Under investigation

Semi-Formal turns stomachs

by RON JOHNSON

An investigation is under way concerning events which took place at the Junior Class Semi-Formal last Friday, Feb. 18, at the I.M. Country Club.

Some students claim to have seen vomit on the floor and in the restrooms as well as seeing some male students dancing in their boxer shorts on the dance floor.

Marillyn O'Connor, spokeswoman for the Country Club, declined to comment on the alleged incidents and directed all questions to Steve Sansola, assistant dean for activities.

"We're in the process of investigating," said Sansola.

Suadila said he was not at any point to confirm or deny any of the rumors about the dance.

According to eyewitness accounts, a fraction of the 240 students attending were drunk and disorderly.

"After it got up right next to my table," said Frank McKern, a junior accounting major. "I think it was a little out of hand. I think it would have been a really good dance if people were not getting sick and out of hand.

See Yanus, a junior communications major, said people were drinking before the dance and that caused problems. "It's just a shame," Yanus said. "Everyone was really drunk and pulling on the bathroom."

Lisa Cool, associate academic vice president who served as a chaperone for the event, said a majority of the students were behaving appropriately.

However, she said she saw some students dancing in their boxer shorts and saw one student throw something at the comedian. "I think there were two problems," said Cool. "People came to drink, and people actually have brought drinks with them."

Brother Richard Rancourt also chaperoned the event. He said he did not see anything unusual, though.

"I didn't remember seeing anybody obnoxiously drunk," said Rancourt.

CARI OLESKEWICZ

Managing Editor

Student speeches conclude SGA elections

by CARI OLESKEWICZ

Elections Commissioner Joseph A. Salvayon asked the crowd of 65-75 people to "be nice" and avoid catcalling and "ferschnickerings during Monday night's SGA debate.

The audience and the candidates were relatively well-behaved, with most students giving campaign spots stressing the importance of issues such as communication, guest passes, security, and school spirit.

"I am a little concerned with the turnout," Salvayon said. "Normally, we do not see this much of a crowd at a speech night, but this year we have the largest number of candidates."

Candidates ran this year for the largest of any other year.

Every candidate except for Kevin Steurer, running for assemblyman, had a campaign theme.

Coach Salvayon said the audience that students remember who spoke and who didn't told him that he did not do well atpeak when speaking.

"I told them I was going to say something if they were not here," Salvayon said.

The speeches began with the candidates for class officers; the only contested positions being for president of the classes of 1995 and 1997.

Students running for positions on the judicial board ran unopposed, and both candidates pledged to work for the students fairly on the board.

Compromise for commuter senators was also lacking, there was only one candidate only for both traditional and non-traditional commuter senators.

The race for resident student senators consisted of seven students competing for four spaces on the senate. Only one of the seven was an incumbent senator.

The final speakers were the student body presidential candidates, a single who spoke about the same issues they debated on television and have been campaigning on since the beginning of the election.

Anthony Migone, current executive vice president, spoke on the importance of experience in a president.

"Student government is here for the purpose of aiding the students," Migone said. "The student body president has a big job and I understand the workings of the executive board and the senate."

Matt Gallagher began his speech with a parallel that he had hoped would demonstrate that students cannot be aprocess with the fear of opportunity. Gallagher gave a speech.

Students cast their ballots for student body president, student senators, judicial board members, and class officers on Tuesday and Wednesday.

VOLUME 44, NUMBER 4

FEBRUARY 24, 1994

THE CIRCLE

by TOM QUINLAN

Future bright for Med-Tech majors

by Tom Quinlan

Staff Writer

Multicollage women's soccer and lacrosse teams react to change in coaching

Hard work does pay off.

"Medical technology is a fast-growing field," said Kathrine Greiner, an associate professor of the Marist medical program. "With the growing population of elderly and sick, there are not enough people to care for them."

There are approximately 80 students in the medical technology major. "Students go through biology and chemistry courses, then during their junior and senior years take clinical and science courses," Greiner said.

"These would include many hands-on laboratory classes in which students can gain a solid and hands-on understanding of the fields."

"We are the middle-man between the patients and doctors," said David Whitehead, a junior in the program.

analysis of blood, solid tissues, and other bodily fluids is the key-purpose for people in this field.

"Rumors cleared...see MEDTECH page 4..."
Swami becomes one with nature in ‘Ground’

by JUSTIN SEREMET

Swami is trying to make a statement about the environment, I think. It’s a bit ambiguous.

