MIPO predictions close to actual election results

by STEPHANIE MERCURIO & TIM MASON

The Marist Institute for Public Opinion (MIPO) maintained its reputation by projecting Bill Clinton would win the Tuesday night presidential election.

MIPO predicted that Clinton was favored by 51 percent, while Dole was favored by 49 percent. Perot was backed by eight percent, and one percent preferred other candidates.

Clinton actually captured 49 percent of the vote, winning 31 states and 379 electoral votes. Dole took 41 percent of the vote, with 19 states and 159 electoral votes. Perot was backed by eight percent, and one percent favored other candidates.

MIPO also predicted voter turnout at a given time. They projected that fewer than half such national television and radio programs as ABC's World News Tonight, CNN's Inside Politics, and NBC's Today in New York, among others.

However, 52 percent feel Dole can be trusted, while only 28 percent feel they can trust Clinton. MIPO also predicted voter turnout will be less than 51 percent, the lowest since 1924. This would mean that fewer than half of the eligible voters may vote.

MIPO polls have been seen on national television and radio programs as ABC's World News Tonight, CNN's Inside Politics, and NBC's Today in New York, among others.

Careers Expo aims to provide Marist students with work opportunities

Murray said he urges graduates and seniors to attend as well as alumni from other colleges. Some of the other Mid-Hudson colleges which will be in attendance include Bard College, Culinary Institute of America, Dutchess Community College, Mount Saint Mary College, Orange Community College, Sullivan Community College, SUNY-New Paltz, Ulster Community College, and Vassar College.

Denis Murray said he suggests that juniors and seniors dress in business attire and bring resumes and that freshmen and sophomores dress casually.

Career Services offers workshops and videos to help prepare for the expo, including help with resume writing and how to present oneself in an interview.

Racism continues to be pressing issue on campus

"Racism continues to be a problem on campus," one student said. "I don’t think there are any real solutions to it. As we pass them in the hallway, that’s like a white students’ room that’s owned by a white student. That’s why most of the administrators of minority groups are against diversity or anything that involves diversity."

The problem is that the majority of the campus is only reflective of things going on in the larger nation of people’s personal lives. It’s a reflection of our own personal lives. As president of B.S.U., Owens said that the student is entitled to free speech, to a reasonable environment, to a culture, to a support system, to a community that will benefit the students. "We’re not here to be mere functionaries. We’re here to support the students, and we’re here to support the administration."

"When home pages have too much text, I can’t even read through them," one student said. "It’s too overwhelming. It’s a lot to take in."

"Students really need the who, what, when, where, why and how to know what’s going on. You really need the who, what, when, where, why and how to know what’s going on."

"The student is entitled to freedom of speech. We’re here to support the students, and we’re here to support the administration."

"Students really need the who, what, when, where, why and how to know what’s going on. You really need the who, what, when, where, why and how to know what’s going on."

The test has four different scales to determine your personality, which will help you decide what kind of career you would fit into. It’s kind of neat to see what personality quirks you have, what body else.

The test is more of a personality indicator. You have to take it seriously. You have to be interested in it. You have to be interested in what kind of career you never preimagined. You have to be interested in the types of people you never knew.

The answer: "I wake up and I ask myself, ‘What happened last night?’ and I think about what I need to do today. I think about what I want to do today. I think about what I’m going to do today. I think about what I’m going to do today. I think about what I’m going to do today. I think about what I’m going to do today. I think about what I’m going to do today."

But seriously, there are two on-campus activities to participate in. The Halloween party is not just for little kids anymore. The Halloween party is not just for little kids anymore. The Halloween party is not just for little kids anymore.

For example, if you are an extraverted individual who prefers social interaction and interaction with people, then a computer desk job would not be suited for you. On the other hand, if you are an introverted person, you would either have no facts and figures, or you would be interested in the types of people you never knew.

These tests can be gold mines for some people, particularly those who are trying to choose a career or major. While the results of the test shouldn’t surprise you, you should not make a decision based on the results of the test alone. You should talk to your parents, teachers, or a guidance counselor before making a decision.

Milton Berle: The world remembers a pioneer (As if we had a choice)

by Regina Mraz

AP television writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Milton Berle, the funnyman, has died.

Milton Berle's son Joey Adams said his father died Friday at his home in Malibu, Calif. Adams said Berle died of natural causes.

