Kelly new Dean

Dr. Gerald Kelly, director of financial aid, was named assistant dean of students by President Linus R. Foy April 1 in a move to restructure the responsibilities of the office of the dean of students, according to Dr. Antonio Perez, dean of students. Kelly and Fred Lambert will share the title of assistant dean of students, a post Lambert has held for the past two years.

As dean, Kelly will take charge of student services. His duties will include administering financial aid, and other student-related services such as Upward Bound, the Higher Education Opportunity Program (HEOP), special services (handicapped), and campus counseling, said Perez.

Lambert will continue his capacities as administrator of campus life, Perez said.

"There will be a more representative voice for several of the student services in upper levels of the administration," Kelly said. Kelly will receive a slight increase in salary, according to Perez.

Cuts could ax administrator jobs

Administrative, faculty, and staff members face the possibility of losing their jobs because Marist must cut $6,000 from the proposed budget for the 1977-78 school year.

"All our jobs are on the line, including mine," said Antonio Perez, dean of student life.

Perez said that anything is yet final concerning a loss of jobs.

"Hopefully we won't have to fire anyone. I'm trying to be as fair as possible. One of the toughest jobs is dealing with people's livelihoods," he said.

Although employees contracts will be renewed in July, Perez said that "At any point any administrators can be asked to leave within 30 days.

Currently, departmental budgets will be made from the financial aid office, Higher Education-Opportunity Program Office, University Housing, Campus Ministry, food services, and special services for the four were suspended because of the degree of disorderly conduct. Frank Guido, dining service manager said "There were several students harassing other students and spilling over trays, but those in particular caused us to close down the dinner lines and call security."

"These students were warned by myself and John Van Doorne, Rathskeller manager, several times but they didn't listen."

When the cafeteria closed, students were sent to the Rathskeller for dinner. "The students' conduct was disrespectful and an inconvenience to the dining service and students," said Van Doorne.

The only damage in the cafeteria were some broken glasses and plates. Dinner trays were left on the tables that night and picked up the next morning by student workers.

"We left them overnight because we wanted students to see what their fellow students did," said Guido.

River Day leaves 4 high and dry

By Cydy Ryan

Three seniors and one undergraduate student were suspended from classes and held to leave campus for disorderly conduct in the dining hall, last Thursday (senior river day).

Fred Lambert, assistant dean of students, said further disciplinary action will be taken this week. Lambert would not disclose the names of the students involved.

The seniors will not be allowed to participate in senior week activities or attend the graduation ceremony. Their diplomas will be mailed to them.

"Legally I can't let them take their final exams, but they will have to speak with their teachers concerning the charges," said Lambert.

Lambert said he is "moving for dismissal of the undergraduates," who is already on disciplinary probation. Lambert will make a recommendation to Dr. Antonio Perez, dean of students, who must agree, and Dr. Linus Foy, college president, who will make the final decision.

The trouble started after students celebrated River Day along the banks of the Hudson, distributing mock awards and drinking wine and beer. It was the 12th year students carried on the tradition.

Last week Marist College funded a celebration of the senior class with a band and free beer for students, but seniors said they were not satisfied and conducted their own celebration of the beginning of spring.

Two matters were arrested officers according to Lambert, and the charges made against the students were for public intoxication, disorderly conduct in the dining hall, harassment, and disturbance for college officials, specifically dining service managers. Lambert said the students involved were guilty of at least use or more of the offenses.

Lambert received a list of more than 30 names of dining service managers, but said the four were suspended because of the degree of disorderly conduct.

A blue print for reconstruction of the old gym into a communication arts center has been drawn up by Marist according to Anthony Campbell, business manager.

Campbell said the project will cost Marist between two and one million dollars. "Half a million would be a low figure," he said. Money for the project will be solicited from area organizations, said Campbell.

An idea

The idea to renovate the old gym originated eleven years ago when Dr. Jephth Lamming submitted a proposal to the board of trustees to convert the building into communications and fine arts center.

When reconstruction is completed, the building would have two floors instead of the one it has now, and a theater with seating for 150 people, said Lamming. It would include a television studio and control room, a series of film studios for editing and producing, and a projection, and developing. These rooms would share a common storage area.

Other plans for the first floor include a small studio for music, and classrooms arranged for public relations and advertising courses.

Arts Center planned

On the second floor there will be a pressroom, a radio and record room, a control room, an art gallery, and a photography area and a photography area.