“Ground” is a film about the environmental issue and how it affects us. It’s a thought-provoking piece of cinema that encourages viewers to consider the impact of our actions on the planet.

Throughout the film, there are scenes that highlight the beauty of nature and the importance of preserving it. The landscape is stunning, with breathtaking shots of forests and mountains.

However, the film also touches on the challenges that humanity faces in protecting the environment. The characters discuss the impact of pollution, deforestation, and climate change on the natural world.

Despite the serious subject matter, the film also has a sense of hope. It shows that even small actions can make a difference in protecting the environment.

Overall, “Ground” is a thought-provoking film that raises important questions about our relationship with nature. It’s a must-see for anyone interested in environmental issues.

Don’t hesitate! Share sharp metal objects with friends

by DANA RUAUONUTI

You can’t beat sharing metal objects with friends. It’s a fun and exciting way to bond over a common interest.

Whether you’re sharing tools, parts, or even whole machines, it’s always a good idea to have the right tools on hand.

But don’t forget to be safe! Always wear safety gear and follow proper safety procedures when working with metal.

If you’re looking to add to your tool collection, consider investing in a good set of metalworking tools. You’ll be glad you did.

Swami predicts outcome of Oscar-night festivities

by JENNIFER GIANOLA

Swami predicts the outcomes of the 2024 Oscar Awards.

- The Best Director: Martin Scorsese for “The Irishman”
- The Best Actor: Leonardo DiCaprio for “The Revenant”
- The Best Actress: Jennifer Lawrence for “The Hunger Games”
- The Best Original Screenplay: Alfonso Cuarón for “Gravity”
- The Best Adapted Screenplay: David O. Russell for “The Silver Linings Playbook”

Swami’s predictions are based on his deep understanding of the film industry and his ability to read between the lines of each film’s narrative.

English Dept. sponsors ‘Taming of the Shrew’

by MEREDITH KENNEDY

The English Department is proud to announce that we will be sponsoring this year’s production of “The Taming of the Shrew” by William Shakespeare.

This classic comedy is about the relationship between Petruchio and Katherina, and their eventual transformation from a fiery temper to a loving partnership.

The play will be performed in the school’s auditorium on March 15th and 16th. Tickets are available for purchase at the school’s box office.

Environmental professor creates woodland art

by JOHNNY DOUTHIT

In his latest project, environmental professor creates woodland art using natural materials and techniques.

The professor, who is well-known for his innovative approach to environmental education, has been working with students to create a series of installations that highlight the beauty of the natural world.

The artwork is made from a variety of materials, including wood, stone, and soil. Each piece is unique and reflects the local flora and fauna.

The professor’s goal is to raise awareness about the importance of preserving our natural resources and to encourage others to get involved in the environmental movement.

Video games provide a less for ‘3’s’ Super Bowl.

by CHRISTOPHER HARROW

It’s that time of year again, when the biggest sports event on the calendar takes place. The Super Bowl is upon us, and there are plenty of options for those who want to watch the game without leaving the comfort of their own home.

One of the most popular ways to engage with the game is through video games. This year, there are several games that offer a unique perspective on the event.

The first is a game called “The Big Game,” which allows players to control their team of choice and take on the world’s best in a 3-on-3 online battle royale. The game features realistic graphics and physics, as well as a range of weapons and abilities.

Another option is “Super Bowl Live,” which simulates the atmosphere of the actual game. Players can choose from a variety of stadiums and time periods, and compete against other players from around the world.

But perhaps the most unique offering is “The Big Game Showdown,” which pits players against each other in a series of mini-games and challenges. The winner is crowned the champion of the Super Bowl.

All three games are available for download on various platforms, and are sure to provide hours of entertainment for sports fans and gamers alike. So why not give them a try and see what all the buzz is about?
MENDECS...continued from page 1

Office positions still remain for students

JENNIFER FORD
Staff Writer

The program is not easy; many sales students are in a bit of a shock. However, it is a very good program that produces wonderful results.

"The program is not easy; many sales students are in a bit of a shock. However, it is a very good program that produces wonderful results."

This is due to the fact that the students are not only learning sales skills, but are also being exposed to the real world of business. The program is designed to prepare students for a career in sales, and to give them the skills they need to succeed.

The program is divided into two main sections: classroom instruction and practical experience. The classroom instruction covers topics such as product knowledge, customer service, and sales techniques. The practical experience portion of the program gives students the opportunity to put their newly acquired skills into action.

The students are assigned to different companies, where they work as sales representatives. They are expected to visit potential customers, make presentations, and close deals. This hands-on experience is invaluable, as it allows students to learn from real-world situations and to develop the confidence they need to succeed in the field.

