be at the beck and call of every single student."

The residents of L3 had to decide if they were going to pay for the paint job or not. They had to consider the cost and the time it would take to complete the job. They had to decide if they were going to pay for the paint job or not.
Thanksgiving

Congratulations to the many clubs and organizations on campus that have given support to Hunger Week at Marist College. This type of involvement and awareness is what the Marist community should appreciate and strive for in the spirit upon which this institution was founded.

What happens when Hunger Week is over? Marist is fortunate to have a very active Campus Ministry and community service program. It is a shame that more students do not take part in these organizations committed to improving the conditions of humanity.

But do we really remember what it was like to be hungry? It is much easier to mail in a check to UNICEF, or to donate that same amount to a local food bank, instead of really understanding the problem. We may not like to think of it, but we can make a change--a real change; we can make a change--a real change.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

They need us.

They need us.

They need us.

We are wrong.

The poor and starving of this country really have no voice. Our generations of political leaders have failed to represent the interests of the poor. We have chosen to ignore the plight of the hungry and the homeless, and we have failed to act.

It is much more difficult to think about the problem of starvation and poverty than that of hunger. We can easily ignore the problem, and it is much easier to forget about it.

The poor and starving of this country really have no voice. Our generations of political leaders have failed to represent the interests of the poor. We have chosen to ignore the plight of the hungry and the homeless, and we have failed to act.

It is much more difficult to think about the problem of starvation and poverty than that of hunger. We can easily ignore the problem, and it is much easier to forget about it.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

The poor and starving of this country really have no voice. Our generations of political leaders have failed to represent the interests of the poor. We have chosen to ignore the plight of the hungry and the homeless, and we have failed to act.

It is much more difficult to think about the problem of starvation and poverty than that of hunger. We can easily ignore the problem, and it is much easier to forget about it.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

The poor and starving of this country really have no voice. Our generations of political leaders have failed to represent the interests of the poor. We have chosen to ignore the plight of the hungry and the homeless, and we have failed to act.

It is much more difficult to think about the problem of starvation and poverty than that of hunger. We can easily ignore the problem, and it is much easier to forget about it.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

The poor and starving of this country really have no voice. Our generations of political leaders have failed to represent the interests of the poor. We have chosen to ignore the plight of the hungry and the homeless, and we have failed to act.

It is much more difficult to think about the problem of starvation and poverty than that of hunger. We can easily ignore the problem, and it is much easier to forget about it.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

The poor and starving of this country really have no voice. Our generations of political leaders have failed to represent the interests of the poor. We have chosen to ignore the plight of the hungry and the homeless, and we have failed to act.

It is much more difficult to think about the problem of starvation and poverty than that of hunger. We can easily ignore the problem, and it is much easier to forget about it.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

The poor and starving of this country really have no voice. Our generations of political leaders have failed to represent the interests of the poor. We have chosen to ignore the plight of the hungry and the homeless, and we have failed to act.

It is much more difficult to think about the problem of starvation and poverty than that of hunger. We can easily ignore the problem, and it is much easier to forget about it.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

The poor and starving of this country really have no voice. Our generations of political leaders have failed to represent the interests of the poor. We have chosen to ignore the plight of the hungry and the homeless, and we have failed to act.

It is much more difficult to think about the problem of starvation and poverty than that of hunger. We can easily ignore the problem, and it is much easier to forget about it.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

The poor and starving of this country really have no voice. Our generations of political leaders have failed to represent the interests of the poor. We have chosen to ignore the plight of the hungry and the homeless, and we have failed to act.

It is much more difficult to think about the problem of starvation and poverty than that of hunger. We can easily ignore the problem, and it is much easier to forget about it.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

The poor and starving of this country really have no voice. Our generations of political leaders have failed to represent the interests of the poor. We have chosen to ignore the plight of the hungry and the homeless, and we have failed to act.

It is much more difficult to think about the problem of starvation and poverty than that of hunger. We can easily ignore the problem, and it is much easier to forget about it.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

The poor and starving of this country really have no voice. Our generations of political leaders have failed to represent the interests of the poor. We have chosen to ignore the plight of the hungry and the homeless, and we have failed to act.

It is much more difficult to think about the problem of starvation and poverty than that of hunger. We can easily ignore the problem, and it is much easier to forget about it.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

The poor and starving of this country really have no voice. Our generations of political leaders have failed to represent the interests of the poor. We have chosen to ignore the plight of the hungry and the homeless, and we have failed to act.

