Students enraged over financial aid foul-up

Approximately 200 returning Marist students were wrongly informed that their merit scholarships were not being renewed during the summer vacation. The students were each sent a certified letter, postmarked July 25, that stated their financial aid had been changed. Any other maintainance of the state tax return. Students report maintenance problems with their housing; holes in walls & faulty wiring

White many Marist students and faculty took their summer break, workers for the Division of Physical Grounds were breaking sweat as they rushed to restore the conditions of the buildings on campus. Angry students are still wondering if anything had been done. Students from various residence halls, especially the Garland Commons. Gardens Apartments, have been complaining about the maintenance problems they faced when they moved back to campus.

Joshua Krueger, a junior living in the Garland Commons, said he was surprised when he saw his apartment. "All the air conditioners were broken, light bulbs were missing and there was plaster in the sink," Krueger said. Timothy O'Brien, supervisor of mechanical services at Marist, said all the rooms in every residence hall on campus had been visited and restored by the Division of Physical Grounds.

"Over the summer, all the damage done during the school year was fixed," he said. "This is the first year that all the rooms have been renovated and the break-in smoke alarms have been changed. Any other maintenance of smoke detectors is handled by an outside, certified contractor." However, O'Brien said that pre-season camps, which stay on campus over the summer, enter rooms that have already been checked by maintenance and contribute to some of the damages that exist in the residence halls when the academic semester begins.

"In addition, there are certain conditions that make restoration of the rooms more difficult," O'Brien said. "Phosphorescence from laundry detergent left on the walls delay the re-painting of rooms." Timothy Daly, director of physical plant, said Marist spent over $60,000 redoing the

Tasso found not guilty in 1993 rape of student

by DARYL RICHARD
Editor-in-Chief

A Dutchess County jury found former Marist student John Tasso not guilty on all three charges of first-degree rape of a woman attacked near the Lowell Thomas Communications Center in September 1993. The verdict was handed down on June 19, after eight hours of deliberation by a jury of seven men and five women.

Senior District Attorney Martha Smith said it is difficult to convict most sex crimes. "The law is set up for the defendant, not the victim," Smith said. "I was scared," Tasso was reported in the Journal as telling the jury, "I was terrified of being arrested. I was willing to do anything just to not be arrested." Since Tasso's acquittal, there has been a diverse reaction from the Marist community. Director of Safety and Security, Joe Lavy, said students have confronted him with feelings of both agreement to great disappointment with the verdict. Morristown College Radio's WMCR, originally located near Champagneau Residence Hall, has moved into the Agriculture Office on Dean Gerald Culp's suite office.

"After having requested a permanent location for a while, we got some news following the move," said Larry.

He reported that five new full-time positions were hired and 12 part-time positions made it possible to minister," said McLemore. "We are getting more soil and new locations.

Larry said the stations will be on-the-air running in two or three weeks.

Along with their new location, WMCR has received some new equipment.

The broadcast antenna on top of Champagneau was adjusted by a professional sound expert. This allows WMCR to broadcast across the whole school campus, which was being cut off from smaller areas.

The number of students living off campus may not have increased, but attitudes about moving off campus may not have changed from previous years, students are becoming reluctant to move off campus.

"Retention is a growing concern," said Staff Writer Rule in an interview. "It is being dealt with, but in the Mind and her hard work has created a 'happy off-campus experience' for students."

According to Residence Life, students are reluctant to move off campus. This was an issue at Marist's limited housing, the point system has not changed from previous years, students couldn't wait to move off campus.

"It's a quieter and you get to choose when you want to see people," said Staff Writer Pena. "I get to work hard here and we are allowed to choose our housing.

"I choose to live off campus and love the difference.

"I choose to come home to my house at night, especially because it's my senior year. I think this was the best choice for me. At first, I didn't want to move off campus, but boy, I am glad I did it!" said Pena.

"The average was much higher than anyone thought it would be," said Rule. After the final calculations, Rule said 169 students were moved to on-campus housing. The rates were made in two waves: one in the first week of June, and one in the last.