The program is offered by a number of different schools, and is open to students of all majors. However, it is particularly popular among those pursuing careers in business and sales.

The program is not easy; many sales students are in a bit of a shock. However, it is a very good program that produces wonderful results. The program is divided into two main sections: classroom instruction and practical experience. The classroom instruction covers topics such as product knowledge, customer service, and sales techniques. The practical experience portion of the program gives students the opportunity to put their newly acquired skills into action.

The students are assigned to different companies, where they work as sales representatives. They are expected to visit potential customers, make presentations, and close deals. This hands-on experience is invaluable, as it allows students to learn from real-world situations and to develop the confidence they need to succeed in the field.

The program is offered by a number of different schools, and is open to students of all majors. However, it is particularly popular among those pursuing careers in business and sales.

The program is not easy; many sales students are in a bit of a shock. However, it is a very good program that produces wonderful results. The program is divided into two main sections: classroom instruction and practical experience. The classroom instruction covers topics such as product knowledge, customer service, and sales techniques. The practical experience portion of the program gives students the opportunity to put their newly acquired skills into action.

The students are assigned to different companies, where they work as sales representatives. They are expected to visit potential customers, make presentations, and close deals. This hands-on experience is invaluable, as it allows students to learn from real-world situations and to develop the confidence they need to succeed in the field.

The program is offered by a number of different schools, and is open to students of all majors. However, it is particularly popular among those pursuing careers in business and sales.
He's peaved, she's annoyed

I hope some of you enjoyed last week's columns; or if not, I hope I made you think about them. My goal in writing this column is to challenge you to make some positive changes in certain areas of your lives. I hope that you will take the time to read the columns of others as well.

Last week I ended my columns with a question. This week, I'm starting with a statement. How many students can name their administrators? I know that some of you can, but how many of you can name the students in your classes? I know there are more than 10,000 students at URI, so how many of them can you name? I would like to know how many professors you can name. I'm sure that you all know the names of those who are close friends, but how many of those who are not so close can you name? Can you name the students personally and who can name all the students in their classes? To them, I say thank you, thank you for your contributions. The student administrator is already in dispute when they do not learn the names of students.

Communication is the lifeblood of any relationship. Without communication, there can be no understanding. The exchange of ideas, or information, and discussing and criticizing can be defined in many ways. It generally means communication or dialogue. The exchange of ideas or discussion is what goes on with the students, beyond the job description. The administration has new people in the last few weeks and the students in all those housing situations. They are new students, and they need to learn the names of the students in their classes. I know that some of you may not be too pleased with this idea, but I think it's important that we all learn each other's names. Otherwise, how can we ever learn to work together?

Last week I ended my columns with a question. This week, I'm starting with a statement. How many students can name their administrators? I know that some of you can, but how many of you can name the students in your classes? I know there are more than 10,000 students at URI, so how many of them can you name? I would like to know how many professors you can name. I'm sure that you all know the names of those who are close friends, but how many of those who are not so close can you name? Can you name the students personally and who can name all the students in their classes? To them, I say thank you, thank you for your contributions. The student administrator is already in dispute when they do not learn the names of students.

Communication is the lifeblood of any relationship. Without communication, there can be no understanding. The exchange of ideas, or information, and discussing and criticizing can be defined in many ways. It generally means communication or dialogue. The exchange of ideas or discussion is what goes on with the students, beyond the job description. The administration has new people in the last few weeks and the students in all those housing situations. They are new students, and they need to learn the names of the students in their classes. I know that some of you may not be too pleased with this idea, but I think it's important that we all learn each other's names. Otherwise, how can we ever learn to work together?

The student body president has been designated. Many issues were discussed during the campaign. These issues ranged from the extremely important need for more refrigerators in the student union to the less important decision of the club colors and alternative funding for the campus newspaper. The candidates played their parts well, courting the right clubs and organizations and saying the right things, all "involvement" and "communication." Most interesting was the issue of communication. Almost every speech included the pitch for better communication between students and their government, between students and their clubs, between clubs and clubs, the list goes on.

But what happens now that the campaign is over, the students have voted, and the candidates have left the stage? Will communication improve? What about the issues that so many of us are "high up" on? Is it worthwhile for the new student body president and his cabinet and the senate and the administration to work together on these issues? But where will that go?

