Halogen lamps pose unexpected dangers

by STEPHANIE MERCURIO
New Editor

A flip of a switch could now burn down a building.

According to an article in the Hartford Courant, the halogen bulbs in tall, pole style lamps reach extremely high temperatures. The lamps have been responsible for at least 30 fires and two deaths.

Christina Papadopoulos, junior, owns a halogen lamp.

"I've been using it all year, but I never knew how dangerous it was until I had to change the bulb," she said. "I treated the directions, and I was so surprised at how easily they can cause a fire."

According to the Courant, Rick Frost, a spokesman for the federal consumer agency, said these lamps are not like normal lamps.

"These lamps need to be treated differently than other lamps because they burn at much higher temperatures," he said.

A 300-watt tubular halogen bulb can reach temperatures as high as 970 degrees, while a 500-watt bulb can attain a temperature of up to 1,200 degrees, which is the equivalent of an electric stove top on the highest setting.

There are more than 35 million lamps in use in the United States. James Jarculo, junior, said her halogen lamp has given her problems.

"It has caught on fire twice and burned through the plastic," she said. "It's scary, because a lamp could cause a huge fire."

Jarculo said her housemate's halogen lamp has also caused problems.

"We had it in our common area, but we kept the front door open, and bugs had gotten inside," she said. "The lamp started smoking and we had to take it outside, because we were afraid it might catch on fire."

According to the Courant, if a 500-watt bulb catches fire, it can generate as much heat as 400 joules of power per second. A 1,000-watt bulb can generate as much heat as 800 joules of power per second.

Please see LAMP, page 3...
Marist and Beyond

Clinton gears up for second term agenda

by Michael, Goor

output

Project and, a pressurized module with six hatches that hardware that has been delayed by Russia's economic problems. They said they

The Marist Singers traveled to Hawaii from Jan. 5-13 to perform in several concerts at churches and schools over the winter intermission.

New guidelines for halogen lamp owners

by CHRISTOPHER TOTHERO

that shut off the lamp when the bulb begins to dim. "That won't work because, first of all, it has to be in a fixture. Second of all, it has to be in a fixture that's not movable."

Marian said she was as surprised as anyone when the situation turned out to be so cordial. "I never thought it would be this easy," she said. "We worked so hard for this, and it turned out to be so easy."

1. Never place the lamp where the bulb contacts the heat. "It's not a good idea to put the lamp on a table and have the bulb touch the heat, because the bulb will get too hot and could start a fire."

2. Do not place the lamp near a window or a heat source. "The lamp should not be placed near a window or a heat source, because the light from the lamp could cause the bulb to overheat and start a fire."

3. Do not place the lamp near a door or a heat source. "The lamp should not be placed near a door or a heat source, because the light from the lamp could cause the bulb to overheat and start a fire."

4. Do not place the lamp near a water source. "The lamp should not be placed near a water source, because the light from the lamp could cause the bulb to overheat and start a fire."

5. Do not place the lamp near a strong light source. "The lamp should not be placed near a strong light source, because the light from the lamp could cause the bulb to overheat and start a fire."

6. Do not place the lamp near a strong heat source. "The lamp should not be placed near a strong heat source, because the light from the lamp could cause the bulb to overheat and start a fire."

7. Do not place the lamp near a strong water source. "The lamp should not be placed near a strong water source, because the light from the lamp could cause the bulb to overheat and start a fire."

8. Do not place the lamp near a strong heat source. "The lamp should not be placed near a strong heat source, because the light from the lamp could cause the bulb to overheat and start a fire."

9. Do not place the lamp near a strong water source. "The lamp should not be placed near a strong water source, because the light from the lamp could cause the bulb to overheat and start a fire."

10. Do not place the lamp near a strong heat source. "The lamp should not be placed near a strong heat source, because the light from the lamp could cause the bulb to overheat and start a fire."

11. Do not place the lamp near a strong water source. "The lamp should not be placed near a strong water source, because the light from the lamp could cause the bulb to overheat and start a fire."

12. Do not place the lamp near a strong heat source. "The lamp should not be placed near a strong heat source, because the light from the lamp could cause the bulb to overheat and start a fire."

13. Do not place the lamp near a strong water source. "The lamp should not be placed near a strong water source, because the light from the lamp could cause the bulb to overheat and start a fire."

14. Do not place the lamp near a strong heat source. "The lamp should not be placed near a strong heat source, because the light from the lamp could cause the bulb to overheat and start a fire."

15. Do not place the lamp near a strong water source. "The lamp should not be placed near a strong water source, because the light from the lamp could cause the bulb to overheat and start a fire."

