Students gather to protest cultural disrespect

Members of El Arco Iris Latino and the Black Student Union organized two rallies in the past two weeks to protest a lack of respect for their cultures and an unwillingness of school administrators to pay attention to their needs and diversity.

The two organizations gathered on Wednesday, March 23 in response to an incident which occurred the previous night, and on Tuesday, March 29 for a "Unity Rally.

According to Isabel Camilo, vice president of El Arco Iris Latino, cultural music was being played on the dining hall during dinner on March 22 as part of a celebration of Latino Week. Some students did not like the music, and turned down the radio, which belonged to a member of the group.

"It turned ugly when people felt they had a right to touch our property," Camilo said. "Our culture was not respected. I have accepted other cultures when they were expressed."

Members of the organization said that this incident was just a symptom of a deeper problem at Marist.

"It was the straw that broke the camel's back," Camilo said. "We have been tolerant, but being a minority on campus is not easy. There is a need for the Latino community and people of color in the Marist community.

"The Unity Rally held this week not only brought people together, said Afena Cobham, vice-president of admissions and graduate of the Class of 1992. A fact sheet was distributed to those in attendance which listed "complaints and questions that many feel need to be addressed on campus."

Administration hopes to contain tuition increase for upcoming year

by CHRIS BERINATO
Staff Writer

Like spring fever, rumors of a tuition increase have been running rampant. Like spring itself, actual figures have been hard to come by so far.

"I might not be coming here if it does increase," said freshman Mike Fourhie, responding to a rumor that tuition would be increased in upward of $20,000 for the next academic year.

And that is exactly the reason why it won't take such a drastic hike, according to Harold Wood, vice-president of admissions and enrollment.

"We'd be cutting our own throat," Wood said. Wood said because of the schools' Marist has to compete with, a large tuition increase would not be in the school's best interest and in addition, the students could not afford it.

Wood said the admisions department, being particularly aware of the situation of incoming students, is a supporter of nominal increases in tuition.

Families are facing a situation where they have less disposable income. There is much more of a cost factor involved than there was four years ago.

"As costs go up, we're driving people to the public colleges," Wood said.

For example, the tuition cost of attending the University of Connecticut for one year for a Connecticut resident would be $7,780, according to the 1993 Peterson's Guide to Four Year Colleges. The same book lists tuition at Marist's at $9,813.

"One big factor, according to Wood, is the loss in state aid. At one point, between state grants and Bundy Funds, the school received approximately $1 million. Marist currently receives around $300,000.

Anthony V. Campilii, chief financial officer for Marist, points out that Marist is a tuition intensive school, meaning that most of the money the school uses comes from what students pay. According to Campilii, some large universities receive approximately $65 million in state and research grants, this is the amount in Marist's entire budget.

Campilii said that there are numerous factors that affect the increase in tuition.

Certain mandated changes, such as taxes, insurance, and amortization, can be easily predicted in terms of cost each year. In addition the controllable cost, such as paper and materials.

The biggest factors in the budget are the financial aid and salary and wage increases.

The operation of the new facility will be through funds that would have gone to Canterbury Garden Apartments next year.

"And then you look at the pie and see how much money it can be cut up into," said Campilii.

The financial aid is usually made in May by the Board of Trustees, after their finance committee and the president give their input.

All things considered, neither Campilii nor Wood expect to see an unusually large increase in tuition.

Art kinda imitates life in new “Pickle” flick

The Circle, March 31, 1994

It’s always a pleasure to see the work of Ron Howard’s latest films “The Paper” and “Pickle.” As a character in Maria’s hero’s journey, the film clearly shows the importance of dedication, hard work, and perseverance. The Circle has always been a source of inspiration for me, and I hope that this film will continue to make a positive impact on the world.

The Circle is a story about a group of friends who take on the task of renovating an old building into a new community center. They face numerous challenges along the way, including budget constraints, political pressure, and personal conflicts. But through their hard work and dedication, they are able to overcome these obstacles and create something truly special.

I believe that this film will resonate with audiences around the world, as it highlights the importance of working together to achieve a common goal. The Circle has always been a source of inspiration for me, and I am excited to see how this film will continue to make a positive impact on the world.