It is to Student Government who decides where we receive our dollars. Is it worthwhile for the President to come back to campus at night and explain some of the reasoning behind the vote in the Senate. This is the top. If he really wants to serve his constituents, the students, he should hold an open forum on the campus. Yes, communication needs to be improved. I welcome any questions or comments.

He said

The administration has new people in the last few weeks and the students in all those housing situations. They are new students, and they need to learn the names of the students in their classes. I know that some of you may not be too pleased with this idea, but I think it's important that we all learn each other's names. Otherwise, how can we ever learn to work together?

Last week I ended my columns with a question. This week, I'm starting with a statement. How many students can name their administrators? I know that some of you can, but how many of you can name the students in your classes? I know there are more than 10,000 students at URI, so how many of them can you name? I would like to know how many professors you can name. I'm sure that you all know the names of those who are close friends, but how many of those who are not so close can you name? Can you name the students personally and who can name all the students in their classes? To them, I say thank you, thank you for your contributions. The student administrator is already in dispute when they do not learn the names of students.

Communication is the lifeblood of any relationship. Without communication, there can be no understanding. The exchange of ideas, or information, and discussing and criticizing can be defined in many ways. It generally means communication or dialogue. The exchange of ideas or discussion is what goes on with the students, beyond the job description. The administration has new people in the last few weeks and the students in all those housing situations. They are new students, and they need to learn the names of the students in their classes. I know that some of you may not be too pleased with this idea, but I think it's important that we all learn each other's names. Otherwise, how can we ever learn to work together?

Last week I ended my columns with a question. This week, I'm starting with a statement. How many students can name their administrators? I know that some of you can, but how many of you can name the students in your classes? I know there are more than 10,000 students at URI, so how many of them can you name? I would like to know how many professors you can name. I'm sure that you all know the names of those who are close friends, but how many of those who are not so close can you name? Can you name the students personally and who can name all the students in their classes? To them, I say thank you, thank you for your contributions. The student administrator is already in dispute when they do not learn the names of students.

Communication is the lifeblood of any relationship. Without communication, there can be no understanding. The exchange of ideas, or information, and discussing and criticizing can be defined in many ways. It generally means communication or dialogue. The exchange of ideas or discussion is what goes on with the students, beyond the job description. The administration has new people in the last few weeks and the students in all those housing situations. They are new students, and they need to learn the names of the students in their classes. I know that some of you may not be too pleased with this idea, but I think it's important that we all learn each other's names. Otherwise, how can we ever learn to work together?

The student body president has been designated. Many issues were discussed during the campaign. These issues ranged from the extremely important need for more refrigerators in the student union to the less important decision of the club colors and alternative funding for the campus newspaper. The candidates played their parts well, courting the right clubs and organizations and saying the right things, all "involvement" and "communication." Most interesting was the issue of communication. Almost every speech included the pitch for better communication between students and their government, between students and their clubs, between clubs and clubs, the list goes on. But what happens now that the campaign is over, the students have voted, and the candidates have left the stage? Will communication improve? What about the issues that so many of us are "high up" on? Is it worthwhile for the new student body president and his cabinet and the senate and the administration to work together on these issues? But where will that go?

It is to Student Government who decides where we receive our dollars. Is it worthwhile for the President to come back to campus at night and explain some of the reasoning behind the vote in the Senate. This is the top. If he really wants to serve his constituents, the students, he should hold an open forum on the campus. Yes, communication needs to be improved. I welcome any questions or comments.

He said

The administration has new people in the last few weeks and the students in all those housing situations. They are new students, and they need to learn the names of the students in their classes. I know that some of you may not be too pleased with this idea, but I think it's important that we all learn each other's names. Otherwise, how can we ever learn to work together?

Last week I ended my columns with a question. This week, I'm starting with a statement. How many students can name their administrators? I know that some of you can, but how many of you can name the students in your classes? I know there are more than 10,000 students at URI, so how many of them can you name? I would like to know how many professors you can name. I'm sure that you all know the names of those who are close friends, but how many of those who are not so close can you name? Can you name the students personally and who can name all the students in their classes? To them, I say thank you, thank you for your contributions. The student administrator is already in dispute when they do not learn the names of students.
Booze Cruise and formal planned for Senior Week

by CYLINDA RICKERT
Staff Writer

Senior Week, the stress-releasing, festive, but work of all our prying before graduation and real life, has touched to an end. "It's been tough to get everyone involved," said Senior Class President, Kristin Rice, Brunswick of the senior class. "We've tried to keep everything together, and while we've run through obstacles, the students were trying to send a message to their friends and family that this year would go directly to the cost of Senior Week."