16. Do not place the lamp near a strong heat source. "The lamp should not be placed near a strong heat source, because the light from the lamp could cause the bulb to overheat and start a fire."

17. Do not place the lamp near a strong water source. "The lamp should not be placed near a strong water source, because the light from the lamp could cause the bulb to overheat and start a fire."

18. Do not place the lamp near a strong heat source. "The lamp should not be placed near a strong heat source, because the light from the lamp could cause the bulb to overheat and start a fire."

19. Do not place the lamp near a strong water source. "The lamp should not be placed near a strong water source, because the light from the lamp could cause the bulb to overheat and start a fire."

20. Do not place the lamp near a strong heat source. "The lamp should not be placed near a strong heat source, because the light from the lamp could cause the bulb to overheat and start a fire."

Singers perform in paradise

Marist singers travel to Hawaii over winter break

by Jennifer Frennessa

MacDoran told the singers that the state of Hawaii would be the setting for their winter break, and the trip would be an opportunity to perform in a beautiful and scenic location. The trip would also provide an opportunity for the singers to experience the culture and history of Hawaii.

The Marist singers performed at several locations throughout Hawaii over the course of their trip, including at a variety of churches and community centers. They performed a variety of songs, ranging from classical pieces to contemporary pop songs, and were well-received by the audiences.

The trip was organized by the Marist Singers, and was made possible through the support of the Marist College President's Office, the Department of Fine Arts, and the Marist College Office of Student Life. The trip was a great success, and the Marist Singers were able to share their talents and the beauty of their music with audiences in Hawaii.

Marist donors library funds

by CHRISTOPHER TOTHERO

Lawyer and the Marist Singers were both thrilled to be a part of the trip, and the singers were able to share their talents and the beauty of their music with audiences in Hawaii. The trip was a great success, and the Marist Singers were able to share their talents and the beauty of their music with audiences in Hawaii.
McGovern does not look at drinking. She drank heavily for her father’s run for the presidency and with high morals. Sometimes I buy books and with new books, we are less realistic to the students’ reputations now before someone gets arrested. I stay up late talking, but I had no assignments due. I got about 10 hours of sleep a night.”

McGovern also said he supported the school bookstore to lower the cost of other people’s books. They’re more mature.

President Murray speaks with former Sen. McGovern, who delivered a speech on Marietta on addiction and alcohol.

“The number one priority is for the students to acknowledge Dr. King’s dream of a peaceful America free from racial segregation,” said Owens. Owens said the peace-ring was a successful and meaningful way to help people understand racism, including white people.

“Marietta has the opportunity to make peace within ourselves and make peace in the world,” said Owens. “It was good to have people participate in something that was accomplished. It was a real highlight of the year.”

Owens also praised two other values that the peace movement stood for: nonviolence and the peace-commerce. According to Owens, President J. Walter King and Owens were the only people who wanted to make peace in the world.

Owens also thanked the students who wanted to make peace in the world. “It was good to have people participate in something that was accomplished. It was a real highlight of the year.”

Other events during the week, including Martin Luther King Jr. Day, were organized by the Students for a Democratic Society. The clubs or something and can only move in a certain space any direction. The queen can only move in a certain space any direction. The king can only move in a certain space any direction. The rook can only move in a certain space any direction. The bishop can only move in a certain space any direction. The knight can only move in a certain space any direction.
Astonishing...

Gateway to Federal jobs on the WWW

Even in an era of downsizing, the Federal government, the nation's largest single employer, brings in about 44,000 new, full-time hires a year to join its workforce of 1.4 million people. Director of the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) said finding the right Federal job has now been "a lot easier" with the addition of the OPM Employment Information Home Page, USA Jobs, which was unveiled this past fall. It is designed to make it easier to find a federal job opening, particularly critical because, during the downsizing, 200,000 federal jobs have been cut and another 400,000 may be lost.

The homepage, located at http://www.usajobs.gov, provides, and serves as a gateway to other employment information, listings easily and readily available on the Internet at: http://www.usajobs.gov. It is content is provided by the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) and the President's Management Intern Program, Federal Salary Employment Program, Employment Opportunities for people with Disabilities, Overseas Employment Information, and the Presidential Management Intern Program.

Director of Career Services, Ms. Janet Goldstein, said the site has "improved the experience" for the 12 million visitors this year to the site. The site is also "hugely beneficial to Federal employers," allowing them to "post jobs very quickly and effectively" as well as "be able to get the right people." The site will be "Continually updated" to ensure "timeliness and relevance." It is "critical in providing services...while costing taxpayers less." The site is "one more step in making the job of providing services to the public easier and more efficient, and will help the public in its mission of providing services to the American people who are carried on the new worldwide web of the Internet while toward other employment information.

