Racial remarks spark need for sensitivity throughout Marist community

by STEPHANIE MERCURIO
News Editor

An alleged racial incident sparked much awareness and sensitivity on campus.

Susan Tucker, a senior resident of Gartland Commons, said she was coming home from a party on Sept. 28, when an unidentified male directed a racial slur toward her.

"Two men and a woman were standing in a group in the middle of Gartland, and I heard one of the men say 'I'm so sick of these f—ing niggers,'" Tucker said. "It was around three in the morning, and I was alone and scared."

Tucker said she then went into her apartment and called security for help. Three security guards responded to the call.

"The first officer to arrive on the scene was very nice and said that if I didn't see who made the comment, then I couldn't prove it," she said. "When the other two officers arrived, we walked to where the incident took place, but the people who I saw before were gone."

Tucker said she saw a male student standing in the doorway of a 10 apartment. She then asked him if he had seen the three students who had been outside.

"After he had said he seen who was out there, two of the security guards pulled him aside where I couldn't hear what they were saying," she said. "The officers came back and told me the student could have possibly been involved, but wouldn't admit it to me this time and kept his name until I asked several times."

Tucker said one of the officers began laughing at this point.

"I asked him if he had found the incident humorous, and he was very rude and told me he was laughing at a piece of paper in his hand," she said. "He told me that just because I was upset, I shouldn't take it out on them. That made me really angry."

Tucker said she found dealing with security very frustrating.

"After getting the run around for two weeks, Joe Leary told me something would be done," she said.

Leary, director of security, said through his investigation to find the student, security was coming with negative results.

"I was very interested in this, but I couldn't believe it," Leary said. "I had no idea what she was talking about when she told me, I couldn't believe it."

Sullivan said Tucker asked him if he had seen two males and a female standing outside talking.

"When I had been outside with my two friends, she turned to the security guard and said, 'I was the one who had said it,' he said. "I had no idea what she was talking about when she told me, I couldn't believe it."

Sullivan said Tucker continued to accuse him of making the racial comments.

"She thought either me or my friend said the comment, and she wanted an apology," he said.

Kappa Epsilon (TKE) is planning to appeal loss of charter after losing their charter on Oct. 14.

The fraternity's charter was revoked after a 17-year-old freshman out of state went to Saint Francis hospital after consuming alcohol at a TKE party. The student's blood alcohol content was more than 0.3.

The Marist chapter of TKE had been partying with several members of TKE from Hartford University at 156 Cannon St. since a recent incident on Sept. 14.

According to Patrick Mara, student body president, several of the guests who were drinking beer and spiked punch were under the legal drinking age.

"He also said Queen Nofa of Jordan gave an articulate speech about the fragile nature of the peace process in the Middle East, "If there is no peace and you can't even have a peaceful life, how are we going to have a better future?" he said. "You have to take care of it."

TKE plans to appeal loss of charter

The Marist chapter of Tau Kappa Epsilon (TKE) is planning an appeal to its judicial board after losing their charter on Oct. 11.

The fraternity's charter was revoked after a 17-year-old freshman out of state went to Saint Francis hospital after consuming alcohol at a TKE party. The student's blood alcohol content was more than 0.3.

The Marist chapter of TKE had been partying with several members of TKE from Hartford University at 156 Cannon St. since a recent incident on Sept. 14.

According to Patrick Mara, student body president, several of the guests who were drinking beer and spiked punch were under the legal drinking age.

"I think Dr. Murray's was the best because it was short and concise and he had an eloquent speech that talked about Eleanor Roosevelt's influence on the community and how this award would be the impetus to continue," he said.

Sullivan said Tucker continued to accuse him of making the racial comments.

"He also said Queen Nofa of Jordan gave an articulate speech about the fragile nature of the peace process in the Middle East, "If there is no peace and you can't even have a peaceful life, how are we going to have a better future?" he said. "You have to take care of it."

TKE has been put on great deal wraps because of the incident, but neither of us had, so we would not apologize," he said.

Leary said security is investigating the actions of the officers.

"I don't know how the situation will be handled, but we are conducting an investigation," he said.

Leary said he feels it is important for the victim to know security conducted an investigation.

Marist debates the legalization of marijuana

By Chris Thomas

The legalization of marijuana has recently been discussed in Marist by both students and Massoud.