Campbell said that the old gym is located in the center of the campus, the external architecture will be designed to unify the campus.

It has been said that the reconstruction would take about four years, said Lamming. "We'd like to see the thing in operation in 1978, but realistically it will take longer," he said.

Marist’s old gym will look like the above drawing if the college can raise enough money to rebuild it. (Drawing by Marist architect Paul Canin)
Marist goes Divi$ion II

By Maureen Tully

Rising freshmen who play basketball may now find themselves in a new league. The basketball team, which was previously Division III, has been elevated to Division II by the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) for the 1997-98 season.

The move is significant because it means that Marist will now compete against schools that are more academically competitive. The school has already been successful in its new division, winning the conference championship and advancing to the NCAA tournament.

The change has also had a financial impact. The school has received additional funding from the NCAA, which will be used to improve facilities and support athletic programs.

Benoit House to be closed

By Kevin Geary

Unless there is a need for two more housing options on campus, Benoit House will be closed next semester. The decision to close the residence hall was made by the university administration after a review of student housing needs.

The university has been trying to improve student housing options in recent years, and the decision to close Benoit House is part of that effort. The university has plans to build a new residence hall in the future.

Questioning Cameraperson

By Wendy Glass

Camerapersons: If you could do your four years of college ever again, would you do it differently?

Dana Kenney - psychology major

Yes, I would have another major field. My psychology program was not challenging enough for me.

Will Morrison - business major

I would not change anything. I would still enjoy my major.

Jim Seaton - history major

I would have gone to a different school.

Henry Champagnat IV, who was the Humanities House resident director, announced that the humanities concept in the humanities house would be nixed.

The decision was made after a review of the program, and the house will transition to a new concept in the fall.

New Circle editors

By Gayle Clark

The new Circle Editors are determined to keep the Circle Magazine an academic journal. They are planning to focus on the humanities and social sciences.

$500 winner

The $500 winner was awarded to a student who submitted the best essay on the topic of human rights. The contest was open to all students, and the winner was announced at the end of the semester.

Inaccuracy charged

A letter which was circulated among college students last Thursday stated that Marist College has achieved a significant milestone: it has bestowed a minor certificate in natural sciences to a student.

The letter, which was written by the Marist College Alumni Association, said that the new certificate was awarded to a student who had earned a degree in the natural sciences.

The letter also stated that the certificate would be available to all Marist students who enroll in the natural sciences program.

Inaccuracies are common in college life. It is important to verify information before accepting it as fact.

Champagnat IV roofs leaks

Bouncing freshmen who will play on the men's basketball team can now ask for the starting spots for their team. The Marist College athletic department has decided to offer scholarships to all freshmen who will play on the men's basketball team.

The newly formed men's basketball team will have a coaching staff of three, including head coach, Mike Maguire. The program will be housed in the old boys' dormitory, and the team will play its home games in the old gymnasium.

The new program will also offer scholarships to all juniors and seniors who will play on the team. The scholarships will be awarded based on merit and need, and will cover tuition, room and board, and other expenses.

Benoit House to be closed

By Ken Ready

Unless there is a need for more housing on campus, Benoit House will be closed next year. Housing Director Peter Amos said that right now there are not enough students who want to live in Benoit House to justify keeping it open. The decision to close the house was made by the administration, and it will be effective immediately.

Benoit House, which presently houses students, is to be closed next year.

Inaccuracies charged

A letter which was circulated around campus last Thursday and Friday指责s the Office of Student Affairs of inaccuracies in their reports.

The letter, written by Brothers of the Christian Brothers, stated that the reports were inaccurate and misleading. The letter also called for a public apology from the Office of Student Affairs.

The reaction of the Office of Student Affairs was not immediately available.

Champagnat IV nixes the humanities concept

By Wendy Block

Bennett Champagnat IV, the Humanities House, said it will not continue its humanities concept for the upcoming academic year.

The humanities concept at the house was introduced last year and is designed to give students a deeper understanding of the humanities.

The decision was made after a discussion among the house council members, and it was decided that the concept would not be continued.

McCann roofs leak

By Michael Benevolo

The new McCann Center, which was completed last year, has had roof leaks since the day it was opened.

The leaks have caused damage to the interior of the building, and the administration has been notified.

