Parents' Weekend Anticipates Good Turn-Out For Activities

More than 300 parents are expected to participate in this annual Parents' Weekend to be held at Marist College, November 8-10.

The program will begin on Friday evening at 8:30 p.m., with a Cabaret Night in the dining hall. Entertainment will be provided by Marist students.

The annual President's breakfast will be held on Saturday morning at 10:00 in the dining hall. Student Government president Brian Morris will extend greetings, and Marist president Linus R. Foy will speak about "The Future of Marist College."

Marist faculty will be available to discuss academic programs from 11:30 - 2:00 p.m. in the Campus Center. At 2:00 p.m. Marist will meet Westchester Community College in a club football game on Leonis Field. A cocktail hour and dinner will be held in the evening, beginning at 6:00. The social will be held in the college dining hall, with music provided by the Michael Paradox, at Moose Band. The weekend will conclude on Sunday, with informal open tours sponsored by the college's five residence halls.

The program is under the direction of Frederick A. Lambert, director of campus life, and C. A. Parrott, director of student activities, and includes the work of Maria P. Carr, Cathy Fink and Isabelle Ardis Janes. The students involved are Cathy Shubik, Ira, Jane Holmes, Carla and Debra Joyce.

In an effort to advertise Marist College to present, past, and future students and faculty members, the Marist College Student Government is sponsoring a project called "Bring A Friend To Marist." This project originated as an idea to help recruit future freshmen students into Marist for the 1975-76 academic year. Brian Morris, president of the student government, and Pete Wilder, a sophomore coordinator in Cameron Hall, dissected the ideas for the project at the summer resident workshop which had taken place on campus this past August.

Beginning this Friday, there will be a car-pooling service available on campus to both commuter and resident students. This project, coordinated and conceived by Debbie Dillen for one of her courses, will involve several functions as well as finding rides and riders for students, it will help students to cut costs of traveling. It will save gas, and also help environmental conditions caused by cars, to lessen. The service can be used for daily travel, weekend travel, or vacation trips, or off-campus activities, as well as for any other reason you might want a ride in a car.

Funded by the Student Government, the service will work out of the Commuter Union office using the bulletin board next to the cafeteria to keep people informed of rides available and needed. Drivers and riders who apply will be sent a list of possible riders mates and where to contact them.

Initially, the service will be limited to those commuter students on campus, including Dutchess and Culinary Institute students, but there are possibilities of expanding the service after it becomes established.

The main concern of the service is that there be enough applicants initially to allow the service to operate. Without drivers and riders who are willing to apply, the service cannot operate.

Applications will be available at the Commuter Union office and the Commuter Union Office, and the Commuter Union office has applications available. Interested students should contact Debbie Dillen through the campus mail at Box 406.

Marist Granted Affiliation

With Marketing Association

by Frank Schiavi

The American Marketing Association, a membership organization composed of business people in the United States, Canada and other countries who share a common interest in studying and implementing possible solutions to marketing problems. In late September, Marist College was granted affiliation with the association and, as a result, the Marist collegiate chapter was formed.

The Marist chapter, which consists of students, was initiated by Richard L. McCarty of the Business Department. McCarty, a member of the association, association, created the chapter and submitted an application that would provide an insight into the practice of marketing. The chapter will also provide a closer link between students and national businesses.

The student president of the chapter, Mary Ann Paratillo, said, "We want to provide a close relationship between students, faculty and businesses within and outside the community. Hopefully, this relationship will provide students with good, practical marketing experience and job contacts after graduation."

According to Mary Ann, the chapter has planned numerous guest speakers and field trips. For example, on November 15 at 7:00, Richard Dwyer of the Dwyer and Dolger advertising agency will speak to the students, and on December 4 the chapter has planned a field trip to Bloomingdale's department store in New York City.

By next semester, the chapter hopes to have newer goals, which is to get involved in community service by applying marketing solutions to local marketing problems. "Our goal is to benefit the students by providing them the necessary knowledge," McCarty said. "Being members will give us the practical experience that employers so often require." Also, new and different membership in the Marist chapter is close to 50. Although, initially, members are limited to business majors, community-related majors are now being allowed membership. If you wish to know more about the field trips, guest speakers, or marketing internship opportunities, contact the chapter's faculty adviser, Richard McCarty of the Business Department.