In a career that spanned 60 years, Berle was a master of self-deprecating humor and absurdity. He was known for his quick wit and ability to make people laugh. Berle was a pioneer in the world of television, and his influence can be seen in the work of many comedians who came after him.

Kevin Powell comes to Marist from 'The Real World'

by Chris Lake

Soft Staff Writer

On different nights, Marist College student Kevin Powell immerses himself in different worlds.

Kevin Powell, a freelance writer and content developer, originally created characters and stories for MTV's 'The Real World.' He then transitioned to the world of college, where he is currently a sophomore.

The event, sponsored by the Student Senate, proved to be a huge success despite the high turnout. Phil Lynott, president of R.E.B.O., was pleased with the event's high turn-out.

When asked why he wanted to participate, Mara said, "I wanted to have a chance to meet some of the people who will be the leaders of the future. I was interested in talking to them about their experiences and seeing how they got to where they are today."

Mara finds that there are different types of leaders, and he is always learning new things from them. He says that leadership is not just about being a boss, but about being a responsible citizen who can make a positive impact on the world.

There was a lot of interest in the event, with many students attending and asking questions. Mara says that the event was a success because it gave students a chance to meet and talk to people who are doing important work.

During the event, students were given insights into the world of leadership, and Mara found it to be a valuable learning experience. He says that the event helped him to understand the importance of leadership and how it can make a difference in the world.
Bridge to a second term in office

The American people duly reelected Bill Clinton "with high hope, and hearts heavy" in 1992, hoping to bring about changes for the good of this fine land. It was a fact that he would have been the most accomplished president in the 1992 race. Many thought that he would be an excellent president as he was a man of integrity and a leader in the eyes of his countrymen.

While Bill Clinton's defeat was at most surprising as a Super Bowl loss by the Buffalo Bills, it was also the last time the American public saw him in action. Clinton was known to be a great orator and a skilled negotiator, and his leadership was admired by many.

But the presidency is a tall order, and it's hard to imagine his successor. Bill Clinton did have a lot of good for this country, despite mixed messages and failures along the way. The first term's record of economic policy was filled with ups and downs (the "broad" media, or Kennington Clinton's success) was regarded as a victory. But Bill's presidency has been gone from a new party demanding experience and personal leadership. The August 1994 intra-party attempts for a centrist candidate again came as a shock to Clinton. The new party was as well as a backlash of character at the Clinton "shield agenda." But that is not the end of it. All the leading voters were so many in character issues and serious charges. Now, Clinton is not the shield agenda but the "pledge of a leader."

What is at stake is the future of the country as much as one of the most important issues in recent political history. A leader must be able to lead the country out of a recession and set the stage for future growth. Clinton's record was mixed at best, as he failed to deliver on his promises.

The upcoming presidential elections will be a test of the American people's willingness to give Clinton another chance. A new president will have the opportunity to make a fresh start and build a bright future for the country.

The road to economic ruin

Bill Clinton has inherited his second term as president, and he will spend the remainder of his term fighting to keep the economy on track. He has promised to do so by focusing on creating jobs, reducing the deficit, and increasing the country's competitiveness.

But the economy is a complex and difficult issue to navigate. There are many factors at play, and it will take a lot of hard work and dedication to ensure that the American people are well taken care of.

The United States gained prosperity during the Clinton years, but the economy has struggled since his presidency. The stock market has lost much of its value, and unemployment is high.

The way forward will be a challenging one, but the American people are hopeful that their leader will be able to guide them to a brighter future.

The score ended up in favor of Towson State 14-7 after what was a lackluster effort on Marist’s part. The Red Foxes were expected to impose upon the Tigers, but instead were unable to take full advantage of their opportunities to score.

The match was a “Major opportunity for the Red Foxes to prove themselves, but unfortunately we didn’t make the most of it,” Accisano said about the loss. He attributed the defeat to a lack of teamwork and poor discipline on the field.

With a record of 6-12, the Red Foxes were looking to find a way to reverse their fortunes.

As we should have," Kelly said.

D’Autorio missed two field goals on his own, including one from 34 yards out, and had a punt blocked. It was the second straight game that the Red Foxes had seen a punt blocked.

This year’s Red Foxes hope to improve on last season’s performance, but they know that it will not be easy.

