COMMUTING STUDENTS INVITED TO MAKE RESIDENCE HERE

By Gary Norman

The Marist College commuting student body has now increased to the point where a commuter student residence hall is needed. According to Lambert, commuter students will be offered a double room in one of the residence halls for a period of three weeks (January to mid-March) during which time they will be housed and supplied with the blue book, routine books. The dormitory will be located off-campus near the main entrance of the college, and will offer a comfortable place for commuters during the bad weather months which will allow them to create better relationships with resident students and to have at their disposal a better opportunity to attend campus activities.

Letters To The Editors

Dear CIRCLE,

Vocational

To the CIRCLE: One of the current trends in high school education is vocational training programs. Many students are choosing these programs because they offer practical skills and potential job opportunities. However, it is important to remember that vocational education should complement, not replace, a well-rounded education. Vocational training can provide valuable skills, but it is equally important to develop a strong academic foundation.

Rehabilitation

By now you have heard that the CIRCLE community is aware of the fact that President Ford has issued the bill for handicapped people. Frankly, we would have been very grateful to the government for the help our handicapped friends have received. The law was passed because they were able to overcome a great handicap. Does this mean that they were able to forget their handicap? Not a bit. This means that they were able to overcome the handicap.

Letters To The Editors

Dear Clarion,

This is my letter to the Editors of the Clarion. I am writing in response to the article that appeared in the November 14, 1974 issue. I appreciate the opportunity to express my thoughts and concerns regarding the topic discussed in the article.

Vocational Education

The article mentions the importance of vocational education and its role in equipping students with the necessary skills and knowledge for the workforce. I wholeheartedly agree with this perspective. Vocational education should not only focus on providing technical skills but also on developing critical thinking and problem-solving abilities.

Religious Vocation

The section on religious vocations highlights the dedication and commitment of those who choose to serve in religious orders. I commend these individuals for their selfless dedication to their faith and the communities they serve. The support and encouragement of such vocations are crucial in preserving a strong spiritual foundation in society.

Rehabilitation

The rehabilitation section discusses the importance of rehabilitation programs and the role they play in helping individuals re-enter society. I believe that rehabilitation should be a comprehensive process that addresses not only the physical but also the psychological needs of individuals.

The Stillborn Revolution?

The article concludes with a reflection on the concept of the "stillborn revolution." It raises questions about the relevance and efficacy of such movements in today's world. I think it's important to consider the context in which such terms are used and to critically evaluate their implications.

Sincerely,

[Signature]

France a la Giscard: A New Leaf?

by Pierre S. Granger

The article provides an insightful analysis of President Giscard's approach to governance. It highlights his efforts to modernize French politics and his commitment to economic reforms. The article also touches on his foreign policy initiatives and their impact on international relations.

Recidivism Linked To Education Level

by Larry Gikony

The article underscores the relationship between education level and recidivism rates. It suggests that higher education levels may be associated with lower recidivism rates, possibly due to increased work opportunities and better job prospects.

The Stillborn Revolution?

by Vincent Terence

The article explores the concept of the "stillborn revolution." It questions the effectiveness of such movements and the challenges they face in achieving lasting change. The article encourages readers to critically evaluate the prospects of such movements and consider alternative strategies for social transformation.

The Modern Language Department

The Modern Language Department is excited to announce the upcoming lecture series on "The Stillborn Revolution." The lectures will explore the historical context, key figures, and contemporary implications of this phenomenon. We encourage all interested individuals to attend and engage in thoughtful dialogue on this important topic.

The initial social reactions to London was for the most part satisfying. After the initial shock of searching for a flat and the frighteningly expensive prices, we found this in a Marist Fathers' residence for a reasonable rent. However, the city itself left much to be desired. "I have the least fun it's possible to have," said one. "It's a very self-fulfilling city. There is definitely no shortage of things to do, but it's all quite expensive." The foreign students were divided in their opinions of the city. "I love it," said one, "but I'm not sure if I'll stay." The others, however, were more positive. "I'm having a great time," said another, "and I plan to stay for the duration of my stay." The city is a mix of old and new, with many areas still retaining their historical charm, while others are being modernized. Overall, the students were happy with their decision to study in London, and felt that the city would be a great place to have fun.

After the initial brutal reactions in London, settling down to living in London was not the most peaceful experience. I was searching for a flat and the possibility of getting one. The housing department of London appears to be quite unable to cope.
"I have the broadest of choices. I could have a house in London, a house in Oxford, or a house in Manchester," they tell me. Well, I have the broadest of choices. In retaliation, I have decided to stay in London for six months. It is not a bad place, but I have to admit that I would prefer to be somewhere else.

Season's End Shows Outstanding Frosh Athletics

By Tom McNamar

As the fall season comes to a close, the frosh athletes on the University of Michigan football and basketball teams are beginning to shine. The Frosh Football team, under the tutelage of Coach John Militz, has proven to be a force to be reckoned with. The Frosh Basketball team, coached by Coach Dan McCaffery, has also shown great promise.

The plight of California athletes who have been denied the opportu-

as their peers has been brought to national attention. The fortiplight of female athletes across the country. The Marist Frosts Com-opportunity in athletics, has been working tirelessly to bring light to this issue.

Vikings Upset

By Thomas McTernan

A strong running game and several key Mark-tackles, including a fumble by quarterback Ed Donovan, led to a 5-2 upset victory over Westchester, Sunday afternoon in Tappan Zee. The Vikings scored on their first drive, with Mike Bellerose recovering a fumble by Westchester quarterback Jim McTernan in the end zone. The Vikings held Westchester to 251 yards of offense, including 103 rushing yards.

Booher Selected For Tournament

By John Tkach

The Vikings traveled to the Westchester Section of the New York State League to face the Greenwich Bulldogs on Sunday afternoon. The Bulldogs were coming off a 2-1 loss to the Stillwater Eagles the previous week, and the game was a crucial contest for both teams.

Booher ran for 123 yards and two touchdowns, including a 70-yard touchdown late in the fourth quarter that put the game out of reach. The Vikings won the game 31-14 and moved into second place in the league, just two games behind the league leaders.

MARSHALL UNIVERSITY

The Marshall University Thundering Herd, led by quarterback Ben Miller, dominated the West Virginia University Mountaineers in a 42-7 victory on Saturday afternoon. Miller threw for 367 yards and four touchdowns, while running back John Doe rushed for 150 yards and two touchdowns.

Vikings Place 29th

By Samuel Jones

The Vikings traveled to the University of Rochester for the first game of the season against the University of Wisconsin-Madison. The game was a close contest, with the Vikings leading 14-10 at halftime. However, the Badgers came back strongly in the second half, scoring 24 unanswered points to win the game.

Booher played well, rushing for 107 yards and a touchdown, but the defense was unable to stop the Badgers' high-powered offense. The Vikings finished the game with a 34-24 loss, dropping them to 0-1 on the season.

Booher was named the MVP of the game, earning himself a place on the All-Star team. The Vikings will look to regroup in their next game against the University of Illinois-Chicago, hoping to bounce back from their early season loss.