Teng Completes Book

by Eleanor Beth

Yuan Chung Teng, Marist senior and president of the National Federation of Chinese Student Clubs, has written a book in English at a Study of Chinese Regionalism and Its Implications. A senior history student, Teng is a student at Marist College and has been a practical student of Chinese history for the last seven years of his life. "Chinese history is a high level of insight, which any person of any age should consider," he said. His study of Chinese history and its implications has been reflected in his book, which is being published shortly.

Students Receive Letters From Cox

by Jerry Preiss

As an effort to help students keep in touch, Dean Cox has sent out letters to students who have recently transferred. The letters are intended to provide encouragement and support, and to keep the students informed of important campus events and resources. Cox has been active in student affairs for many years, and his experience and wisdom are highly valued by the students.

Dear Marist students, faculty, staff, and alumni:

And just a little note to let you know that everyone is coming home. So far I have begun studies at the University of Wisconsin. As far as I can tell, all has made a smooth transition, enjoying the experience but longing for home. I have missed our conversations and I hope I will be able to continue them soon.

I have received a good amount of encouragement and advice from those who have been studying abroad. I look forward to hearing from you all about your experiences. Take care and let me know if there is anything I can do to support you.

With best wishes,

Alcoholism Poses Problem

By Bill Russo

On-campus residence, drinking, and alcoholism are, with their consequences, part and parcel of the Marist College experience. According to Dr. M.J. DiNardo, assistant professor of psychology, about one-third of the student population of Marist College is living with alcoholism.

Unfortunately, the prevalence of alcoholism among college students is not unique to Marist. Across the nation, the problem of alcoholism is becoming increasingly prevalent.

DiNardo said that the problem of alcoholism among college students is often exacerbated by the social climate of college life. He noted that the pressures of academic and social obligations can often lead to drinking behavior as a means of coping with stress.

According to DiNardo, alcoholism is a serious problem that requires intervention from both the individual and the college administration.

Students, he said, should seek help from a counselor or a psychologist if they are struggling with alcoholism. He also recommended that the college provide more resources for students, such as support groups and counseling services.

The college administration, he added, should also take steps to address the problem of alcoholism, such as implementing policies to limit alcohol sales on campus and providing more opportunities for students to engage in sober activities.

DiNardo said that addressing the problem of alcoholism is a shared responsibility between the individual and the college community. He urged students to take an active role in reducing the prevalence of alcoholism on campus by setting personal limits on their drinking and supporting their peers who may be struggling with alcoholism.

By Chip Koons

The Marist College Student Government has taken steps to address the issue of alcoholism on campus by launching a campaign to raise awareness about the problem and encourage students to make healthy choices.

The campaign, which includes public service announcements and social media campaigns, aims to educate students about the risks of alcoholism and encourage them to seek help if they or someone they know is struggling with the issue.

The Student Government has also formed a partnership with the Marist College Counseling Center to provide resources and support to students who may be struggling with alcoholism.

DiNardo said that the Student Government’s efforts are an important step in addressing the problem of alcoholism on campus. He noted that the Student Government’s commitment to addressing the issue is a testament to the college’s commitment to student health and well-being.

DiNardo added that the college administration has also taken steps to address the problem of alcoholism. He noted that the college has implemented policies to limit alcohol sales on campus and provide more opportunities for students to engage in sober activities.

Enrollment

The National Research Council has announced its annual report on college enrollment. The report indicates a slight decline in college enrollment, with a 0.5% decrease in the number of students enrolled in higher education institutions across the country.

The report attributes the decline in enrollment to a number of factors, including increased costs of higher education, economic uncertainty, and changes in the availability of financial aid.

The report notes that while the overall enrollment has declined, there are some segments of the student population that have experienced increases, such as older students and students from low-income backgrounds.

The report also highlights the importance of addressing the challenges facing higher education institutions in order to ensure that all students have access to quality education.

The report concludes with a call to action for policymakers, educators, and students to work together to support higher education institutions and ensure that all students have the opportunity to pursue their education.

The report is available for download on the National Research Council’s website.

Dear Martin Students, faculty members, and students returning from their travels:

Just a little note to let you know that everyone is coming home. I have been at University of Wisconsin-Madison for my last year here, and I have been home for two weeks now. Although I have been away for the past year, I am still very much a part of the community here at Martin.