"Don't Drink And Drive" keychain seems backwards to some; what's next?

Editorial

We don’t need rules that conflict with other rules. The motive to do something is not changed because you have a "Newspaper" next to the word "Don’t Drink And Drive" on a keychain. A "Don’t Drink And Drive" keychain? Good idea, but a failing. The "Don’t Drink And Drive" keychain is only a reminder of the fact that a person is driving. It’s not a solution. The real solution is to make people understand the consequences of drinking and driving. The "Don’t Drink And Drive" keychain is only a reminder of the fact that a person is driving.

I would like to address the problem of the temperature in the Scholars’ Building. The air conditioning is set at a very low temperature, and I believe it is wasting energy.

This is a serious issue because the temperature in the Scholars’ Building is consistently set too low. The air conditioning is set at 68 degrees Fahrenheit, and I have noticed that many students and faculty members are uncomfortable in this environment.

Softball coach gets suspended

by ANDREW HOLMLUND
Staff Writer

Head softball coach Tom Chiavelli was suspended Friday, March 25, by the athletic department. Chiavelli indicated Tuesday the decision was made by the athletic directors, athletic department, and President.

Originally, Athletic Director Gene Doris said he told The Circle that Chiavelli had left for personal reasons. However, according to the Poughkeepsie Journal, it was Chiavelli who said Chiavelli was suspended indefinitely.

The Circle was unable to reach Doris for further comment after Chiavelli spoke to The Circle. There was a lack of detail. Doris told The Circle, "We don't know the situation at this time.

Chiavelli, who is in his third season as manager, said he could not comment on the reason why he was suspended. He said he hopes the situation will be resolved as soon as possible.

"I am suspended, but it shouldn't be long," Chiavelli said. "I have been suspended since Friday, and I expect to be decided in the next few days.

Chiavelli also said he can't answer whether he is in good standing with his players.

"I can't answer that. A couple of the players called me to ask what happened, but they're the ones to ask," said Doris.

Team members declined to comment on the coach's situation.

Doris said it was uncertain whether or not Chiavelli would remain the head coach for the rest of the season.

"It's very difficult to make a statement or say something that hasn't been resolved yet," Doris said.

Assistant coach George Bergen said he would be willing to coach in any capacity for the team because of his contract.

"Whether it is helping coach pitching, hitting or carrying the bat and balls, I have a contract, and I will honor it," said the former pitching coach at SUNY Orange Community College.

Chiavelli spoke to The Circle that the decision, making process and the suspension was unexpected.

That Chiavelli was suspended, he said, "I don't know," he said. "I can't answer that. A couple of the players called me to ask what happened, but they're the ones to ask."

Doris said he was uncertain what was going to happen, but they're the ones to ask.

Some players even threatened to quit the team and relinquish their scholarships, citing the coaching problems at reasons.

However, none of those quoted as having reservations about continuing to play for the Reds under Chiavelli left the program. Doris said he did not forecast Chiavelli's possible return to the team.

"It's difficult to say," Doris said. "I'd like to resolve things as quickly as possible, but it's like that. For a coach, that is everything."

Chiavelli said he cannot give any details on his present situation.

"There is nothing I can answer," he said. "I have a decision has been made, he said.

Magarity receives multi-year contract

by TED HOLMLUND

Head men's basketball coach Dave Magarity signed a multi-year contract extension March 14 according to Athletic Director Gene Doris.

According to Doris, the changes in the terms of the contract were not structured because of Magarity's past two contracts at Marist.

Magarity currently holds the record for the lowest winning percentage in all NCAA conference play.

Magarity, whose team is losing four seconds ahead of Bequary and Alce Bequary have as the three headliners of the Marist effort this past weekend at the West Point Invitational.

Hickey finished just three seconds ahead of Magarit in the 5000 meter run was only three seconds behind his personal best.

The time was good enough to earn Hickey a fifth place finish in the 5000-meter run.

The team is having a good year, heading toward the future. The men's team also had a solid performance at the invitational.
