Split of division pose problems for some professors

by SCOTT NEVILLE  Staff Writer

The Humanities Division has been separated between the basement of the Student Center and the Way House, leaving both halves with new obstacles and concerns.

The Way House, also known as St. Ann's Hermitage, has been transformed to accommodate 17 members of the Humanities Division. These members are primarily from the English and foreign language departments.

"We are always out in the open, making contact for the students easier, but it will also impact our productivity," said Thomas Wermuth, assistant professor of history.

Disabled find construction hinders mobility

"There are rock and debris everywhere," said Wendy Duncan, director of special services. "I don't see these things, and end up tripping."

"I can't drive or see across the road, which makes it impossible for me to get there on my own," she said.

"The federal Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA) prohibits discrimination against people with physical or mental disabilities in employment, public accommodations, transportation and telecommunications. It specifically states all private institutions must provide access to its programs and services."

Marist works to squash coming computer bug

by JILL GIOCONDO  Staff Writer

People around the world are making big plans for New Year's Eve 1999 and the coming of the new millennium, but many may wake up the next day with more problems than a hangover.

They may turn on their computers and find out their computers and other computer run systems, including Marist, have been working on updating their systems to avoid problems when the date changes over.

Wendy Duncan, director of Information Technology, said her department is currently working to make all systems Year 2000 (Y2K) compatible.

"We have a group from each department (in Information Technology) looking at their section and upgrading and checking systems along with an upcoming information session with various offices to find out what their problems will be," she said.

Disability approaches. The problem is not a bug as it has been called. Rather it is a glitch in the...

Stained glass, new pews part of Chapel facelift

by THEA CROMMENO

Marist's beautiful and serene place of worship is about to be transformed. Marist plans to renovate the O'Leary Lady Seat of Wisdom Chapel sometime within the next year. The renovations should be completed by Fall 1999. The enhancements that will be made are part of the new library construction project.

The preliminary cost for the project is $500,000 and will not reflect the price of materials, taxing the university, reversing the heating and ventilation system and reducing the roof height to make it more co-optible for the new library.

Rey Morrell, executive vice president and chief operating officer of Marist, said the changes will be minor to accommodate the new library construction.

"Perhaps some sidewalks will change in the front," Morrell said. "The lighting may change. There is even a possibility the bells may be lowered to keep the chapel in perspective with the height of the new library.'"

The windows currently in the chapel will be replaced with stained glass windows. The bells will be removed. The bells are being relocated to the roof, so you won't see them.

"This move will have implications in the future," Morrell said. "If you live in Champagnat dorm is his favorite. Resident of Champagnat, said "If you live in Champagnat for three years, you get to know the whole dorm. It's size and large variety makes it a very sociable dorm." He added, "It's something that you can take away from college that isn't part of the curriculum."

Sudan said she thought the project could benefit from the words of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. "It's something that you can take away from college that isn't part of the curriculum."

Domestications are a necessary element of Marist College. One of these important elements is Champagnat Hall. Champagnat Hall was built in 1894 under the leadership of Marcellin Champagnat, a French priest who founded the Marist Brothers in 1817. With five floors served by students, Champagnat exists as the tallest building on campus. It height enables it to overlook students of all four years, freshmen to seniors.

There are also other notable residents including Marist Brother. Brother John Belfanger and Brother Frank Kelly. The building is also the location of Student Affairs Office. The first floor of the building contains the student center. The second and third floors host rest rooms.

Coretta Scott King to speak of husband's legacy

Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. is being remembered through the words of his wife, Coretta Scott King with a national program called "The Dream of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr." at the McCann Center Oct. 5 at 7:30 p.m. In her program she will discuss the ongoing civil rights struggle and some of the roles that she has played since her husband's death.

Heather Sudan, president of the student programming council and vice president of student programming for the student government association, said King was chosen to come to Marist because she sounds out a good message to the students. "We are more together here," Sudan said. "If you live in Champagnat dormitory."

Heather Sudan, president of the student programming council, spoke about King's program will make an impact on Marist students.

"We know how she's a speaker and also appreciating it," Sudan said. "It's something that you can take away from college that isn't part of the curriculum."

At the end of the spring semester, students will be downloading the software. During the spring semester, five of the original members designated for every room designated for every group will be regrouping with their significant others. After this, the group will be larger and have a stronger social structure. They will continue to meet and talk with distant friends who are not in the same room, and they will continue to have phone bills.