Massoud has been involved in drug policy discussions for several years, and is a former director of a drug rehabilitation center in Afghanistan.

Massoud said that legalizing marijuana would benefit the country by providing a source of revenue and reducing the illegal drug trade.

Massoud also argued that legalizing marijuana would help to reduce the stigma associated with drug use and would allow people to make their own decisions about their drug use.

Massoud acknowledged that there are concerns about the potential negative effects of drug use, but argued that these concerns can be addressed through education and regulation.

Massoud's position is supported by a growing body of research, which suggests that legalizing marijuana could have a number of positive effects, including reducing drug-related violence and improving public health outcomes.

Massoud's proposal has been met with mixed reactions from other students and faculty members, with some expressing concern about the potential negative effects of drug use and others arguing that legalizing marijuana would lead to increased drug use and addiction.

The debate on the legalization of marijuana continues to be an热点 topic for discussion at Marist College.
Marist celebrates National Coming Out Day

by Stephanie Marsico

Marist celebrated National Coming Out Day on Oct. 11 by hosting an event in honor of LGBT+ students and allies. The day is dedicated to celebrating and supporting the LGBTQ+ community, and many students and faculty members gathered in Mahoney Hall to advocate for greater visibility and acceptance on campus.

In her address, President Arlene M. Mulcahy announced the launch of the Marist College Pride Network, a new student organization focused on promoting LGBTQ+ rights and advocating for a more inclusive campus environment.

“Today we celebrate National Coming Out Day and honor all those who have chosen to live openly and authentically,” Mulcahy said. “We recognize the important role that Marist College can play in creating a more welcoming and inclusive campus for everyone.”

Through a series of workshops and discussions, students and faculty members shared their experiences and discussed ways to support the LGBTQ+ community on campus.

“The purpose of this event is to bring attention to the issues faced by the LGBTQ+ community and to provide a safe space for students and faculty members to come together and support one another,” said Elizabeth Taylor, director of the Office of Diversity and Inclusion.

After the event, Marist students and faculty members were encouraged to participate in the annual “It Gets Better” video campaign, which aims to inspire and uplift LGBTQ+ youth by sharing stories of hope and resilience.

“We want to send a message of hope to LGBTQ+ youth who are struggling with their identity,” said Taylor. “It’s important to know that there is support out there and that they are not alone.”

During the event, students and faculty members were also encouraged to wear blue, the recognized color for coming out day, as a symbol of solidarity.

“We hope that our blue attire will demonstrate to our community that we support and love all students, regardless of their sexual orientation or gender identity,” said Taylor.

Throughout the event, students and faculty members shared their stories and experiences of coming out, and discussed ways to create a more inclusive and accepting campus environment.

“We need to continue to have these conversations and work together to make our campus a more welcoming place for everyone,” said Taylor.

At the end of the event, Marist College announced its commitment to the National College Pride Network, a coalition of colleges and universities that are working to support LGBTQ+ students and community members.

“By joining the National College Pride Network, Marist College can support LGBTQ+ students and allies and work towards creating a more inclusive and supportive campus environment,” said Taylor.

The event was organized by the Office of Diversity and Inclusion and the Office of Student Affairs, with support from the LGBTQ+ student group on campus.

“A special thank you to our student group for their hard work and dedication to making this event a success,” said Taylor.

Overall, the event was a powerful reminder of the importance of creating a more inclusive and accepting campus environment for all students.

Letters to the Editor

Halloween has always been one of my favorite holidays. There is something about the festive nature of this holiday that brings a smile to most people's faces. However, this year has brought about some controversy concerning its representation.

In this issue, we have featured an article discussing the significance of Halloween, and how it has evolved over time. The article highlights the fact that Halloween was originally celebrated as a way to remember the dead, but has since become a time for fun and enjoyment. It also brings up the issue of cultural appropriation, and how certain elements of the holiday have been taken out of context.

As a society, it is important for us to recognize the significance of holidays and their origins. Halloween is a prime example of how our traditions and celebrations can be affected by cultural appropriation. It is up to us as individuals to respect and honor these traditions in a way that is culturally sensitive.