"We're selling to give them a better Senior Week," Rinn said. "In the end, they'll pay less out of their own pockets."

Senior Week will be Tuesday, May 17 through Saturday, May 21. Seniors will line up at 9:30 a.m. There will be a reception at 1:45 p.m. The 48th Commencement will be from 5 to 6 p.m. Senior barbecue will be from 6 to 7:30 p.m. The top event will start at 11 a.m. on Saturday, May 21. Seniors will line up at 9:30 a.m.

"It's been tough to get certain things for Senior Week. We never got fireworks to set in, graduates will still have a celebration the way the current students' parents, or just by coming before graduation and real life.

Senior Week, the stress-releasing, festive, last week, of all-out partying before graduation and real life.

Senior Week, the stress-releasing, festive, last week, of all-out partying before graduation and real life.

Senior Week, the stress-releasing, festive, last week, of all-out partying before graduation and real life.

Senior Week, the stress-releasing, festive, last week, of all-out partying before graduation and real life.

Senior Week, the stress-releasing, festive, last week, of all-out partying before graduation and real life.
Class of ‘96 tries to make a match with Dating Game

by CHRIS BERNIATO

Most College students are hoping that their own version of the dating game will not be like the version played by the ignited and Saugy lens Lange. This situation is not uncommon in many students, who are spending their time in the Dating Center on a regular basis.

There are all types of dating games that are taking place on campus. Most of these games are taking place on the second floor of the Student Health Center. Students are hopping on these games for a variety of reasons. Some students are looking for a fun way to socialize, others for a way to meet new people or to find someone special.

Although there are many options for finding someone special, the most successful games have a few important factors in common.

First, the atmosphere is crucial. A positive and fun atmosphere can make the game more enjoyable for everyone involved.

Second, the format of the game is important. Most successful games are structured in a way that ensures everyone has a chance to participate and feel comfortable.

Third, the rules and guidelines of the game should be clear and enforced. This helps to ensure that everyone is playing by the same rules and that the game remains fun for everyone.

In conclusion, there are many options available for finding someone special at The Circle. By understanding the common factors that contribute to a successful game, students can increase their chances of finding what they are looking for in the dating world.

Swimmers third in Metro Championships

by JIM DERVAN

Junior Matt Bluestein swam to three individual title this past weekend to lead the Marist College swim team to third place at the Metro Championships this weekend in Trenton. N.J.

After the team finished third in the Metro Championships, Matt Bluestein was named Metro Male Swimmer of the Meet.

Bluestein made several trip between the Maine and New Hampshire, where he competed in the Metro Championships. While there, he finished third in both the 500-yard freestyle and the 100-yard breaststroke.

"I think this year'sMetro Championships was a success," Bluestein said. "It was a great experience to swim with some of the best swimmers in the country."

While Bluestein was pleased with his performance at the Metro Championships, he was disappointed that he did not win any individual titles. However, he is looking forward to the upcoming season and hopes to improve his times.

"I'm looking forward to the upcoming season," Bluestein said. "I want to swim as fast as I can and hope to win some individual titles."
Marist beats Wagner; Mountaineers tonight
by ANDREW HOLMLUND
Staff Writer

The women's basketball team will be looking to push its winning streak to three games this evening as it travels to Emmitsburg, Md. to face Mount St. Mary's in Northeast Conference action.

On Saturday afternoon, the Red Foxes (9-14, 8-7 in the NEC), did not have a second-half letdown as they pulled away in their previous setbacks.

Against Mount St. Mary's on Friday, 18 points at halftime, 35-17, Marist went on to defeat Mount St. Mary's, 62-48, in front of 237 spectators at the James J. McCann Center. The game was a rematch of Marist's 70-58, in front of 237 spectators at the James J. McCann Center.

The two game winning streak is Marist's longest this season. The Red Foxes were led by junior guard Lori Keys, who scored a career-high 30 points and grabbed 13 rebounds, recording her eighth double-double on the year. The co-captain was named Northeast Conference Player of the Week on Monday.

Senior guard and co-captain Cindy Carroll collected 11 points in her final regular-season home game. Carroll and sophomore guard Jill Heller distributed a team-high four assists each.

Head coach Ken Babineau said the team's defense and Key's performance were keys to the triumph.

"We played hard-nosed, scrappy defense," Babineau said. "We came in and didn't let them come back in the second half. Lori had a monster of a game."

Last Wednesday, Marist reeled off five straight points during a run against Long Island University by knockout. The Mountain States College, 76-61, in Poughkeepsie.

See WBALL page 11