The leaks are being investigated, and repairs are expected to be made soon.
Bureaucracy stifles Green Haven tutors

By Michael Herman

This year several Marist students have discovered that if they want to avoid being stuck in the office doing paperwork, they must learn how to get along with tutors. At least two students have had to go through this process, one in the office, and the other in the dorm.

The one who got stuck in the office is a sophomore, who is not named because he does not want to be identified. He said that he got stuck in the office because he was not good at paperwork. He said that he got stuck in the office because he was not good at paperwork. He said that he got stuck in the office because he was not good at paperwork. He said that he got stuck in the office because he was not good at paperwork. He said that he got stuck in the office because he was not good at paperwork.

The other student who got stuck in the office is a junior, who is also not named because she does not want to be identified. She said that she got stuck in the office because she was not good at paperwork. She said that she got stuck in the office because she was not good at paperwork. She said that she got stuck in the office because she was not good at paperwork. She said that she got stuck in the office because she was not good at paperwork. She said that she got stuck in the office because she was not good at paperwork.

The two students believe that the problem is not with the tutors, but with the system. They said that the tutors are not to blame, but that the system is broken. They said that the tutors are not to blame, but that the system is broken. They said that the tutors are not to blame, but that the system is broken. They said that the tutors are not to blame, but that the system is broken. They said that the tutors are not to blame, but that the system is broken.
Personality of the week

No grass grows here

If there is one thing you can say about Bell Bogal, it's that the only thing growing in the bogs is grass. "No grass grows here," she declares, "and it's true. I've seen it myself!"

Bell Bogal's claim is backed by a generation of evidence. In the 1950s, a study was conducted on the bog's vegetation, and the results were unexpected. While the scientists expected to find a variety of plants, they were amazed to find that the only vegetation present was grass. This phenomenon has continued to this day, with no other plants growing in the area.

Bell Bogal's knowledge of the bog's history is second to none. "When I was a little girl," she recalls, "my father and I used to picnic there. We'd bring a lunch and spend the day exploring the bog."

Despite the lack of grass, Bell Bogal is a lover of the outdoors. "I enjoy walking through the bog," she says. "The fresh air is wonderful, and I can always find something interesting to look at."
Let's all be accurate

When a Circle reporter must criticize, it only reflects the author of the paper, but the rest of the staff as well. Many times during the past cycle, stories have been written, and sometimes alleged, that were not true. They have been accepted on face value because they had no time with which to check. There are those people who complained to me that they were not represented. The letter signed by students was incorrect.

We feel that Belanger was such a five in the student body to have been subjected to a student report about personal habits. A reporter is not a clouded, and he or she is not supposed to judge people appropriately. If Belanger did something wrong, then so be it. Let the school community judge him, not us. The decision to write the letter was not done with the best interests of Belanger in mind. It is unfair to Judge him on the basis of what we feel he should be doing.

We feel that our journalism, don't worry, was not a public relations job. Our job is to try to report, not to just come up with stories we think are good. If we can say, 'Well, we just want to see what the students think about this', then we will have a great future. Perhaps we won't get our job.

Let's all be accurate.

Good luck grads

It's that time of the year again. Yay. It's graduation time and we're seeing goodbyes to another group of students who were a big part of our lives this year. We wish them good luck and we'll miss their faces.

We wish the best of luck to Circle sports editor Ryan Rankin, who is a name probably the most often mentioned in our yearbook. He's an outstanding student and has been a great addition to the staff. We wish him the best of luck in his future endeavors.

And best of luck to our writers including the pride and joy of the writing staff, the athletic department staff. Take care and stay safe.

We wish you all good luck.

Thanks

To the editor,

With great appreciation and respect,

sincerely,

Editorial: The Circle

Inferior Punishment

I would like to address my concerns about the current policy at The Circle concerning the sanctions imposed on students for violations of the conduct code. The policy is unfair and inconsistent, and it needs to be reevaluated.

We understand that the administration wants to have a fair and consistent system and to enforce the rules. However, the current policy is not effective in achieving these goals.

Firstly, the intensity of the response is too high for minor offenses. It is not necessary to punish students for trivial infractions. Instead, the administration should focus on educating the students about the consequences of their deliberation. Secondly, the current system punishes students who might be at risk for more serious offenses. This results in a cycle of disciplinary actions that are not effective in preventing future behavior.

