Third protest held to address letter

by CIRCLE STAFF

A letter to the editor in the April 14 issue of The Circle prompted yet another student protest this one on April 17, increase worry of racial tension on campus. It was the third rally in two weeks.

Drummond Ebanks, co-chairman of the urban programming council within the Black Student Union, said he does not believe the majority of the campus is racist, though.

"I know there is an element of racism," Ebanks said, a sophomore.

"There is a lack of appreciation of cultural issues.

He cited the letter, which referred to multiculturalism and diversity as "nonsense," as proof that there is some level of intolerance on campus.

Real De La Rosa, president of El Arco Iris Latino, said the was offended by the letter.

"When I saw that letter, I cried," he said. "I don't usually cry in public, but I cried when I saw that... I can't understand how anyone can say multiculturalism is nonsense.

"It's just one person's view, but I'm offended," he added.

MarshaHita Cross, president of the BSU, said she was disappointed the author of the letter, Jon Daniel, a freshman, did not attend the rally in the Champanat Hall breezeway.

"It is unfortunate that an individual has such ideas and is not able to come out and defend them," Cross said. DeRoe did not return The Circle's phone calls.

The issue of the cap on clubs was also addressed at the rally.

A flier distributed by the rally's organizers accused the Student Government Association and the College's administration of making no attempt to lift the current cap on clubs.

The flier states: "Supposedly our SGA representatives put this cap in place. We are here to have them remove it."

The flier goes on to state that several groups, like the Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Student Association, will not be chartered due to the cap and "cause their choiches are not accepted by few."

Matt Gillis, SGA president, said he agreed with much of what people at the rally said; however, changing policies was not a simple process and there were other considerations.

"We don't have unlimited resources at Marist," Gillis said. "If the student vote to have a group on campus, they would try to keep the show entertaining.

The administration may be somewhat apprehensive about the show. Carterola said that they may think that the show would be obnoxious or disgusting due to the nature of the topics.

However, Carterola said that they would try to keep the show from getting out of hand by maintaining a mostly question and answer type format and discussing mostly relationship-oriented questions.

Wright and Carterola said they would control over what they answer.

"We won't answer questions we feel uncomfortable talking about. We're looking for more 'My boyfriend broke up with me, what do I do?' type questions than 'what position is best?'" said Wright.

Kelly said that if the administration should question the show, the station would use the same argument as The Circle has, freedom of the press.

Kelly said that they feel this is a relevant issue that needs to be discussed. Kelly also mentioned that WMCR is the only medium able to do it, because they can get an immediate response from people.

Ebanks said he agreed with Kelly about the need to discuss sex and mentioned that there would be no censorship on the part of the station.

"They have total freedoms to say whatever they want. The radio station is not responsible for what they say on the show," said Ebanks.

To encourage students participation, Carterola mentioned that they've put up posters to advertise the upcoming show. The signs are designed to attract attention, by specifically mentioning "sex."

In order for the show to be a success, there must be students who call in, as well as listen. Many people know about the show and are...

WMCR to begin new program to counsel callers on love

You've thought about it, heard about it, and now is the time to talk about it.

What is it? Sex at Marist College.

Heather Curatola will host the call-in show from 12:30 p.m. to 2 p.m., WMCR will be having the "sex line," a similar program on WWHD, a call-in show that will deal more with relationship-type questions as opposed to more explicitly sexual questions.

Wright said that they approached Neal Kelly, the general manager of the station, and he was receptive to the idea, so it developed from there.

There will be a meeting right before the show airs between Wright, Carterola, Kelly and Drummond Ebanks, the program director, to discuss the show and the fact that there will be a lot of people listening to it.

The comic strip "Shoe" may be one way to get people to think about other environmental issues. "Shoe" has been published in newspapers around the country, which has helped bring attention to various environmental issues.

According to the Student Programming Board, the event will be free to the public. There will be various activities, such as games, music, and environmental exhibits. The event will be accompanied by food and fun.

In addition to the music and games, the Student Programming Board will also be providing information about various environmental organizations.

For many high school seniors who have been in college for a year, the experience is a huge learning experience. As the first year of college rolls around, many students look forward to the new opportunities and challenges that it brings.

