New Faculty Members

Mr. White

A new member of the increasing nucleus of faculty members at Marist is Mr. John G. White, a native of Brooklyn, New York. After completing his secondary education, he enrolled at Belmont Abbey College, North Carolina where he received his B.A. in History. He then served his country for a period of "Five years, one month and eleven days" as a member of the U.S. Navy. He held the ranks of Hospital Corpman, Navigator Bombardier, Ensign, and in 1958 was assigned to the Lexington VAH Squadron 6 as Lieutenant, J.G.

Mr. Lewis

Brooklyn, New York has sent Marist a new English teacher in the person of Mr. Robert Lewis. His high school education was obtained at St. Augustine's in Brooklyn. From high school Mr. Lewis went to Manhattan College on a New York State Regents Scholarship. While at Manhattan he was editor of the yearbook in his junior year. After graduation with a B.A. in English, his next step was to enter Columbia University where he majored in Contemporary Literature, and was awarded an M.A. in English. His Master's thesis was on Robert Lowell, a contemporary American poet.

When asked his opinion of Marist, Mr. Lewis commented that he felt the campus had an open and unobtrusive atmosphere that was quite stimulating. He also said that he appreciated all the help that had been given him by the faculty with his many problems since this was his first real teaching assignment.

Besides being a proctor on the sixth floor of Leo Hall, Mr. Lewis also teaches several courses. He has two freshman courses, Composition and Introduction to Literature and a major English course, Contemporary English and American Literature.

Sports Dinner Opens Season

To begin the 1963-64 sports season here at Marist a cocktail hour and dinner were arranged for the evening of October 1st, before our soccer opener at Bard College.

Attending the cocktail hour and dinner were many of the area athletic directors, coaches, officials and news and sportscasters. Also attending were: Russell Hadden of Federal Bearing Company and Hugh and John Mulligan of Associated Press, New York, along with Dr. Howard Goldman, the coaching staff, the Athletic committee, Brother Linus Foy, President of Marist and Brother Paul Stokes, Dean.

Mr. Richard Freer, Co-Editor of The Reynard, Fred Weiss, captain of the basketball team, Bill Morrissey, Treasurer of the Marist Student Council, Fred Wadhams, assistant Public Relations man, and George Hallam, Editor of The Record represented the student body and helped to organize the cocktail party in Adrian Lounge under the able leadership of Mr. Robert Norman who was responsible for the affair.

It, a never ceasing mode of activity, striving for the development of its best potentials.

Currently, Mr. White can be found instructing such classes as Medieval History (his specialty), Medieval Monasticism, and Modern European History.
The Plebiscite
by Charles Osgood

Everyone will recognize the importance of the question of which word is used in our society. As a means of community, the word "plebiscite" has been more popularly devised than many. The word was written as "plebiscite" in the United States, and as "plebiscite" in the United Kingdom. The history of humanity bears witness to the fact that the written word has shaped and molded cultures, erected and toppled governments, and in general determined the destiny of man. In the hands of men of conscience it has served a higher purpose, elevating mankind from the mud and slime of a primitive existence to the較高 levels of civilization and progress. Today we face a problem much like that of yesterday, where those who stand from the dusty cobblestones of a living room change the world's thinking and progress on an international scale. This world condition has become ever more difficult to control, people, and events and which is increasingly reflected in the responses of the individual to the world. He is more aware of his own personal and to the world, and through him passed on organized group of communication. Such a problem came from the United Nations.

The Plebiscite

For three years the Literary Club has been giving its members an outlet for expression for students. Entitled The Literary Club has been host to the most interesting and talented of our students. It has been a place where students can express their thoughts and opinions through written and spoken words. The club, which opened its doors to a new group of students this year, has undergone many changes and growth. We are grateful to all who have contributed to its success. The club has always been open to the public and encourages all to participate in its activities.

Effective October 1st and continuing through the first of December, the New York City Commission on the Arts will reduce its budget to accommodate the ongoing cuts in the arts. The budget cuts will affect a number of programs, including the Arts in Education program and the Arts in the Parks program.

The arts in New York City have been hit hard by the budget cuts, and the commission is trying to find ways to continue to support the arts. Despite the cuts, the commission remains committed to supporting the arts in the city.

The Plebiscite

by Charles Covel

Everyone will recognize the importance of the question of plebiscite pervading the world in our society. As a means of community of the American people, plebiscite has been devised. The written word as络ed to as "the voice of the people". The history of humanity bears witness to the fact that the written word has shaped and molded cultures, erected and toppled governments, and in general determined the destiny of man. In the wrong hands it has become at times a vicious tool to enslave and terrorize a populace. In the hands of men of conscience it has served a higher purpose, elevating mankind from the slums and squalor of a primitive existence to a higher plane of intelligence and morality. Today we face a problem much like that one that we who still live in the dusty cobwebs of a living room chair are too often and too frequently aware of a personal emergency. This world condition has brought into relief the need for a people, people, and events which is increasingly reflected in man's consciousness of an individualism that is the responsibility of the individual to reach through his available organs of communication. Such an expression comes from the mouth of the Literary Club.

For three years the Literary Club has been an outlet of expression for students. Established The University, the Literary Club is the outgrowth of the thoughts of our students which are eloquently voiced miniature novels exploring the future and the hopes for social change. Through the Medium of the Literary Club once opens its doors to its members the club is of the public to communicate to others outside their own circle. Not only must the club be focused upon the publication of "The Student" but it is equally as important to realize by only one means - student contributions - the problem of the Literary Club has been reduced to two and that is inauspicious occasion. As far as I know there is no other voice that has not asked for Allocations and many of the clubs such as the Debate and the Record are beginning to feel that if they are no allocations they will have no voice. I now know that Mr. Rollins will continue his fine efforts so that the Student will continue to be an outlet for the student body of Marist.

IMPRESSIONS

Baggage in all large cities is always to be found. The poor are always with us. In Paris, there are many merchants. Probably even more than her Grand-Place market.

The people in the (name of station) are parlor passengers for these places to business, or as do at the doors of churches. But they are not limited to these places. A sidewalk along the Seine is revolting for some types.

The poor of Paris can be broken down roughly into five classes. First, there are the religious. These are mostly ladies who beg by the churches. Then there is the blind and the lame who can be broken down further into two classes: the blind beggars and the workers. The workers are those who offer your a copper or two to help out with income. Some of them sing, but most of them play music. Those who play music are often either the very old or the very young. The young are always allowing help shabby appearance to speak for them. Also, there are the drunks, with wine being as important and as cheap as it is here, there are many of them.

The last class is that of the starving artist. Truly, there are many people who are poor here, so many in fact, that they all can't make a go of it. The artists and the starving artists are the two main groups. Find a nice day and along the Seine you will find the people with their paints, or in some cases, with their chalk. The challenge of the day is, "Don't you have a job?" They mark off a block on the walk, but a copper or two to help out with income. They collect the tips, and they are out for the day. There are many artists who do this way - too bad they can't pick up and added.