Helpful hints from the Video Guy on how to succeed in ‘SuperMario 64’

by Jen Bidlajewski
TheGamer

SuperMario 64 is a very challenging game, but don’t let that scare you away. It’s difficult, but I’m here to help.

For example, if you can’t seem to get past a certain level, try to get a friend to help you. Sometimes, it’s easier to get past a level when you’re playing with someone else. And don’t be afraid to ask for help. There are plenty of people out there who would be happy to help you.

You can also try playing the game on a lower difficulty level. This will make it easier to get past certain levels and will help you build up your skills. And don’t be afraid to try different strategies. Sometimes, a simple change in your approach can make all the difference.

Finally, remember that SuperMario 64 is a game, and it’s okay to have fun. Don’t get too discouraged if you can’t get past a certain level. Just keep trying, and you’ll get there eventually.

The Bottom Line:
Don’t pay more than $1.00 to see this film today.

'Sleepers' combines superstars DeNiro and Hoffman with superstars Pat and Patriotic.

by Ada Lee

It is a hot, sticky summer in 1968.

Fleeing from a bully in New York City, the boys are chased in a car that runs off the road. They wake up in St. Luke’s, the room of the Boys’ Home. The men in the room are talking about the movie of the same name that was made in 1968.

The scene then jumps to 1968.

The boys have grown up, but some have lived harder than others. Mike, played by Robert De Niro, is a man of the streets. He is living up to his reputation, and high on drugs, he is getting drunk and high.

While Levinson is a master at blending the two careers, there is no reason not to be moved by the superb acting, the superb story, and the superb direction of the film. The courtroom scenes are brilliant. There is a scene with Father Paddy in the film that is moving, and the boys have grown up, but some have lived harder than others. Teams get cold shoulder up north

by Marry Niccola

If a casual fan of the hockey team observes what has taken place within the past few years, he may get the impression that there’s one loss, a win, and a tie, that they’ve all been learned.

The reality is not as simple.

Skiing through the northern states and New England, the Stags will take on teams that are not as good as Marist, but Marist wants to end its season with a win.

MCTV or WMVC cannot carry the games because they do not have the coverage and exposure. Of course, ski teams are not a dying breed that has died out to go to the grave with them, but North field does not get the same exposure and there are no bleachers to put fans up by to slow and stay.

The men's soccer team suffered its toughest loss of the year on Saturday when it stood at 11-0 with two games remaining in this 1996 season.

At 3-2-3 start, the squad sank into a five game tailspin, which included losses at Monmouth and Rider during the second week of October. At Monmouth, head coach Bob Herodes watched his Red Foxes dominate much of the game, but, as was the case throughout the first half of the schedule, Marist could not capitalize on the opportunities it created, and Monmouth managed to squeeze out a 3-2 win.

The season hit its lowest point when Marist visited Rider on October 12. The Red Foxes stayed competitive well into the second half, but an offensive explosion in the final thirty minutes helped Rider secure a 6-0 victory.

The team's lengthy road trip ended on a positive note, thanks to a double-overtime, 2-2 tie with Long Island University. Senior forward Kevin Hardy knocked in his second goal as the Red Foxes took a point out of 2-2 win.

"We started to turn it around at LIU," explained Herodes. "It's always tough to play in Brooklyn."

The Red Foxes returned home for the first time in nearly a month on October 20, as they hosted Canisius. Herodes' squad managed to keep some of the momentum from the LIU game, and played its best game of the year, drubbing Canisius 8-2. Hardy scored a goal and added three assists, and was honored as the NEC Player of the Week.

"It's been tough," said Herodes. "If the kids have any chance to play on any level, they're going to have to challenge their opponents with a heart."

"I brought in eleven new guys, and we're just trying to put it together and get on the same page," said Herodes.

Last Thursday, St. Francis (NY), the top-seeded team in the Northeast Conference, rolled onto the Marist campus, and the red-hot Red Foxes proved that they can play with any team in the region.

"We've got to get these last two to go to 8-4. They're both on the road (at St. Peter's and at Oneonta), so it's going to be tough."

"If we can get a win, it's going to be a big win for us," said Kelly. "I really feel like we should have finished this year the way we started. That was the Red Foxes chance to redeem ourselves."

"We've had opportunities. We just missed opportunities," Piechocki said.