It is much more difficult to think about the problem of starvation and poverty than that of hunger. We can easily ignore the problem, and it is much easier to forget about it.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

The poor and starving of this country really have no voice. Our generations of political leaders have failed to represent the interests of the poor. We have chosen to ignore the plight of the hungry and the homeless, and we have failed to act.

It is much more difficult to think about the problem of starvation and poverty than that of hunger. We can easily ignore the problem, and it is much easier to forget about it.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

The poor and starving of this country really have no voice. Our generations of political leaders have failed to represent the interests of the poor. We have chosen to ignore the plight of the hungry and the homeless, and we have failed to act.

It is much more difficult to think about the problem of starvation and poverty than that of hunger. We can easily ignore the problem, and it is much easier to forget about it.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

The poor and starving of this country really have no voice. Our generations of political leaders have failed to represent the interests of the poor. We have chosen to ignore the plight of the hungry and the homeless, and we have failed to act.

It is much more difficult to think about the problem of starvation and poverty than that of hunger. We can easily ignore the problem, and it is much easier to forget about it.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

The poor and starving of this country really have no voice. Our generations of political leaders have failed to represent the interests of the poor. We have chosen to ignore the plight of the hungry and the homeless, and we have failed to act.

It is much more difficult to think about the problem of starvation and poverty than that of hunger. We can easily ignore the problem, and it is much easier to forget about it.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

The poor and starving of this country really have no voice. Our generations of political leaders have failed to represent the interests of the poor. We have chosen to ignore the plight of the hungry and the homeless, and we have failed to act.

It is much more difficult to think about the problem of starvation and poverty than that of hunger. We can easily ignore the problem, and it is much easier to forget about it.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

The poor and starving of this country really have no voice. Our generations of political leaders have failed to represent the interests of the poor. We have chosen to ignore the plight of the hungry and the homeless, and we have failed to act.

It is much more difficult to think about the problem of starvation and poverty than that of hunger. We can easily ignore the problem, and it is much easier to forget about it.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

We are wrong.

The poor and starving of this country really have no voice. Our generations of political leaders have failed to represent the interests of the poor. We have chosen to ignore the plight of the hungry and the homeless, and we have failed to act.

It is much more difficult to think about the problem of starvation and poverty than that of hunger. We can easily ignore the problem, and it is much easier to forget about it.

We are wrong.
Students respond to community with holiday spirit

CARLEY KING

"The reason for giving is to help others," said Carley King, a member of the Marist College community.

Richards, who was born in Ulster County, is known for his generosity and support of the community. He has been involved in various charitable organizations, working to improve the lives of those in need.

"I believe that it's important to give back to the community," Richards said. "It's a way to show gratitude for all that we have been given."
Red Foxes go trendy with nifty new colors

by KERRY CONNORS Staff Writer

It was a small surprise, but the expression on Sadie Goles' face was enough to say it all: "What are the Marist school colors?"

"Red and black," she replied. Then, "Red and black!"

"Red and black," Sadie Goles said later, sitting in the Marist cafeteria. "I thought they were, just for... I was so surprised.

Sadie, who is not a student at Marist, was surprised at the announcement of Marist's new school colors, which will be unveiled next week. The new colors, red and black, will replace the traditional blue and white colors that have been used by Marist for the past 50 years.

According to Sadie, the new colors will make the school more "trendy" and "urban." She said that the change will be "very exciting" for the students and that it will "help Marist stand out in the crowd."
Red Foxes romp in season finale, 28-0

by ANDREW HOLMLUND
Staff Writer

The football team concluded its inaugural season in Division I-AA play on a high note by handily beating the Siena Saints, 28-0, at Loudonville, N.Y., last Saturday.

The Foxes also ended a three-game losing streak for Marist (5-5). The team was looking to get back on the win column after the playoffs prior to the contest, the first playoff game for Marist because it gave its graduating senior players 22 victories that will not go away.

The young and talented Red Foxes first scored with 9:13 left in the first quarter when senior tailback Julian Wyse rushed 13 yards into the end zone. It was D'Aiuto's first game in starting in place of the injured Randy Encarnacion.

D'Aiuto's performance did not disappoint as he rushed a total of 44 yards on three carries in the first half of the game. He finished with 103 yards on 17 carries.

The Red Foxes were successful in maintaining a strong defensive stance this season as they only gave up 16 points to the Siena Saints.

