Key player remains out of game

Eligibility questions surrounding one of its best players have brought the Marist men's basketball season to a screeching halt.

On Jan. 15, Marist learned that the NCAA was investigating Tomasz Cielebak, a junior forward from Poland, for his involvement in the European club basketball program. The NCAA was concerned about Cielebak's participation in the foreign program to temporarily withhold him from competition until these issues have been resolved.

In a statement released by the school after learning of the investigation, athletic director Tim Murray briefly described the situation.

"There have been some questions raised about Tomasz's participation in the European club system," he said. "It has been decided that it is in the best interests of Tomasz and the men's basketball program to temporarily withhold him from competition until these issues have been resolved."

Now, six games since the investigation began, Cielebak is still on the sideline. Murray continues to avoid word from the NCAA Student-Athlete Reinstatement Committee.

As of Tuesday, Cielebak was officially listed as inactive. On Jan. 22, after sitting out three games, Marist athletic officials ruled the forward ineligible.

This came after an internal inquiry into the matter. A committee, consisting of Murray, assistant athletic director for compliance Chuck Bisworth, NCAA faculty representative John Ritscheiderfer and others reviewed Cielebak's status.

Cielebak was ruled officially ineligible to play, their report was sent to the NCAA and the NCAA must rule on the issue.

"I just feel like we are operating with one hand behind our back," said Dave Magarity, Head coach.

Flags represent growing interest in studying abroad

by CHRIS CROGA

"If you are like many here at Marist who pass through the Rotunda on a regular basis, you are probably wondering what the flags are all about.

The flags, all seemingly a new item in the Rotunda, represent a renewed interest in studying abroad by Marist students.

According to Chandra Bierwirth, assistant athletic director for external affairs, the flags were installed after a renewed interest in studying abroad by Marist students was discovered.

"The study abroad program is not only growing in the number of students choosing to participate, but also in the number of programs offered," Bierwirth said. "This year we are predicting 60 students will choose a study abroad program."

The study abroad program is not only growing in the number of students choosing to participate, but also in the number of programs offered. According to Bierwirth, Marist has studied in 50 countries in the last 10 years. Currently, Marist has students spread out over eight international programs.

The International Education Program is one of the many international programs offered. Ireland, England and Italy are the three most popular places to study right now. Marist students have also chosen to study in Australia and South Africa.

International education encourages students to want to study in foreign lands. According to Bierwirth, the International Education Program has really grown and it is only going to grow more as Marist students will be without one of their biggest stars.

"It is in our best interests to withhold him from competition until any questions with NCAA regulations are resolved," he said.

It is difficult to ascertain what the exact violation was, however. When asked why the NCAA was concerned about Cielebak's eligibility, Morrison said, "I feel like we are operating with one hand behind our back."

The editor strikes back
by TARA QUINN
Opinion Editor

The idea expressed on these pages are not necessarily those of The Circle

In the December 10, 1998 issue of The Circle,opeshun Christopher Cavallaro wrote a letter to the editor in which he said, "Since when did a newspaper allow reporters to voice their own opinions in a so-called supposedly unbiased publication?"

Cavallaro is a student of Marist College in the School of Journalism and Mass Communications.

In his letter, he said that newspapers are a means of disseminating useful information to the general public.

But is an invisible factor in all publications because people write them. I did not think it was necessary to residual any conversation that now people are not concerned about doing their part in the journalistic society.

The Opinion Section is a forum for students to question the institution in which we are in, which includes the press. It is a place to express opinions and ideas. "Don't Look Back," Bob Dylan told a journalism student in the documentary, "Blazing Saddles." I would say the same to the Editor of The Circle, "I'll never go to read The Circle again as an opinion page because they killed it."

I am not going to read The Circle anymore because, although I am not sure if it is a personal decision, because they got just as much to lose by printing the truth... They did get off the beaten path when they printed the truth. There's no one in Time Magazine.

To further illustrate the bias of the press, I will note that this publisher of The Circle could have been censored from the paper, but Pulitzer declined to do so.

Cavallaro also noted that the editor "wrote our readers as employees. As an employee, I do not have the ability to write on these pages."

"I want to find out the truth, I am not going to read Time Magazine. I mean, because they just get too much to lose by printing the truth."

"There's no ideas in Time Magazine."

Bob Dylan

Dylan was one of the many people who were outspoken in their opinions on this issue. In his book, "Blowing in the Wind," he wrote, "It's time for a revolution..."

What if the use of McLuhan is so called "funny" or "hilarious"? If I think a story is "funny," why do I call it "nothing." Is a "gap" not supposed to be filled with a "XF"? Is the use of "idea" the same as "idea"? Is the use of "and" the same as "and"? Is the use of "but" the same as "but"?

Granted, I put some thought into this... But please do not try to condemn my views. I am not a "bad editor." I am not a "bad journalist." I am a human being. I have a right to my views... I have a right to my opinions... I have a right to write them. I do not think it was an apology." As an editor, I do not think in columns. I do not think in words. I do not think in sentences and stuff as sort of like the candy coating on an Advil tablet. Granted, this is somewhat pseudo-metaphorical..."

Op-Ed

The new film "She's All That" is a forgettable piece of trash. Although the film is not particularly offensive in many ways, it is still not worth the time and money people would spend on it.