Support

To the Editor,

In response to the recent article in The Circle,
I would like to express my support for the proposed renovations at The Circle. As a longtime supporter of the newspaper, I believe that these changes will improve the quality of service to our students.

The renovation will include updating the facilities, increasing the number of photographers and writers on staff, and modernizing the equipment. These changes will provide a more professional and engaging environment for our students and faculty.

I urge you to consider supporting these renovations as a way to invest in our future students and their success.
Let's all be accurate

When a Circulator reporter commits a citation, it not only affects the writer of the piece, but the editor as well. Many times during the Circulator's history, editors have been fined, and sometimes more than once. When the reporter was asked if he felt bad about the citation, he said no. His reason was that he had no control over whether or not he was cited.

Gripes: We students. Students are in a bind, and sometimes the best learning comes through being bound. The Circulator reporter should get a chance to be free. He should be able to write what he wants, not what he feels like. He often does not have what he feels like writing.

We feel bad. Students are in a bind. They are not subjected to a student advisor, but are forced to go to a teacher. A teacher can be more restrictive of what they can write, and more appropriate if their Belonger said something was not appropriate. Students should be able to write what they want, based on what they believe is right. It is a form of self-expression. Students should be able to write what they want, based on what they believe is right.

When you say what you want, it's a form of self-expression. When you say what you want, it's a form of self-expression. Students should be able to write what they want, based on what they believe is right.

Editorials

Good luck grads

To the editor,

With regards,

Good work

To the editor,

The last issue of the Circulator, I liked to congratulate Larry Johnson for his outstanding work. He always goes above and beyond to make sure the students are happy.

Unfortunately, while the in-charge of the printing press, he missed a few deadlines, causing the students to wait longer than usual.

I do believe that Mr. Johnson has the best intentions at heart and has demonstrated his commitment to the students.

Evaluations

To the Editor,

I am writing in response to the evaluation we conducted last year. We were impressed with the feedback and would like to continue with similar evaluations in the future.

We are looking forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

Mixed-Emotions

In looking back over the past year, I can't help but feel留 at my experience at Circulator. There were many things that I am grateful for, such as the friendships I made and the opportunities I was given.

I am still waiting at least once, to see if I can get a job related to my field of study. I have been out of work for a few months, and I am not sure how long it will take. I am feeling uncertain about my future.

I was told by the president of the Circulator that they would be hiring people soon. However, the president did not provide any details on the job openings.

I will keep an eye on the job market and will apply for any job that I am qualified for.

Cleer Thinking

To the Editor,

President Carter is in serious danger because of his health. He should be well rested and healthy. He must be well rested and healthy. His presidency is in jeopardy because of his health. He is in serious danger because of his health.

We should be well rested and healthy. We should be well rested and healthy. His presidency is in jeopardy because of his health. He is in serious danger because of his health.

In a recent press conference, President Carter said he was feeling better. However, many analysts believe that he is not truly feeling better. He is still in serious danger because of his health. He should be well rested and healthy.

I can't see how he can continue to lead the country if he is not feeling well. His presidency is in jeopardy because of his health. He is in serious danger because of his health.

I hope he will take his health seriously and get the rest he needs. His presidency is in jeopardy because of his health. He should be well rested and healthy.
Inter-House Council lacks accomplishment

By Allyn Hickey

Some of the Inter-House Council are disappointed with the lack of work that is being accomplished by the council and the uncertainty of the purpose.

Faculty representatives for Inter-House Council, a faculty-representative committee, say that the purpose of the Inter-House Council is to coordinate the activities of all the various academic and extracurricular organizations. This is not clear enough the Inter-House Council, they say, and they believe that the Inter-House Council does not have a clearly defined purpose.

"The Inter-House Council is supposed to serve as a liaison between the students and the administration," said one faculty representative. "But it seems to me that the Inter-House Council is not doing anything to represent the students."}

Inter-House Council lacks accomplishment

By Alton Hickey

Some members of the Inter-House Council are discontented with the lack of support they are receiving from the faculty and the uncertainty of the council and the university administration.

Several faculty members have expressed their concern regarding the Inter-House Council. Some believe that the council has not received adequate support from the administration. Others feel that the council is not given enough recognition for its efforts.

Despite these concerns, some students have expressed their support for the council. They believe that the council plays an important role in the university community and that it requires more attention and resources.

The Inter-House Council is responsible for coordinating various activities on different campuses. Some students feel that the council needs more funding and resources to effectively fulfill its responsibilities.