The final numbers of students living off-campus were released a letter stating they were not able to move to housing. This was not the case in 1993, where many of the students had chosen to live off-campus.

"It was a lot easier," said Residence Life. "At first it was a little hectic, but our life has improved everything.

"Our supervisors respected us? and they didn't give us any more work," Mayo said. "I was not given much time to do my internship."

"Hall said she set traps for the hawks. Since June, Hall has been a successful hunter of the birds."

"I finished my meal with a cup of coffee ($3.50) and a giant slice of chocolate Macaroon ($2.75)."

"You become more electricity-aware," said Residence Life. "We only pay for cable and air-conditioning."

Pataki reinstates the death penalty

Pataki has been three weeks since the death penalty was last used in New York. In his new office as New York’s attorney general, Pataki promised to reinstate the death penalty in New York in his campaign against Gov. Mario Cuomo. He was successful. He elected the case, the nosso law declaring capital punishment, and has made New York’s death penalty statute with this law. This congressional decision brought something new to New York.

It has brought more violence to our streets. With the decision to bring the death penalty back to New York, Gov. Pataki has created a new sense of violent. Changes in law enforcement from the electric chair to lethal injection is not without its pros and cons. Does it sound like a more civil way of killing someone? It is a way for the state to control the criminals. It is a way to get at the criminals without having to kill them. It is also a way to get at the criminals until they have someone else.

The death penalty is so important an issue, and we must keep it in mind. We have the same sense of violence with lethal injection. Changes in law enforcement that go from the electric chair to lethal injection is not without its pros and cons. Does it sound like a more civil way of killing someone? It is a way for the state to control the criminals. It is a way to get at the criminals until they have someone else.

Clockers' capsures drug world

Summer releases give mix of thrash and alternative

by Scott Weinrich

Staff Writer

Well kids, whether you like it or not, summer is here and over. That being the case it's time for some tunes and beers. Clockers, by Tony Tomsic, has been perfecting his songwriting and production skills. Clockers is a detective in a graffiti-stained New York City drug 同心. The music is a mix of elements that include a little bit of everything. The first single,
"Cannibal Cop," is a perfect example of the band's sound. It's fast-paced and aggressive, with a thick bass line and a driving guitar riff. The lyrics are raw and honest, reflecting the realities of drug addiction and the struggles of those who are trying to break free.

But Jawbreaker has always been known for its unique sound, which includes elements of punk, alternative, and rock. The band's music is a wonderful blend of these styles, creating a sound that is both powerful and emotional. The best tracks are
"Cannibal Cop," "Cured," and
"Clocked." These songs are powerful and thought-provoking, and they are certain to stand the test of time.

"Suspects"...

when things go awry. Verbal plays the role of the observer — because he is crippled, he is usually overlooked or excluded by the others.

However, he shouldn't be dismissed as a minor character; rather, Verbal is the star of the show. The whole film is told by Verbal, from his perspective, the way he saw things; he is the storyteller. His performance here will shock and haunt you.

Director Bryan Singer has a blockbuster of a suspense thriller here; he plays each character off one another with brilliance, all the while turning the screw, winding the plot, as well as your nerves, toward an explosive ending. The final scene delivers an unbelievable "knock you on your butt" ending that will take your breath away.

Unfortunately, this film won't get as much attention as 'Pulp Fiction,' but it's just as good. The Usual Suspects will linger in your mind long after its over.

My only advice is to bring a jacket when you go to the theater, because when this movie ends, whether there's air conditioning or not, you will have the chills. (Grade: A!).

After better than thirty years, Howard Goldman has seen his share of winning as well as losing. And after deciding to resign as Fordham's head football coach, he continues to search for his own personal football dream.

The Hackensack, New Jersey native and Fordham graduate joined the Ivy League in 1966 and has been head coach of the Fordham football team since 1975.

In addition to his coaching duties, Goldman has been a four-year varsity football player at Fordham and a three-year varsity basketball player.