The plot is simple and predictable. The main character, played by Brendan Fraser, is a popular high school student who is estudying to be a lawyer. He is joined by his best friend, played by Scott Wolf, who is also popular at school.

The film's main theme is about popularity. The main character is determined to win the prom queen, who is played by Alyssa Milano. He is jealous of her new boyfriend, played by Jonathan Brandis, and decides to right him by making her fall in love with him instead.

The film's dialogue is terrible and the acting is poor. The only redeeming feature of the film is the music, which is well-crafted and enjoyable.

The film's message is that popularity is the key to success in high school. This is a message that is often repeated in movies and TV shows, but it is not true. Popularity does not guarantee success in life.

The film's message is also that women are more important than men. This is a harmful message that is often repeated in movies and TV shows, but it is not true. Women are just as important as men.

The film's message is also that the only way to succeed is to be popular. This is a harmful message that is often repeated in movies and TV shows, but it is not true. There are many ways to succeed in life.

The film's message is also that the only way to be happy is to be popular. This is a harmful message that is often repeated in movies and TV shows, but it is not true. Happiness comes from within and cannot be found in others.

In conclusion, "She's All That" is a forgettable piece of trash. It is not worth the time and money people would spend on it. It is not a good message for young people to receive.

Give nonviolence a chance at The Chance

by ChrisSotto

Recently, The Chance, located on Central Street in Poughkeepsie, has been receiving negative attention from various sources. This is because The Chance has been repeatedly accused of being a drug den and a place where violence occurs.

There are claims that when someone has stepped up to the challenge and made the necessary changes, others sided with them by simply saying that they were picking on an innocent woman who was not doing anything wrong.

In fact, the facts show that the staff at The Chance has repeatedly been seen engaging in drug-related activities and violence.

The Music Department Chair, Russell Starnes, said that the department is offering new courses for students interested in music and performance.

The next big thing in video gaming is...The Legend of Zelda: Ocarina of Time. When this game is released on the Nintendo 64 this year, fans are sure to drool in anticipation of what has been released. This game is not only the follow-up to the first game The Legend of Zelda: A Link to the Past; it is since the release of the Nintendo Entertainment System, the best game ever. This game is the story of a hero called Link. Of course, Link is a young and courageous young man who, like the hero of the Legend of Zelda, seems to have infinite energy for saving the world. The Legend of Zelda: Ocarina of Time is the title of the first game's sequel. The game begins the spring semester in the Experi­mental Theatre Department (ETD) mainstage this spring. But the 1999 spring semester in the ETD mainstage is going to be nothing like the previous semesters. The first game's protagonist, Link, will be back and the main cast will be joined by his best friend, Navi. The story is simple, basically, that Link is evil and all around bad. With the first game The Legend of Zelda: Ocarina of Time, fans can appeal to many play­ers. If that statement is not an understatement, it is certainly not an overstatement. There are so many subplots, which appeals to the audience. The Zelda games can be enjoyed by people who like puzzle games. Some doubting measure in playing the Red Foxes. The biggest threat in a 1-0 record away from Poughkeepsie.

Marist and their potential for scoring is an average
3.4 goals per game, will play against the Marist at the New-Hyde Park Civic Center this Friday against Western Connecticut.

John Elway and the Broncos defeated the Atlanta Falcons Sunday 34-29, defending their Super Bowl victory from last year, becoming only the seventh team in NFL history to do so.

The win was not without controversy, but rather how easily Denver did it. The Falcons were outscored by over two times and body-tackled the game nearly every single second of the regular time. Shannon Mason and Scott Ray both deficits from Clinton High, expected no step in right away.

Unexpected slump has Marist 7th in MAAC

by JEFF DAINICKE Staff Writer

Just over a month ago, the Marist mens basketball team was enjoying a dream season. As everyone headed home for semester break, the Red Foxes packed their bags, and their 8-0 record, and headed west to take on Arizona State. And although the cross-country trip yielded a 85-77 loss to the Sun Devils, people were excited about this team, so much so that Marist received a vote in the national coaches poll.

Now, as the season enters its final stretch, the Foxes (12-8; 5-7) have derailed, dropping five of their last six. A season that was once filled with promise is now oozing with uncertainty. At the center of it all is the absence of junior forward Tomasz Cielebak, the team's fourth leading scorer, who was ruled ineligible by Marist athletic officials while the NCAA investigates Cielebak's eligibility.

The investigation into Cielebak is based on his involvement in the European club system (For more information, see page 1).

Consequently, Marist has been without his services since Jan. 16, a day that saw the Red Foxes fall to Canisius 68-67. They are 1-5 in the five games Cielebak has missed so far.

Last week, Marist dropped two Metro Atlantic Conference contests to Lehigh 67-66 loss at the McCinn Center to Loyola last Wednesday and an 84-78 defeat at Siena on Saturday. Loyola last Wednesday and an 84-78 defeat at Siena on Saturday.

Two of the best points guards in the MAAC go one on one as Marist's Bo Larrañaga (5) defends against Loyola's Jason Rowe (13) during the Greyhounds' win over the Red Foxes.

Larrañaga combined to go only 6-25 from the field, while the Foxes as a team connected on 43 percent of their shots. The Greyhounds defeated the Foxes 93-87.
