The debate on tenure polarizes faculty

Debate on tenure polarizes faculty

by MEREDITH KENNEDY
Managing Editor

Scholar, community service and teaching make up the three characteristics of a desirable senior professor in the Marist community, according to the faculty handbook.

The debate on tenure polarizes faculty members and Dr. Marc vanderHeyden, academic vice president, often determines the fate of its fellow faculty members.

Dr. Tom Goldpaugh, assistant professor of English, is currently in a probationary period for one year after receiving tenure.

"Personally, I had a relatively easy tenure process, but the overall process has made me discouraged by the system," Goldpaugh said. "Part of it is personal, but part is because I've seen three or four professors in the department not get tenure."

A professor must come up for tenure after six years, and begins the process in the fall semester when the Rank and Tenure Committee reviews the applicability qualifications in the fields of teaching, community service and scholarship, according to the faculty handbook.

Goldpaugh said a major problem with the system is that it enables the committee members to have a lack of responsibility for their choices.

"I'm not blaming anyone, but the system, our tenure system, does not demand that people be accountable for their decisions," Goldpaugh said. "It enables them to just blame the system, 'it's not my fault, it was the system.'"

Marist guidelines say that a professor must be satisfied with teaching, service and scholarship and noteworthy in teaching to receive tenure. Goldpaugh and vanderHeyden said the tenure process at Marist is no different than other colleges, but it could always be improved.

"I think there should be more of a role for the academic deans," vanderHeyden said. "They should have a greater voice."

vanderHeyden holds two positions in the tenure process. He was elected into a position on the Rank and Tenure Committee, by the faculty last year. He also files a report as the academic vice president last year. He also files a report as the faculty representative.

Computers a requirement for admission to some colleges

by MARK ARUM
Staff Writer

Parents Weekend has come and gone, and no doubt the time honored tradition of asking Mom and Dad for a little extra spending cash to cover "tuition and book expenses" was upheld by many students.

However, unforeseen expenses at some other colleges rose as much as $4,000.

The reason: computers.

In addition to the already soaring prices of higher education, many colleges now mandate that their students purchase computers directly from the school. Institutions that currently require their students to buy computers as part of their tuition include Dartmouth, Harvard, Stevens, Clarkson and Wake Forest.

Wake Forest will begin including the computer fees next fall and incoming freshman will see tuition jump from $14,800 to $15,700.

The $3,700 increase covers the cost of the computer (an IBM ThinkPad 600 CE 446), certain software and access to various on-line services. Printers and modem are not included.

Students will have to either buy these separately or use community labs like those found at Marist.

The issue of mandatory computer purchases by college students raises many important questions as the nation, not just the scholastic community, prepares to enter the 21st century.

Although computers have not become a mandatory expense at Marist, students and parents have been paying miscellaneous fees in addition to tuition and room and board for some time now.

There is the $75 "activity fee," the $50 "room key fee," and the lesser known $50 "graduation fee."

While these charges add up over the course of a student's college career, Marist students have come to accept them. But the thought of adding a $3,700 computer system fee to this list might raise some concern.

Ryann M. Breson, a junior Computer Science major, said he frequently opposes mandated computer purchases.

"While I do agree that computers are an essential tool for college students," he said, "I think that it's ridiculous for a school to make every student buy a computer."

However, Brenon said that he also saw the advantages of the policy.

"I can understand the benefits of every student having their own computer," he said. "Anyone who has tried to use the Donnelly lab during mid-term and finals week can see that a computer for every student would make everyone's lives easier."

However, Brenon said that he also saw the same drawbacks; "There are many drawbacks," she said. "Aside from the price, what if the model becomes outdated before they graduate."

Stacey said she agrees.

"I think that it's a good idea, but what about the students who can't afford it," she said. "Should they be denied if financial aid doesn't cover the cost?"

Marist hopes for visit from Clinton, Yeltsin

by SANDY ZELLER
Staff Writer

Marist invited President Bill Clinton and Russian President Boris Yeltsin to visit campus during their summit at the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library Oct. 23. Tim Maxie, Marist College public relations director, and President Dennis Murray have been working together on the project.

Maxie said the facilities for the press at the FDR Library are very limited on space, so a solution would be to set up a location for them on campus.