The Internet is also a place where people are meeting their significant others. For example, there is a girl who met a boy in chat line, and they are now dating. The girl said that it is easy for her to be in touch with the boy, and she enjoys spending money on his bills. She also enjoys being able to get reactions to what she has said faster than through the phone. Another positive point is that people can talk to people with different backgrounds and experiences different cultures.

Caitlin said that she feels good when people talk to her in their own language. She said that she was more interested in the people who she was friends with instead of people who she met online. Caitlin said that she and her friends start talking about different experiences every time they meet online.

Chats can also bring us closer to people. Caitlin said that her friends in Hyde Park, and Caitlin met a student from the Culinary Institute of America who knows her friend who also attends there. This group is a large part of how people will communicate in the future.

"It seems like everyone I know has chat rooms," she said. "I've been talking to one person from Georgia for probably over a year," she said. "I'm friends with the people who she met online, and we have a really good friendship."

Caitlin said that she feels like she is talking to people who are similar to her. She also enjoys meeting new people from all over the world.

Music is also a part of how people will communicate. The group performed in the Choral Singing III class. The group performed songs featured in his Choral Singing III class. The group performed songs featured in his Choral Singing III class.

Student safety more important than parking

Marty claims to accommodate students to the best of its abilities. This is hard to believe considering the student concerns about the location of the temporary library. The new library will definitely expand Marist's academic resources, but for this fall, the temporary arrangements are unappealing.

When the new library was being planned, it was first decided the transition library would be in the basement of the Student Center where the old Fitness Center used to be. This was quickly changed because of the obstacles such as space for the necessary materials and staff. The decision to purchase the old Steel Mill Plant was a good decision but what was not considered was poor lighting across from a popular evening hangout, an alley in Poughkeepsie.

This brings up the question of where we as a university can improve in the area of safety. Pedestrians are less visible to cars-at night while running about average. The library has definitely expanded Marist's academic resources, but for this fall, the temporary arrangements are unappealing.

Men's tennis team undefeated in MAAC with one match to go

Simply put, the Marist tennis team has had a winning season so far. But this past weekend, the Red Foxes did not only win but excel. As they accomplished this, position changes were made and the team bulked up as a result.

The Marist tennis team continued to play well. The NCAA tennis championships were held on October 11, 1998. Delgado is undefeated, while Racanelli is the lone returnee to the starting lineup. Five of the top six players are new, including Mayer and Delgado.

This accomplishment comes on top of last week's victory over St. Peter's. The team's next match will be against Fairfield on October 19, 1998.

However, the Marist tennis team has been facing some challenges. Delgado has been hit with a 2-0 loss against St. Peter's. He is not only terrific, but timely as well. Delgado's consistent play has helped Marist in the winning streak.

A balanced offense and the field goal kicking of Jason Adamoyurka led Marist to a 26-3 mauling of the St. Peter's Peacocks.

The Red Foxes couldn't have asked for a more perfect road victory. The team went into the game off consecutive losses to Duquesne and Canisius, but top-ranked Georgetown and Duquesne were both out of town this weekend, allowing the Red Foxes to get back on the right track.

Despite the Peacocks' game of Duquesne and Canisius players being on the sideline, Marist's defense was still able to shut them out, allowing just three points on the board. This was a huge improvement from the previous game against Canisius, where the Red Foxes allowed 14 points.

The offense was also on point, with quarterback Tramaglini completing 16 of 26 passes for 194 yards and a touchdown. He also added 54 yards on the ground.

The Red Foxes will now face off against St. John's this weekend, looking to continue their winning streak.

A balanced offense and the field goal kicking of Jason Adamoyurka led Marist to a 26-3 mauling of the St. Peter's Peacocks.

The Red Foxes couldn't have asked for a more perfect road victory. The team went into the game off consecutive losses to Duquesne and Canisius, but top-ranked Georgetown and Duquesne were both out of town this weekend, allowing the Red Foxes to get back on the right track.

Despite the Peacocks' game of Duquesne and Canisius players being on the sideline, Marist's defense was still able to shut them out, allowing just three points on the board. This was a huge improvement from the previous game against Canisius, where the Red Foxes allowed 14 points.

The offense was also on point, with quarterback Tramaglini completing 16 of 26 passes for 194 yards and a touchdown. He also added 54 yards on the ground.

The Red Foxes will now face off against St. John's this weekend, looking to continue their winning streak.