Marist debate team excited by new coaching tactics

by Michelle Griffin

The Marist debate team performed in the Holy Guacamole Theater on Friday. Their performance included SSP and the hypothesis of several students, such as one cited above.

Stylistic Level: 1

Even in an era of downsizing, the Federal government, the nation's largest single employer, brings in about 44,000 new, full- time hires a year to join its workforce of 1.4 million people.

Director of the Office of Personnel Management said finding the right Federal job has now been "a lot easier" with the addition of the OPM Employment Information Home Page, USA Jobs, which was unveiled this past fall. It is designed to make it easier to find a federal job opening, particularly critical because, during the downsizing, 200,000 federal jobs have been cut and another 400,000 may be lost.

The homepage, located at http://www.usajobs.gov, provides, and serves as a gateway to other employment information, listings easily and readily available on the Internet at: http://www.usajobs.gov. It is content is provided by the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) and the President's Management Intern Program, Federal Salary Employment Program, Employment Opportunities for people with Disabilities, Overseas Employment Information, and the Presidential Management Intern Program.

Director of Career Services, Ms. Janet Goldstein, said the site has "improved the experience" for the 12 million visitors this year to the site. The site is also "hugely beneficial to Federal employers," allowing them to "post jobs very quickly and effectively" as well as "be able to get the right people." The site will be "Continually updated" to ensure "timeliness and relevance." It is "critical in providing services...while costing taxpayers less." The site is "one more step in making the job of providing services to the public easier and more efficient, and will help the public in its mission of providing services to the American people who are carried on the new worldwide web of the Internet while toward other employment information.

Marist debate team excited by new coaching tactics

by Michelle Griffin

The Marist debate team performed in the Holy Guacamole Theater on Friday. Their performance included SSP and the hypothesis of several students, such as one cited above.

Stylistic Level: 1

The homepage, located at http://www.usajobs.gov, provides, and serves as a gateway to other employment information, listings easily and readily available on the Internet at: http://www.usajobs.gov. It is content is provided by the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) and the President's Management Intern Program, Federal Salary Employment Program, Employment Opportunities for people with Disabilities, Overseas Employment Information, and the Presidential Management Intern Program.

Director of Career Services, Ms. Janet Goldstein, said the site has "improved the experience" for the 12 million visitors this year to the site. The site is also "hugely beneficial to Federal employers," allowing them to "post jobs very quickly and effectively" as well as "be able to get the right people." The site will be "Continually updated" to ensure "timeliness and relevance." It is "critical in providing services...while costing taxpayers less." The site is "one more step in making the job of providing services to the public easier and more efficient, and will help the public in its mission of providing services to the American people who are carried on the new worldwide web of the Internet while toward other employment information.
Editor:

Editorial: January 30, 1997

Newt’s slap on the wrist

It was a bitterly cold, windblown Monday morning in our nation’s capital. For William Jefferson Clinton, it was a day of celebration and mourning. He was re-elected despite allegations of illegal campaign activity, a sexual scandal, and a ruined presidency who had somehow managed to come out of the storm unscathed. Yet, in the end, he had still managed to pull off a stunning victory.

The following day, the House would overwhelmingly vote to impeach Newt Gingrich. As Speaker of the House, he had presided over a period of unprecedented scandal and corruption. In 1995, he was the first time that the House had ever brought impeachment charges against a sitting Speaker of the House. However, in the end, it was a decisive vote that would ultimately remove Gingrich from his position.

In his final days in office, Gingrich faced a host of new challenges, including a looming defense budget that was expected to continue growing, a growing chorus of critics who called for his resignation, and a media that was increasingly skeptical of his leadership. In the end, he was forced to resign, leaving behind a legacy that was both controversial and complex.

But for Clinton, the challenge was far from over. He would face a host of new challenges, including a struggling economy, a divided Congress, and a media that was increasingly critical of his leadership. In the end, he would ultimately emerge as a more moderate and pragmatic leader, one who was able to navigate a difficult time with relative ease.

Support now available for OCD

Support in cyberspace is also available for OCD. A discussion forum for QCp and other obsessive-compulsive disorder support groups is available online. People can seek support and advice from others who are coping with similar issues.

This year, I have heard people making every resolution from “I am going to quit smoking” to “I am going to get rich.” However, I meet quite a few people who have made many of these resolutions in the past and have never even come close to making them a reality. Despite this, people will make resolutions again, even though they know they will not keep them.