Marist could serve as the site for a press briefing or be home base for the media, Maxie said. The main goal is to make Marist a media center for the summit.

Joe Moscato, a senior communications major, said he would like to see the behind the scenes workings of the press.

"I think it would be a lot of fun to see how the coverage would take place and see how much coverage it gets."

Maxie said he wants the press to use Marist because of the endless amount of resources available.

"I want Marist to be involved because the staff and faculty have expertise, the students are capable of doing work and it would be a great learning experience. Marist has the technical ability to host the media because of the hi-tech facilities and equipment," Maxie said.

Trish Clark, also a senior communications major, said it would be quite an opportunity for the college to show off what it has.

"I think it would be good for the communications department to show how useful Marist can be," she said.

Maxie said that if the Academic Computing Center makes a World Wide Web site for the summit, it would give people the opportunity to call into Marist for information on the summit.

Marist is already the site for the FDR home page, so a summation home page could be added to it.

"The summit offers the most opportunities for a great number of students and staff to help out," Maxie said.

Maxie said he has his own vision of what it would be like if Clintons visits.

Quake reduces Mexican coastal towns to rubble

WASHINGTON (AP) - A 1906 earthquake that left Mexico City in ruins has struck again, destroying towns near the historic city. Rescuers were still sorting through the rubble and searching for survivors Monday, one day after the 7.6-magnitude temblor, the strongest since the 1985 earthquake, jolted the earth. At least 500 people were killed and more than 10,000 injured in Mexico City's most recent seismic disaster. The tremor, which was centered in the state of Guerrero, about 250 miles south of Mexico City, was felt as far away as Chihuahua, 1,200 miles west of Mexico City. At least 10 people were killed and more than 1,000 injured in Chihuahua, according to the Mexican government.

NORTH DAKOTA (AP) - A 6.9 magnitude earthquake struck the state's northernmost town, destroying homes and businesses in the area. The tremor, which was centered in the state of North Dakota, was felt as far away as Minnesota and South Dakota. At least 10 people were killed and more than 1,000 injured in North Dakota, according to the North Dakota government.

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) - A 7.6 magnitude earthquake struck the state of Virginia, destroying homes and businesses in the area. The tremor, which was centered in the state of Virginia, was felt as far away as Maryland and West Virginia. At least 10 people were killed and more than 1,000 injured in Virginia, according to the Virginia government.

Dear Editor:

It is very rare that Marist College is in such a strait when it comes to the speakers and guest lecturers. For the past few years, this has been the case. Many students, faculty, and the administration are disappointed with the guest speakers and the quality of their presentations.

With this new speaker, the students and faculty are hoping for a better experience. The guest speaker has been recommended by many of the students and faculty, and they believe that this will be the case. The administration is also hoping for a better experience, as they have been trying to improve the overall quality of the guest speakers over the past few years.

I personally hope that this new speaker will be a success, as I believe that the students and faculty are in need of a better experience. I hope that this new speaker will be able to bring a new perspective to the Marist College community and improve the overall quality of the guest speakers.

Sincerely,

October looks to be the men’s Renaissance

by Jake Farkas
Art Sport Editor

We could be witnessing the start of something new. With one month left in the regular season, the men’s team seems to have not only emerged from their scoring drought but from the Sloane vaccines. Chris Rivola atPhiladelphia had a nice assist from Marist.

Although the West has had its share of ups and downs this season, this team has shown improvement.

Rick Gentile said. “We’re not the only ones who have been picking up at the network. But we’re not the only ones who have been picking up at the network. It’s not just the west that’s picking up, it’s also the east.

With one month left in the regular season, Fox and CBS are among those networks carving up the major broadcast contract. AT&T had exclusive rights for five years, but after the last three years, it was clear that the company was looking to change its strategy. The new contract will likely include a broadcast of the games on a network other than the major ones, such as ESPN. The move is seen as an effort to boost the ratings for the games.

Baseball Network may go into extra innings

by John Nelson
Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Major League Baseball went to OT, or extra innings, on Tuesday night to try to break its 10-week record of not having a game end until extra innings.

Five of six games were among those that went into extra innings. The Miami Marlins versus the New York Yankees, which could go into extra innings, was one of the games that were scheduled.