The future for Marist rugby is uncertain. The club is composed mostly of athletes who are just starting a rugby career, and many are still trying to find their place in the game. Some players are not yet comfortable with the contact and physicality of the sport.

But in a matter of minutes, the game was over. The Red Foxes had scored a 10-point lead, and there was no way back for the Tigers.

The Red Foxes will be looking to improve their record in the upcoming season, but they know that they will need to work hard to achieve their goals.

Football gets greedy; loses 33-32 in triple OT to Towson

by Christopher Smith

Another first for the football program at Marist took place on Saturday Nov. 2, at Leonidoff field. The Red Foxes were defeated by Towson State, 33-32 in a triple overtime game.

While trying to nurse a 1-hour and 34 minute lead, Coach Jim Parady said he was glad the game took place.

"It was a great game to be involved with," Parady said. "It was a great college football game. The kids gave us everything they had and we just didn't come on top.

The game was like riding on a roller coaster according to loss, head coach Jim Parady said. "This type of loss is devastating to any team. I know how hard we worked, but this was a letdown for the Red Foxes.

With seconds left on the clock for the first half, Towson State's George Perikakis' 36-yard field goal attempt was blocked by linebacker Jerrick Getty who recovered the ball and ran it back 70 yards for a touchdown. The Red Foxes then attempted to gain two more points with a conversion as J.J. Allen's rush was successful. That brought the score to 12-12, 1:13 remaining in the first half.

With 11:13 remaining in the third quarter, Towson State quarterback Kevin Smith finished a 11-yard pass to Williams for a 1-yard rush for a touchdown. The PAT by Perikakis was successful. That brought the score to 18-12, 7:38 remaining in the third quarter.

The Red Foxes answered back with a touchdown and a two-point conversion pass to tight end Brian Laddick's 27-yard field goal attempt being no good.

In the first overtime period, neither team was able to put points on the board. Marist's Mario Wilson blocked a 33-yard field goal attempt to keep the contest alive.

In the second overtime period, Towson State was unable to score with Perikakis' 27-yard field goal attempt being no good.

The coach pins his hopes for next season on a group of freshman that may have had a surprising impact on this fall's squad. Monday, Michael Schilling, and goalkeeper Chad Melfi are among the rookies who enjoyed some success in their first year of collegiate soccer.

The overtime format elevates the spirit of the team, "I think it was great that we threatened them so much. Some people were saying that we were going to be suppose to be in this game," Coach Collaizzo said.

Men's-X-C-disappointed with four place at NEC finals

Men's soccer fails to reach .500 with loss

The men's soccer team's hopes for a .500 record were ended in Jersey City last week in a game against St. Peter's College.

The Red Foxes battled back from 1-0 and 2-1 deficits; they scored their second goal in the 89th minute, remaining in regulation play, and, in thrilling fashion, sent the game into overtime, but the comeback would fall short in the extra frame.

By the time the overtime period expired, Marist had allowed three more goals, and St. Peter's College was ahead 4-2.

"We fought back all day, but just ran out of energy in overtime," said Coach Collaizzo, who is 5-2-1 this year. "We bought back all day, but just ran out of energy in overtime, and St. Peter's College was able to weather the storm.

"They explained it was a tough loss," Head Coach Bob Herpdes' disappointment was also evident following the game.

"We just didn't show up. And when you get back into a game, you're going to beat 90% of the time. Once a ball is on your feet, you can get back in it, but this time, we really need to show up ready to play.

We dropped Marist's record to 6-9; with only one game remaining. The .500 mark is now unattainable for the Red Foxes.

"It would have been nice to win the last two games and get to .500, but we didn't deserve it, win or lose," said St. Peter's College. "I think it was great that we threatened them so much. Some people were saying that we were going to be suppose to be in this game."

On a chilly, sunny Saturday, the women's cross-country team ran in the Northeast Conference (NEC) Championships. The Red Foxes had a disappointing outing at the end of the ten teams that competed.

"We had a very disappointing meet, we just didn't run as well as we expected," coach Philip Kelly said.

Marist had a work to do for this meet with their previous competition at Wagner with a second place finish. With this win, the Red Foxes were very confident in themselves. Then the Red Foxes had a week to practice before the NEC Championship, which took place at Mount Saint Mary's. The Red Foxes were confident in themselves. However, they wanted Marist to keep a close pace with Mt. St. Mary's. Kelly said, "We need to separate from them."