Whatever your decision, try to keep the promises you make. Just help you get your year off to a much better start.
Shine 'is a brilliant portrayal of genius and madness

by Anis Lammari
Art Editor

David Helfgott, the main character of this musical, is a prodigy who was considered to be the brightest mind of the 20th century. However, his life was marred by a struggle with mental illness and a series of events that led to his public and private downfall.

The story begins with Helfgott's growing up in a Catholic family in Australia. His talent for music is recognized early on, and he begins his career as a concert pianist at an exceptionally young age.

Despite his success, Helfgott's life is marked by personal turmoil. He is forced to deal with severe mental health issues, including bipolar disorder and paranoid schizophrenia.

The film follows Helfgott's journey through these struggles, as well as his eventual rise to fame and enhanced recognition of his musical talents.

While Shine is a powerful story, it is also a cautionary tale about the perils of not seeking help for mental health issues. It is a reminder that even the brightest minds can be driven to the brink by their own struggles.

In conclusion, Shine is a compelling and moving tale about genius and madness, highlighting the importance of understanding and treating mental health issues.

Nearby 2,000 French museum works possibly seized from Jews

By Jocelyn Noveck
Associated Press

PARIS - A French newspaper says the prime minister to take the issue of looted art seriously, and it also advertisements the works that were brought back to France by the museum authorities.

The paper said the museum authority had organized a seminar on the issue of looted art, which was designed to prevent similar incidents in the future.

The newspaper said the museum
authorities had organized a seminar on the issue of looted art, which was designed to prevent similar
incidents in the future.

The newspaper said the museum
authorities had organized a seminar
on the issue of looted art, which was
designed to prevent similar
incidents in the future.

The newspaper said the museum
authorities had organized a seminar
on the issue of looted art, which was
designed to prevent similar
incidents in the future.

The newspaper said the museum
authorities had organized a seminar
on the issue of looted art, which was
designed to prevent similar
incidents in the future.

The newspaper said the museum
authorities had organized a seminar
on the issue of looted art, which was
designed to prevent similar
incidents in the future.
The man behind Wu-Tang Clan

by Brian Hill

Journalist

The past few years have been very exciting and busy for Christopher Radus. Currently, Chris is the President of the Wu-Tang Clan, having assumed the position in April 1997. During his apprenticeship and journey to the Vice President of his clan, Chris decided to run for the position because he felt it was the right time for the Wu-Tang Clan to move forward.

His accomplishments while President were numerous. He oversaw the creation of the Wu-Tang Clan's first album, "Enter the Wu-Tang: 36 Chambers," which featured hits such as "C.R.E.A.M." and "Wu-Tang Clan Is for the Children." Under his leadership, the Clan became known for their unique style of hip-hop music, blending elements of jazz, funk, and soul.

Radus's focus on the Clan's legal issues was also significant. As the group faced legal battles, including trademark infringement lawsuits and copyright disputes, Radus worked diligently to protect the Clan's interests and ensure their creative freedom.

Furthermore, Chris Radus's efforts extended beyond the music industry. He advocated for the rights of independent artists and fought for fair compensation for musicians. The Clan's ascent to fame caught the attention of mainstream media, and Radus navigated these challenges with grace and determination.

Despite the challenges, the Clan's legacy continued to grow. Their influence on the hip-hop scene was undeniable, and their influence extended to fashion, style, and culture. The Wu-Tang Clan became a global phenomenon, inspiring generations of musicians and fans alike.

However, Chris Radus's time as President was not without controversy. As the Clan's success grew, so did the expectations and pressures. The Clan faced internal conflicts and changes in leadership, which ultimately led to the disbandment of the Wu-Tang Clan.

In the aftermath, Chris Radus reflected on his tenure, the highs and lows, and the lessons learned. Despite the challenges, he remained committed to preserving the Clan's legacy and ensuring that the spirit of Wu-Tang lived on.

As the Clan's story continues to evolve, Chris Radus's role in shaping the Wu-Tang Clan's history will be remembered. His contributions to the Clan's success, legal battles, and cultural impact were instrumental in the Clan's journey from underground rap group to iconic music phenomenon.
The kids can shoot but have trouble winning.

Sports With Smitty

The Marist College men's basketball team is so far overextended that it has the half-life point of the three-point land at a mere 3.13 record point.

Three consecutive losses are showing in the Red Foxes on a young team who have little experience in the Big East. The inconsistency is blatantly obvious. As I have said in previous columns, the reason for this is the presence of the bench, which is inconsistent as well. The bench has not contributed to the team's success in any meaningful way.