The moves come as part of a new slumping trend in the sport, which is seeing more games ending in extra innings.

“We’re meeting with the other broadcast networks this week to try to break the record,” MLB Commissioner Rob Manfred said Tuesday. “We think that will be possible. We’ll go back to the drawing board to see how we can break the record.”

The Marlins-Yankees game, which was scheduled for 7:05 p.m. ET, was tied 1-1 after nine innings. The game was called on a 46-minute rain delay and will resume Wednesday night.

No matter how many people might have thought, the Marist College women’s tennis team had a shot at reaching the national championships.

On Tuesday, October 3, the Red Foxes lost to Hartford University at the Connecticut Tennis Center in New Haven.

Even after the Red Foxes had a tough day with the exception of Sara Ligneri, who won her first match of the season against Dianne Kaper, 6-5.

Coach Charles Gentile said afterward, “We’re not the only ones picking up at the network. It’s not just the west that’s picking up, it’s also the east.

Women’s soccer team on a roll by winning two
by JIM DERVAN
Staff Writer.
With six minutes remaining, the women’s soccer team faced a 1-0 deficit against St. Francis (Pa.) last Wednesday in Loudonville. Just then freshman forward Nicole Fontana sent a pass from the left of goal from freshman midfielders Amanda Swiderek布鲁克·斯托克和安德烈·约翰逊·斯托克.Timeout. The day was over, their mission was achieved.

By going into Connecticut, the men ran in the Fairfield Invitational for the third consecutive year. And for the third consecutive year, they emerged victorious.

The event promised to be a challenging obstacle for the men runners, but successfully pulled it off, showing great team effort.

“With three runners remaining, junior forward Mary Walsh finalized the last minute heroics, putting the Saints away, sending the ball past the near post. Swiderek was again awarded the assist. Marist continued their win streak on Saturday playing host to league opponent St. Francis (Pa.), winning by improving their record to 5-6, (2-1 in Northeast Conference play).

As Senior and starting goalie Zack recorded 17 saves, only giving up a goal three minutes into the game. "Both had a solid game," coach Maria Piechocki said. "She made some really great saves."

Pienchecki was impressed with many key parts of the Red Fox game. "It was an end to end game. There was good communication, and passing was great," Pienchecki said. "It was first time the whole team played so well, every individual was great.

St. Francis (St. Francis) go for what they never expected. "They came in with a cocky attitude like they were going to walk all over us," Solomon said. "We shocked them, we really startled them."

On Saturday, the Red Foxes got started early when sophomore Stacey Sebastian scored unassisted after being left isolated inside the penalty box. Pienchecki said the Red Foxes did not play as well as they had against Siena.

There were several opportunities to score for St. Francis. They were just unlucky they didn’t put the ball in the back of the net," the head coach said. "We scored they didn’t that was the key to the game." Another question: was the Red Fox's win ugly? Pienchecki was happy to get the victory.

"We were lacking polish and intensity," she said. "The communication was not there, but it was a conference win, that’s the bottom line."

With seven minutes remaining in first half play Walsh was unassisted, scored, assisted by Swiderek.

Bruce scored her second goal in two games, kicking it past the St. Francis goalkeeper.

Swiderek said opponents may give the Red Foxes more respect after the upset victory over Siena.

In the beginning we were getting shrugged off because we are not a first year program," Swiderek said. "But we need to show people how we can play, we never do give up."

Marist faced Holy Cross yesterday, results were unavailable at press time. Next up for the Red Foxes is Wagner on Saturday.

Normally, if a coach sees a key member of his team forced out of action by an injury, the best he can hope for is that someone will step up and take over.

But when Marist women’s cross country coach Phil Kelly saw his junior co-captain Collin Carson hobble off the course with a leg cramp, he could only hope to have a runner to carry Marist to victory.

Kelly said he was happy with his team’s performance, saying it was the 25 points away from improving his times even though he has been the consistent runner for the Red Foxes all year.

"I’m happy because I’m helping out that end of the field that can run much faster and I’ll get it together in the next couple of weeks."

Now the team hopes to focus on this weekend with meet at Marist Invitational at Bowdoin Park.

Pienchecki was impressed with the Red Foxes for 90 minutes.
