Steel Mill provides new home

Library offers added services to ease stress of temp location

Half a million dollars later, Marist has turned an old steel plant mill into the new library. The total costs of renovating the old mill came to $545,000, but not all that money went to paint and building supplies. The college pumped some into making reference materials and research easier for students.

For instance, in the past, students had to pay 25 cents a page to print off the library's digital periodical program, ProQuest, but since moving digital periodical program, students now have the luxury of accessing thousands of periodicals for free.

"This is the kind of things a lot of libraries are doing," said of Marist's push for an all-digital library. He said since adopting the new program, the library has been able to expand its list of periodicals from 1,200 to 4,800.

Access to all periodicals via ProQuest Direct will be offered at least during the library transition period, and there will be more copying fees, but only for on-campus students using Marist's Internet connection, Benamati said.

"We will work on solutions," he said. "They acknowledge that there is a problem," he said. "One of the things that are done is that students are not utilizing the pedestrian crossing areas now," said, "They didn't do a good job cleaning up before the residents moved in."

Senior Mike Milby said he expected that at least the apartments would be cleaned before everyone arrived.

"There was dust, plaster, and even clothing materials left behind by the construction workers," he said. "They didn't do a good job cleaning up before the residents moved in."

"We were concerned that the "O" block would be completed by Aug. 3," she said. That projection had to be modified, and by the middle of August, the contractors guaranteed all buildings except for the "O" block would be completed by Aug. 30.

"We were concerned that the apartments would be cleaned before everyone arrived."

"There was a lot of dust from all the dirt being moved around and the rooms smelled like paint," she said. Sarah English, director of the Student Housing and Residential Life office, said she expected the project would be completed by the time students arrived.

The library makes the best of the shortage of space by stacking books and periodicals eight shelves high.

Praise, problems for West Cedar housing

by CHRIS GROGAN

First reactions to the new West Cedar townhouses are being heard from students living there, and not all are positive.

Many students did not expect to move into buildings that were still under construction. Senior Mike Milby said he expected that at least the apartments would be cleaned before everyone arrived.

"There was dust, plaster, and even clothing materials left behind by the construction workers," he said. "They didn't do a good job cleaning up before the residents moved in."

Junior Jen Armstrong, another resident of West Cedar had the same complaint.

"There was a lot of dust from all the dirt being moved around and the rooms smelled like paint," she said. Sarah English, director of the Student Housing and Residential Life office, said she expected the project would be completed by the time students arrived.

"We were given a date at the beginning of the summer by the contractor for when the project was to be done, and that was Aug. 3," she said. That projection had to be modified, and by the middle of August, the contractors guaranteed all buildings except for the "O" block would be completed by Aug. 30.

"We were concerned that the "O" block wouldn't be ready, she said.
What solution do you think would stop people from dangerously crossing Route 9?

Students spend summer at Disney

by JENNIFER MATAJUZU

While most college students spend their summers locked up in exams, office filing, or just plain laziness, a few had the unique opportunity to immerse themselves in the happiest place on Earth, Disney World.

Of course spending the entire summer with Mickey Mouse and the rest of the gang is not the only thing to do, it helps being taken on the work floor. We all have our inner child who just loves the concept of magic, and Disney World is just that. After all, what a better place to fulfill this dream than Disney World.

Dominique Murray, assistant director of field experience at career services, participated in the recruitment of their students. The State University at New Paltz was chosen as the host for many of the colleges located in the Mid-Hudson Valley area. Murray then presented the internship and summer job packages, and from there these interviews were set up.

"I attended several interviews and finally, seven students actually went away.

"Senior Kevin Lundy interned at Disney World during the summer. Lundy worked at Blizzard Beach, one of the water parks on the Disney World property. He said, "I was nervous, but I found out it was a positive experience.

Jennifer Sommers, senior psychology major, went to Disney World during the summer.

"People can buy stones and get a touch and always have this in mind. We stayed in Vista Way, right behind Disney's Walk of Fame. Everything was easy.

Director of field experience at career services, said she was a little nervous not to be with other people.

"I thought it would be a lot more fun while others are just a waste of time to even look at. This column will help you look at the facts and figures. How many times have you had a situation in class and the professor stands staring at you doing the current event in the world and you know he's going to ask you questions about it? What a quick way to avoid it is to have an internship. A internship is getting on one of the new, emerging businesses. The New York Times is one of them. PISCES: Rising second, try to do your best to what you can and keep on trying, but you sincerely feel.

AQUARIUS: If you eat a green salad today, try to get more information. It seems evil how a big industry like Disney runs itself. Mickey Mouse and other popular.
LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor:

You are so right, my fellow citizens. The government, like our country, needs to be reformed. The corruption and waste that has occurred in the past must be stopped. The people need a voice in their government, and that voice is the people themselves.

Sincerely,

Editor:

I have been a long-time reader of your publication, and I am concerned about the activities of the government. They seem to be wasting a large amount of money, and I believe that we need to hold them accountable. I urge the government to do more to address the needs of the people.

Sincerely,

The new drama "54" is a gripping step back into the vibrant days of American success.

Set in the late 1970s and early 80s, the film concerns the characters and lifestyles centered around the legendary New York City disco Studio 54. Written and directed by Mark Christopher Lawford, the film is a gritty and interesting character study that delves into the glamorous and dark world of Studio 54.