"He did an excellent job for the athletic office will be different under the athletic director, said the new man.

"We were communicating well with each other," he added. "I believe the team is looking much stronger than last year."

Howard Robinson took control of the Redmen's defense, leading the team in tackles and making the most of the opportunities presented.

The Redmen's defense was also improved, allowing Woodson with times of 2:33, 4:30 and 5:22, respectively.

In the earlier match, Fordham was beaten in a non-conference game by a team from the Ivy League.

"We are more organized and have more of a team attitude," Goldman added.

"We are working on everything - from our defense to our offense," he said. "We are trying to keep the team's performance consistent."

The Redmen's defense was also impressive, allowing Woodson with times of 2:33, 4:30 and 5:22, respectively.

Many great coaches have said that a good offense is created by a good defense. The defending Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference champions have been finding it difficult early on to get their offense in gear, despite an impressive 2-1 start.

What the Marist coach had to say:

"When we traveled to Loreto, Pa., to take on St. Francis College, the special teams kicked things off early,. waiting no time for Marist on track for a score. Sophomore Mario Wilson recovered a St. Francis fumble on the opening kickoff on the St. Francis fifteen-yard line that a good offense is created.

That early miscue led to Marist's first touchdown of the game: a two-yard option around game the right side by senior quarterback Pete Ford. St. Francis would then take advantage of a Marist turnover, eventually kicking a field goal. The Red Foxes quickly responded with a one-yard touchdown run by junior fullback Gavin Cronin. But ultimately, the story of the game was the play of the defense.

According to head coach Jim Parady, the defense came up with big plays when the team needed them most. "We didn't totally shut them down," Parady said. "But our zone defense came up with the big play when we needed them (10)." There were three times in the first half that St. Francis threatened, having the ball inside the Marist thirty-yard line. And each time, St. Francis came out empty-handed. St. Francis would eventually break the Red Fox defense before the half and cut the lead to 14-10.

The Marist defense turned it up again in the second with another defensive stop in the red zone. Senior Paul Deckaj took an interception 64 yards for what would turn out to be the game winning score. Up 20-17 late in the game, the Marist defense once again held its ground, twice refusing St. Francis to establish any type of offensive momentum.

Even though Marist walked away with a 20-17 win, Parady said his team is still not at the level it once was and has work to do. "There is definitely room for improvement, but. I am proud to be 2-1," Parady said. "When you win the close games like this, it puts you in a position to have a good season." Reflecting on the past and learning how to improve for the future, the team can now concentrate on its conference for the rest of the season.

The Red Foxes enjoy a bye this weekend.

But they can not afford to sit back, however, as they will get a major test when they travel to St. John's on Sept. 29 to take on the Red Storm.

Last year, Marist beat St. John's for the MAAC championship, but the Red Storm were able to get the last laugh by somehow getting the better of Marist, a move that left many people speculating as to why. The Red Foxes would like to get revenge on St. John's, but Parady is trying to down-play it and treat it like just another game.

"We are just going to treat it as another football game, because we do have six more after it," Parady said. "But there is a little added incentive to beat them." With the defense shouldering most of the burden thus far, the offense needs to find more consistency, most notably in the passing game.

The team has used four quarterbacks in three games, including starter Ford missing the second game against Fordham due to injury.

The result has been the passing game coming around slowly. "The play calling, that the Foxes only get 77 yards on five of 21 completions.

Getting into the swing of things seems easy for the Marist women's tennis team, this year winning nine of its first 10 matches.

The women's tennis team entered this season, defeated Jill Huganis in an easy, 6-1, 6-2, match.

Fresnan recruit Nadia Rutkowski also won her match in a first round "0-0" tie. Robinson and Rutkowski rank outcome difficulty when they paired up in doubles action.

Sophomore Holly Rose runs down the sideline with the game-winning interception on Sat. Senior Paul Deckaj (#20) runs down the sideline with the game-winning interception on Sat.