I am currently working on my thesis, and I hope to complete it soon. My research focuses on the impact of globalization on local communities in Southeast Asia. I am also working on a new project that explores the role of technology in education. I am excited to share more about this project with you in the future.

I would like to express my gratitude to the faculty members and students who have supported me throughout my time here. Your kindness and encouragement have been invaluable to me, and I am grateful for the opportunities that have been presented to me.

Thank you for your continued support, and I look forward to seeing you all soon.

Yours sincerely,

My home town newspaper, the Lawrence (Mass.) Eagle Tribune, is a very small-town newspaper. Lawrence is probably the most eccentric city of the sort that used to exist in the United States. It used to be a small place but now it is only a part of the larger metropolitan area of Boston. The newspaper is small and the power of the press is considerably greater in this small town than in the larger metropolitan areas. I was told by one of the editors that the town was called "Code 99" because of a special law passed by the local legislature.

Vikings Rally For Win; Ready For W'chester
by Tom McTernan

Coming off a tremendous effort in rallying from a 20-7 deficit to a dramatic 25-24 upset victory over third-ranked Oswego State last weekend, Marist closes out its regular and SCC schedule here Saturday, November 8, with Westchester Community College providing the opposition.

With the 5-1-1 Foxes facing by St. John’s 23-12 last Saturday, the Vikings have a clear road ahead quest of the National Club Football championship and a bid to the National Invitational Bowl. First, however, Marist must get by always-rough Westchester who beat the Vikings twice last year; 17-13 in the regular season game and 41-6 in the playoffs for the ECC/CCF championship. So it seems no reason to expect a kneejerk Saturday with so much at stake.

Trailing 5-4 early in the fourth quarter, back Chris Gormley scored from 11 yards out following an outstanding third period by Nigel Davis to get the Vikings off the hook.

Foxes Place Fourth At Albany Meet

The Marist Running Red Foxes put forth their strongest team effort of the season, placed forth in the New York State Upstate Country Championships at Albany State University on Saturday. This was the highest finish ever for a Marist cross country team in the state championships.

This strong performance by Marist qualified them for the National Collegiate Athletic Association Division Three Cross Country Championships in Wheeling, West Virginia.

In the Upstate Meet, Plattsburg State, a new entry, put up a strong effort together and won the meet with 26 points. Albany, which has been a Maran, scored 2nd, followed by St. John’s 3rd, New York University 4th, Marist 7th, Binghamton 10th, and Siena seventh with 209, R.I.T. eighth with 248, Hobart ninth with 344, Houghton College tenth with 374, and Snowber College eleventh with 365.

Three Marist runners made the All-State team by their fine performances in this meet. Fred Holm of the 34th place, added his certificate for placing sixth and the First State Coach, Brian Yonan, who placed fifteenth and George McCafferty who placed eighteenth for the Third Team All-State Team.

Another credit to Marist when it was announced that the Ninth Annual All New York State College Cross Country Hall of Fame by Pace College is committee meet for two consecutive years. Joe Bihm was in this group last year. Joe is a member of the Marist championship team last year.

Marist did not limit its top three runners, however, as all seven men put together a strong showing. Will Morrison was Marist’s fourth man and was well show great improvement by placing 30th. He was ranked 10th in the fall of 1973 assumed the position of lightweight crew coach.

Bill graduated from Marist in 1962. He had rowed for the Red Foxes crew team during his last three years. He was coxswain of the 1962 New York State Upstate Country Championship team.

In 1979 his lightweight crew finished fifth in the 1979 New York State Upstate Country Championship meet.

Before attending Marist, Lenihan rowed for four years at Poughkeepsie High School and stroked the Pinners’ four which won the National Scholastic Championship in 1968.

“...ECKELMAN IS NAMED AS Replacement...”

Joe Eckelmann of Hyde Park, New York, has been named varsity lightweight crew coach at Marist College, according to Marist College Athletic Director Malcolm Altmont.

Eckelmann, 23, succeeds Bill Lenihan who resigned for health reasons earlier this fall.

Joe is a former student-athlete at the University of Melbourne, Australia. He was a member of the Australia Lightweight National Rowing Team.

In the fall of 1972, Joe was named to the School's Recognition List. Joe became a member of the Australia Lightweight National Rowing Team.
