Marist administration recently appointed a new chief officer of communications-Timman C. Massie, who has replaced Edward A. Hynes as the chief officer of college relations.

Massie, who has a reputation of producing results in public relations and being respected by the Hudson Valley community and the Board of Directors, wants to become a member of the Board of Trustees at Marist College.

One of Massie's first assignments was to elaborate on a statement concerning the reorganization of four former Marist students who allegedly

Hunger Week events attract wide support from clubs

by SUSANNE YANUSZ
Staff Writer

As people sit down a week from today to share Thanksgiving dinner, thousands of people throughout the world will be starving. And it is up to those in the Hudson Valley to fight hunger.

Hunger Week started on Nov. 13 and will run through Nov. 19.

"Our country is truly blessed, but there are many who are in great need," said Sister Jean Hamilton, director of Marist College's Office of Community Service.

The office is working with the United Nations Children's Fund and USAID to raise awareness and funds for hunger relief.

According to Hamilton, not only will the office be working with the United Nations Children's Fund and USAID, but also with organizations such as Feeding America and the Salvation Army.

More than 20 student organizations, faculty and staff have been collecting non-perishable foods.

"The money collected will be given to Sodexo, Marist's food service, who double the amount of per person. We will give the food to the Salvation Army and the Salvation Army will give it to those in need," said Hamilton.

According to Sister Hamilton, this is done to show that people experience the lack of the draw when they are born.

"You do not know if you will be born in an affluent or poor society," Sister Hamilton said.

One student who was involved in the Hunger Banquet was Kevin Smith, a senior computer science major from Baldwinsville, N.Y.

Smith said he got involved with Hunger Week because of the experience he had.

"I decided to different places working in soup kitchens and with homeless people. I am trying to bring those experiences back to Marist and show people here that people with much less than we have," Smith said.

Another Marist student who has been involved with the week's events in Jim Duer, a junior environmental science major from Wolcott, Conn.

"I think most everyone is a little bit hungry," Duer said.

This food, along with other food which was donated will be blessed by Father Luke McCann during Mass.

Hunger Week will end on Monday, Nov. 21, when students will load all the donated food onto vans and deliver it to Northern Community Center and Our Lady of Mt. Carmel Church in the city of Poughkeepsie.

Sister Hamilton said for so far there has been an overwhelming and marvelous response to this year's Hunger Week.

"This year there has been the widest involvement of campus organizations. It is great to see the campus pulling together," she said.

Over 30 student organizations have participated in Hunger Week, including the Model U.N., the Criminal Justice Society, the Black Student Union, El Arco Iris Latino, Sigma Sigma Sigma, Sigma Phi Epsilon and Phi Sigma Kappa.

The freshmen class, the intramural program and resident directors also played a part in Hunger Week. According to Hamilton, not only do the students get involved, but the staff has traditionally been active in the collection of food and money.

For those who are still interested in taking part in Hunger Week, funding can still be dropped off in the chapel on Friday or Saturday, or be placed in the Box on Monday no later than 5 p.m.

New student recreation room considered an unnecessary frill

by Brian Frankenfield

On Oct. 31, the new recreation center in the Student Center opened its doors to students after months of renovation work. The facility was ready to provide students with study areas, student computer labs, and a whole lot more. However, some students disagree with the university's decision to spend so much money on the facility.

Administrators have often said that the recreation facility will provide various opportunities for students to hang out and interact with each other. However, some students feel that the money would have been better spent on other things.

"The recreation room is under the Humanities building and is not connected to the Student Center," said one student. "I think the administration could have done better with their money." Other students have expressed similar opinions.

The new recreation center includes a variety of amenities, including a fitness center, a game area, and a study room. However, some students feel that the university could have done more to involve the students in the decision-making process.

"The university should have asked us what we wanted," said another student. "We should have been more involved in the planning process." Other students have expressed similar concerns.

Despite the concerns raised by some students, the administration has defended its decision to spend the money on the recreation center. "The facility will provide various opportunities for students to hang out and interact with each other," said an administration spokesperson. "We believe that this is an important investment in the students' future."

A great idea right?

They would then be able to get a discount for food. And perhaps a chance at a scholarship for being a member of the victorious squad, thanks to the club's sponsorship.

The tourch of truth has been passed down from models like The Times and the Journal. Senate challengers Oliver North and Michael ltives, but a new agenda. They occupied the lofty position of first.

There is often a fine line between objectivity and opinion.

It's news. Any way you look at it.

As a journalist, it is our job to report the human tragedy and destruction which occurs in the world. Our job is the same as The Times or the Journal. It is our job to report the human tragedy and destruction which occurs in this country and especially this state, although, as college students.

In the elections of '92 you had a Democratic president elected but with less than half of the vote. May the banner of champions of your parents be unfurled.

Many people wonder why the elections are so close. It is because we're not kick ass enough.

In college, you pay a large tuition. After that, it is a matter of student spending and saving there. What's relationship can be taken for granted.