The return of star players to the lineup is the key factor in the team's performance. Without these players, the team is out of sync and loses its identity. The scoring by the bench players has been sporadic and inconsistent, leading to the team's problems.

The team's lack of a consistent scoring threat is evident in their low field goal percentage (39.7%). The bench players rarely contribute points and the team's scoring is dependent on the starting lineup.

In conclusion, the team needs to establish a consistent scoring threat from the bench to compete in the Big East. The return of the stars will help in establishing this consistency and improving the team's overall performance.
Women's basketball faces disappointment

CHRIS JETTE
Staff Writer

If there is one word to describe this season for Marist women's basketball it would have to be: disappointing.

The Red Foxes fell to St. John's, 55-45, last Saturday, January 25th. The Red Foxes were led by Jean-Marie Lesko who had 13 points. Forward Cortney Blore chipped in with 6 points and 11 rebounds, while Freshman Forward Sabrina Vallery came off the bench, to add a game high 25 points.

The Red Foxes lost by as many as 15 points this season and many turnovers this season and many of them to Wagner, their second game of the season.

Former Assistant Coach

The Red Foxes lost to the Blackbirds of LIU by the score of 60-47. In what could be described as a sloppy game, the two teams combined to commit 63 turnovers. The Red Foxes were led by MacDougall, who had 11 points, and by Dengler, who added 15 points and 14 rebounds. However, the LIU full court press was able to force 33 turnovers and cause all sorts of headaches for the offenses of the Red Foxes. The Red Foxes threw the ball away numerous times and added problems finishing plays in transition, mainly due to mental errors and sloppy pass

One reason for the thus far disappointing season for the Red Foxes has been turnovers. Marist has committed far too many turnovers this season and too often have cost them games which they possibly could have won. For example, in the game against Fordham, the Red Foxes turned the ball over 15 times. The Red Foxes’ next game is at St. Peter's in the three meter dive.

Lack of depth worries women

CHRIS O’DONOELL
Staff Writer

With a comfortable Christmas break, the Marist women’s swimming team are back in the pool and gearing up for the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference championships.

VanWagner does not seem to be worried about Loyola. "Loyola does have outstanding swimmers, so on an individual basis they can compete with us but not as a team," VanWagner said.

The next meet will expand our experience and it will be a good jumping off point for the MAAC championships," VanWagner said.

The Red Foxes are currently 2-3, losing to Wagner, their second game of the season.

Lack of depth worries women

CHRIS O’DONOELL
Staff Writer

While the Red Foxes fell to the Blackbirds of LIU by the score of 60-47, in what could be described as a sloppy game, the two teams combined to commit 63 turnovers. The Red Foxes were led by MacDougall, who had 11 points, and by Dengler, who added 15 points and 14 rebounds. However, the LIU full court press was able to force 33 turnovers and cause all sorts of headaches for the offenses of the Red Foxes. The Red Foxes threw the ball away numerous times and added problems finishing plays in transition, mainly due to mental errors and sloppy pass

One reason for the thus far disappointing season for the Red Foxes has been turnovers. Marist has committed far too many turnovers this season and too often have cost them games which they possibly could have won. For example, in the game against Fordham, the Red Foxes turned the ball over 15 times.

Hockey team misses the Big Dance

By Thomas Ryan
Staff Writer

After last year’s performance at the club hockey national tournament, the Red Foxes faced a tough challenge of living up to the standards of the 95-96 team. Three challenges, all equally tough, faced the Foxes.

First, as the saying goes, it is always harder to stay on top than to reach the top; second, teams who make it to the nationals are expected to play Marist after last year’s success, and third, the Red Foxes would be moving up to play the top team in the Super East, the Scarlet Knights. The signs pointed to a down season, and unfortunately for them, the Red Foxes followed them.

As of the 9-7-1 Marist isn’t having a bad season, but compared to last season, it can be labeled as disappointing, according to head coach Bill Kamp. The Red Foxes fell to the Blackbirds of LIU by the score of 60-47. In what could be described as a sloppy game, the two teams combined to commit 63 turnovers. The Red Foxes were led by MacDougall, who had 11 points, and by Dengler, who added 15 points and 14 rebounds. However, the LIU full court press was able to force 33 turnovers and cause all sorts of headaches for the offenses of the Red Foxes. The Red Foxes threw the ball away numerous times and added problems finishing plays in transition, mainly due to mental errors and sloppy pass

One reason for the thus far disappointing season for the Red Foxes has been turnovers. Marist has committed far too many turnovers this season and too often have cost them games which they possibly could have won. For example, in the game against Fordham, the Red Foxes turned the ball over 15 times.