The film stars John Travolta as Frank Anthony Rubell, who serves as the inspiration for the character of "Buck" in the film. Travolta delivers a powerful performance as a man with an unquenchable thirst for power and money.

"54" is a film that will be remembered for its combination of action, drama, and spectacle. It is a work in progress, and we are looking forward to seeing the final product. The film is a must-see for anyone interested in the history of Studio 54 and the world of disco.

In the end both prove to be fact-based movies, and we will never stay the same for good. The hip music, the hip dancers, and the hip clubs all contribute to the atmosphere, mainly the security of the club. "Wishlist". A soft, hypnotic club song. A soft, hypnotic club song. A soft, hypnotic club song.

The plot is centered around 10year-old Shane, who is looking for the stage but once we left the safety of the show, I met a man I like to call "the Enforcer". I generalise with a slip to the lowest level of my intelligence. A word to the wise. I'm sure 200 pounds of bananas hasn't done you or I much good. I'd better get the message across.

With the end of the show, "54" becomes a new reality. The rest of the album ranges from hard-edged to soft-edged and hard-core end of the spectrum. New directions and different musical genres are evident in the songs. The production quality is high, and the music is well-written and well-produced. Overall, "54" is a very enjoyable album to listen to.

For the love of God, stop the show! Our summer was riddled by innumerable ongoing and necessary events that dragged our collective states of consciousness through the gauntlet. Why don't you think about the future? We can't live in the past. We can't live in the past.

Off Campus Report

by Jan Bigley, Jr.

The sports world was brought to a virtual halt last week when Mark McGwire of the St. Louis Cardinals hit the 61st and 62nd home runs of his career, breaking the record held by Hank Aaron since 1974. McGwire's feat has brought the issue of home run records back into the spotlight and has reignited the debate over the validity of modern home run records.

McGwire has proven worthy of being mentioned among the greatest home run hitters of all time, worthy of being mentioned in the same breath with Ruth, Aaron, Mays, etc. McGwire has proven worthy of being considered for the Hall of Fame.

Just watching the NPL and college football games this year has given me hope for the future of professional football. After a couple of weak drafts that have produced few stars and teams that are not able to compete for championships, there is finally some hope for the future of football.

The next two names have been mentioned several times in recent weeks: Peyton Manning and Ryan Leaf. While some experts believe that Manning will go first, I believe that Leaf will go first. Leaf has opened up with two community service awards, which is a good sign.

As with the other players and all the other teams, McGwire's feat has brought attention to the Marist football team. Their performance this year has been outstanding.

First Fast start for Melfi, men's cross country

by JENNIFER GLOVER

If the first two weeks are any indication, this year's Marist men's cross-country team will be one of the most competitive teams in the college ranks. Among those athletes are Ryan Leaf and Peyton Manning. With any luck, these quarterbacks will work together and help the football team.

McGwire has proven worthy of being considered for the Hall of Fame. This is the year that has been all McGwire. McGwire has proven worthy of being considered for the Hall of Fame. This is the year that has been all McGwire. McGwire has proven worthy of being considered for the Hall of Fame.
Men's soccer starts new season where they left off

by JEFF DAINCKE
Staff Writer

It is a new season for the men's soccer team, but it has started in all too familiar fashion.

Coming off last year's 2-13-1 campaign, the Foxes have opened with four consecutive losses. The club traveled to the New York State Invitational in Oneonta back on September 5 and fell to Hartwick College 2-1. The next day it was Fordham and Poughkeepsie winless. 5-2 was the score.

Despite the slow start, the players have remained optimistic. According to freshman forward Brain Garafola, the 0-4 record has not been indicative of the team's overall potential.

"Although we have been losing, we are playing well," said the 5-10, 170-pound Garafola. These sentiments were echoed by fellow freshman Thomas Mafist.

"We've been dominating games," said Mafist. "This is our year." Marist head coach Jim Parody agreed.

"We have eleven different people coming together for the first time. It doesn't click right away," DeBrito said.

The Foxes fully expect to say goodbye to these losing ways. There is feeling of solidarity among the players.

"Last year was thrown away and this is a new beginning," said Garafola. "The team is tightly knit and everyone gets along.

Inexperience has not been the only obstacle for Marist, as the Foxes were forced to play in only one game. Matt Sommers, considered to be the heart of the Foxes, suffered a hamstring injury the second day of training camp and now is not expected to play in time for the September 26 contest against Niagara.

Freshman goalkeeper and tri-captain Carlos DeBrito agreed. "We have eleven different people coming together for the first time. It doesn't click right anyway," DeBrito said.

Matt Sommers, considered to be the heart of the Foxes, suffered a hamstring injury the second day of training camp and now is not expected to play in time for the September 26 contest against Niagara.

Being that he is the only senior, Sommers wants to get back to winning.

"I feel really bad tonight that I'm hurt," he said. "I try to lead by example on and off the field and want to turn this program around.

Conference play begins this weekend with a game against Fairfield. Sommers is looking forward to MAAC play and being able to go against the best teams in the league.

"We have to turn this program around," said Garafola. "The team is tightly knit and everyone gets along."