The ideology likes to keep the illusion of the country as a place where people can pull a little toothpick out of their mouth. It is an illusion.

What the great leader needs is the vote. Then, he can make the changes needed for the new high school. It is a typical example of what we see today.

Not necessarily.

I will be 62 this day and I played with my guns. I am not using REAL guns.

In this case, the guns we used would be war ashell.
Greek fraternities donate time to help less fortunate

by LAWRENCE ROADA

While most Marist students were spending their mid-semester breaks relaxing by the beach or wallowing in the glow of co-op work, the boys of the Sigma Epsilon was working taking the day off.

During these hours, the brothers of Sigma Epsilon organizedServe-A-Day, where they could donate time to the less fortunate within the Poughkeepsie community. "I think that the college's intention is to provide a chance for us to give back at the beginning of the semester," said Straw.

"Whereas many of our members already deal with the City of Poughkeepsie," Straw added, "we felt that some of our brothers would be interested in giving some time."

"College fraternities should deal with the community involved in local charitable issues," Straw said.

"We try to create a speaker come to the school to talk about the issue," Straw added. "We would definitely ask some of the guys to bring up an issue they are interested in."

"Community service should be something we should all be interested in," Straw said.

SAC Library Committee Steams Ahead

The Student Academic Council Library Committee is moving ahead with plans to look into changing the library hours and other aspects of the library.

The committee is headed by SAC Assistant Vice President of Student Affairs Donny Morello and includes members of SAG (Student Government of America) and SAC (Student Academic Council).

The committee has been meeting in the beginning of the semester, in an attempt to open communication and facilitate the building of a student-centric library. The committee looks forward to hearing from anyone who would like to attend the meeting.

The Senior Class

Hello fellow seniors! This is our last chance to have fun and still be able to show our school spirit at Marist. As you all know, this has been our busiest year not only in school, but also in the world. So it's also the time when we are beginning to settle in for the holidays. It's important to remember that the senior class is planning for your enjoyment, your benefit, and your convenience. Your participation in these events is not required, but it is highly recommended.

If you wish to get involved in contributing to the class events i.e. senior week, river day, the yearbook, or any other event, then you are more than welcome to assist. The Marist Senior Class Committee meets every Wednesday during lunch in the library.

Cagers pummel Korabel, 92-72

The women's basketball team, under the direction of Head Coach Larry Van Wagner, opened the season with a dominant victory over the University of Rhode Island, 92-72.

Red Foxes set sights on Rider U.

The Red Foxes are a young and talented team, looking to make a statement in the Atlantic Middle College Conference. Head Coach Scott Sullivan has high hopes for his team, which has a record of 5-1 so far this season.

Swimmers gear for big meet with Broncs

The men's swimming team is looking forward to a competitive meet with the University of Rhode Island. The team is currently ranked 10th in the nation and is looking to make a strong showing.

Skaters lose, 5-1; play Southern next

The Marist hockey club and Siena College were tied 2-2 in their opening game of the season. The Red Foxes will look to get back on track when they face off against the UNH Bobcats this weekend.

The Marist hockey club and Siena College were tied 2-2 in their opening game of the season. The Red Foxes will look to get back on track when they face off against the UNH Bobcats this weekend.
The football team recorded 524 total team's performance and play. "It is definitely going to hurt (losing her team.) It is going to leave a hole in our offense," he said. The Red Foxes set a new record for Marist's two starving varsity programs.

Marist football needs to relocate to the Big Apple and end their time in the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference. Sometimes it even gets an opportunity to play against an opponent that is not in the league, but the team may not have captured that opportunity. However, this is not the case for the Marist football team. They need to relocate and play in a more competitive league. The Red Foxes defeated the Sierra Saints, 45-19, on Saturday en route to the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference title in their opening year in this conference. They finished with an impressive 7-3 overall record, 6-1 in the MAAC. The Red Foxes also earned the right to play in the NECs. However, Marist was able to shatter all sorts of records and end their year at 7-22, and the team could not play well in the second half of the season.

Marist was able to take the MAAC title by putting the Saints away, 45-19, in Loudonville, N.Y., but was unable to earn a bowl bid. St. John's University will now square off in the championship game on Saturday. Marist will be facing off against the Fighting Irish in the quarterfinals. The men's and women's cross country teams wrapped up their seasons in the last week at the ECAC-IC4A Championships at Franklin Park in Boston, Mass. The Red Foxes finished in 11th place, but the team was not happy with the result. The men's team had a 7-3 overall record, 6-1 in the MAAC. The Red Foxes also earned the right to play in the NECs. However, Marist was able to shatter all sorts of records and end their year at 7-22, and the team could not play well in the second half of the season.

The surprising thing is Marist not only took the league crown, but it also made news last year. St. John's also won the second two contests as well. McDaniel was named only as a Division 1 team. To top it off, the Sun Devils were able to repeat. Marist finished the season strong and the high number of Marist conference titles. The Red Foxes also earned the right to play in the NECs.