"It was a great experience," said Patricia Southworth, senior co-captain of the varsity softball team. "I've learned more about myself than about academics," she continued. "I think the friendships I've made here are really going to last."
No frills

Marist's 40th Commencement ceremony will be memorable. Except for the speaker, that is. There isn't one. This is the best advancement in commencement ceremonies ever, though. Marist is truly on the cutting edge here.

I think about it, remove the time to introduce, wait for applause, and the speech, applause again, and you have shortened graduation at least that's how it feels.

What has the Class of 1994 done to deserve a commencement speaker anyway?

The class had the audacity to feel slighted when the phone system was installed in the dorms but there were no phones-part of the "freshman experience." Being a freshman in 1991 is different from being one in 1990. According to Marist, they had the unilateral gall to whine when their parking was taken away. Now, they are ready.

Deprived and embittered, they welcome the challenge of travailing commencement without the ob-directionally relevant words of a respected individual with real impact.

They will suffer socially through the basal dissections of those chosen individuals, whose goal is to make Marist College parking sticker and perhaps (for those more liberal authorities) "The Circle" a place to wait in).

"Why not just say: "All rise. If you paid your graduate up individually? Why not just say: "All rise. If you paid your date up individually."

"But really Mr. Conservative can only reply, "Don't count me in," and turn to drugs and then throw it all away.

Students look for cash, internships for summer

by CYLINDA RICKERT

With summer coming many students search for an extra income and—perhaps—job. At Marist, part-time positions are varied as is the student body. They range from 16-year-old to 40-year-olds. Your parents may or may not be the ones that are working for the summer. But there is someone that is not working for the summer—there are those who may not be able to get a job, and those that are working to get back to school, and those that want to work to enhance their summer time activities.

What is the solution to this summer? What is their solution? How do they feel about it? We asked Judy Reid, a freshman who lives in the same house as the writer, what was going to be her solution. She stated, "I applied in April for a job to start in May, but they aren't hiring everyone just now. I have no idea what I am going to do."

At Marist, students' summer jobs are not well known among the student body. There are problems when it comes to working this summer. There are many jobs that are not well known, and the jobs that are well known are not always known by all the students who have a desire to work. There are those who may not be able to get a job, and those that are working to get back to school, and those that want to work to enhance their summer time activities.

The softball team was looking to begin another winning streak this afternoon when it faced off against the Assumption College at the Crocebashe Athletic Field at 3 p.m. The Norwin, Mass. (16-9 overall, 3-0 in the Northeast Conference) took on the Iona College (12-2 and 2-0 in conference doubleheader action. Freshman pitcher Michelle Hudson once again led the Red Fox offense to five innings worth, Hudson (13-3 overall) allowed three hits, two walks and fanned 11 Cat batters. Hudson was named the game's "Most Valuable Player." "She pitched pretty good," Hudson said. "I take this the game - nothing to accomplish one thing-to go as many innings as possible." Naturally, Maria was jump-started by sophomore right fielder Angela Scolozzi and junior left fielder Jamie Caulfield. Spread across 3-5 with one RBI, while O'Connor was 3-4 with one.

Another Red Fox batter struck out his name. In the fifth inning, the Red Foxes were led by sophomore shortstop Janine O'Connor who was able to garner a hit. O'Connor said, "I came into the game wanting to hit the ball. I didn't want to get up and down, but I didn't get on base."

In doubles, the Red Foxes played tough, but came up short, losing all three games. Harrison was pitched with the best price.

"I think the doubles matches were really exciting," Harrison said. "The doubles matches are a team effort."

In the match, senior Steve Graham had 16 kills, and Randv Graham had 16 kills, and Randv.

When Iant Buchanan steps foot into the court on Monday, April 25, it won't be as a rookie to the Red Foxes as he had hoped, but as an alleged felon.

Buchanan, 21, from Goshen, N.Y., and Capital Cooper Jr., 23, of Poughkeepsie, face criminal charges of grand larceny, a felony, criminal possession of stolen property, also a felony; and conspiracy, a misdemeanor, stemming from their alleged theft and use of stolen credit cards on April 7, according to Town of Poughkeepsie police.

The cards, found in a locker at AllSport health club in Poughkeepsie, were used at seven stores in the Poughkeepsie Galleria to purchase over $1,000 worth of merchandise including sportswear, sneakers, jewelry and stereo equipment.