D'Aiuto's performance did not go unnoticed as he was named the ACFC Offensive Player of the Year.

“D'Aiuto must continue the fact that his college career is over, he should know that he made a significant difference in improving a football program. Not many players in any league can have that honor. It belongs to a select few,” coach Parady said.

The next five events would be extremely important in determining the outcome of the game.

Coach Larry VanWagner
Head Coach

Red Foxes top Flyers, win exhibition, 92-89

ted HOLMLUND
Sports Editor

The men's basketball team is out to prove that the skeptics are wrong.

“Tough to get them focused. I told them the next five events would be extremely important in determining the outcome of the game,” coach VanWagner said.

The Red Foxes overcame the Vienna Flyers in a high-scoring contest, 92-89, in an exhibition game Saturday night.

“Coach Magarity and the seniors were extremely important in determining the outcome of the game,” coach VanWagner said.

“Coach Magarity and the seniors were extremely important in determining the outcome of the game,” coach VanWagner said.

The Red Foxes opened the game with a 22-16-1 lead in the first half of the game. D'Aiuto was not injured for approximately four full games, he would have shattered the 4,000 yard mark.

“Coach Magarity and the seniors were extremely important in determining the outcome of the game,” coach VanWagner said.

The Red Foxes opened the game with a 22-16-1 lead in the first half of the game. D'Aiuto was not injured for approximately four full games, he would have shattered the 4,000 yard mark.

It's basically true to get them focused. I told them the next five events would be extremely important in determining the outcome of the game.

Coach Larry VanWagner
Head Coach

Cagers top Flyers, win exhibition, 92-89

by TED HOLMLUND
Sports Editor

The men's basketball team is out to prove that the skeptics are wrong.

“Tough to get them focused. I told them the next five events would be extremely important in determining the outcome of the game,” coach VanWagner said.

The Red Foxes overcame the Vienna Flyers in a high-scoring contest, 92-89, in an exhibition game Saturday night.

“Coach Magarity and the seniors were extremely important in determining the outcome of the game,” coach VanWagner said.

The Red Foxes opened the game with a 22-16-1 lead in the first half of the game. D'Aiuto was not injured for approximately four full games, he would have shattered the 4,000 yard mark.

“Coach Magarity and the seniors were extremely important in determining the outcome of the game,” coach VanWagner said.

The Red Foxes opened the game with a 22-16-1 lead in the first half of the game. D'Aiuto was not injured for approximately four full games, he would have shattered the 4,000 yard mark.

It's basically true to get them focused. I told them the next five events would be extremely important in determining the outcome of the game.

Coach Larry VanWagner
Head Coach

Cagers top Flyers, win exhibition, 92-89

by TED HOLMLUND
Sports Editor

The men's basketball team is out to prove that the skeptics are wrong.

“Tough to get them focused. I told them the next five events would be extremely important in determining the outcome of the game,” coach VanWagner said.

The Red Foxes overcame the Vienna Flyers in a high-scoring contest, 92-89, in an exhibition game Saturday night.

“Coach Magarity and the seniors were extremely important in determining the outcome of the game,” coach VanWagner said.

The Red Foxes opened the game with a 22-16-1 lead in the first half of the game. D'Aiuto was not injured for approximately four full games, he would have shattered the 4,000 yard mark.

“Coach Magarity and the seniors were extremely important in determining the outcome of the game,” coach VanWagner said.

The Red Foxes opened the game with a 22-16-1 lead in the first half of the game. D'Aiuto was not injured for approximately four full games, he would have shattered the 4,000 yard mark.

It's basically true to get them focused. I told them the next five events would be extremely important in determining the outcome of the game.

Coach Larry VanWagner
Head Coach

Cagers top Flyers, win exhibition, 92-89

by TED HOLMLUND
Sports Editor

The men's basketball team is out to prove that the skeptics are wrong.

“Tough to get them focused. I told them the next five events would be extremely important in determining the outcome of the game,” coach VanWagner said.

The Red Foxes overcame the Vienna Flyers in a high-scoring contest, 92-89, in an exhibition game Saturday night.

“Coach Magarity and the seniors were extremely important in determining the outcome of the game,” coach VanWagner said.

The Red Foxes opened the game with a 22-16-1 lead in the first half of the game. D'Aiuto was not injured for approximately four full games, he would have shattered the 4,000 yard mark.