Overall, there is a need for better communication and collaboration between the council, the administration, and the faculty. This would help ensure that the council receives the support it needs to carry out its functions effectively.

The council may consider reaching out to the administration to discuss its concerns and to request additional support. This could help address some of the issues and improve the overall functioning of the council.

In conclusion, while there are some concerns and challenges, the Inter-House Council can still play a valuable role in the university community. It is important to work towards resolving these issues and to provide the council with the necessary support to carry out its duties effectively.

A look at Communications

By Larry Stetgel

On graduation day, May 4, the Martial College will welcome a group of more than 6,400 students who will learn the meaning of leadership. They will work hard, they will work with their hands, and they will work with their brains. They will be engaged in a variety of activities, but they will all share one thing in common: the need to communicate with others.

Problems and Solutions

The growth in the number of students has also increased the number of communications-related problems that have been identified. "I don't think we've solved them all," said Larry Stetgel, "but there are a few that stand out." He listed the following problems:

1. Lack of communication
2. Lack of information
3. Lack of understanding

But there may be some solutions. For the lack of communication, "I think we can improve by..." said Larry Stetgel. For the lack of information, "I think we can improve by..." said Larry Stetgel. For the lack of understanding, "I think we can improve by..." said Larry Stetgel.

ATTENTION

The Admissions Office is accepting the names of those students interested in participating in the Internship in Educational Administration. Any present sophomores or juniors interested in recruiting for the college, should submit their names and phone numbers for the office no later than May 4.

A look at Communications

By Larry Stangl

On graduation day, May 10, Marist College graduates are officially a group of more than 8,000 students who are the original pioneers in this academic generation. Marist has been through a number of changes and challenges, and we are proud of the progress we have made.

Problems and Solutions

The growth in the number of students and the resulting changes has presented a number of problems for the department. "I don't think we're feeling too good about the problems," said one faculty member. "But there are areas where the problems are being addressed." The faculty and staff are working to develop solutions to these problems.

Losing of students

One of the biggest problems is the loss of students. "We have lost a significant number of students," said another faculty member. "But we're working to address this problem." The department is working with other departments to retain students and improve retention rates.

The faculty and staff are also working to develop solutions to other problems, such as improving communication between students and faculty. "We're working to improve communication between students and faculty," said one faculty member. "But we have a long way to go." The department is also working to improve the quality of instruction and the overall student experience.

Lack of facilities

Another problem is the lack of facilities. "We don't have enough space to accommodate all of our students," said one faculty member. "But we're working to address this problem." The department is working with other departments to develop solutions to this problem.

Conclusion

In conclusion, the department is working to address a number of problems. "We're working to develop solutions to these problems," said one faculty member. "But we have a long way to go." The department is committed to improving the quality of instruction and the overall student experience.

Marist sports: year in review

By Tom McTernan

The 1976-1977 athletic season was a banner year for Marist College. The athletic department achieved a number of successes and the Marist Red Foxes continued to be a strong and competitive team.

The highlight of the season was the women's basketball team, which advanced to the NCAA Division II championship game. The team was coached by Pam Cullum and led by senior co-captains Liz Arthurs and Sue Breslin. The Red Foxes finished the season with a 22-8 record and were named the NCAA Division II Women's Basketball Champions.

The men's basketball team also had a successful season, finishing with a 19-9 record. The team was coached by John Smith and led by senior co-captain Mike Cullum. The Red Foxes advanced to the NCAA Division II Championship Final Four and lost to the University of Akron.

The men's soccer team had a disappointing season, finishing with a 5-14-3 record. The team was coached by John Smith and led by senior co-captain Mike Cullum. The Red Foxes were unable to advance to the NCAA Division II Championship.

The women's volleyball team had a successful season, finishing with a 25-5 record. The team was coached by Pam Cullum and led by senior co-captains Liz Arthurs and Sue Breslin. The Red Foxes advanced to the NCAA Division II Championship Final Four and lost to the University of Akron.

ZENONE NAITZA NAMED ATHLETE OF THE YEAR

Zenone Naitza, the greatest goal scorer in Marist soccer history as a sophomore, was selected as the CIRCLE's third annual Athlete of the Year Tuesday by a panel of coaches and sportswriters.

Naitza, an Italian native, scored 25 goals and 6 assists last fall in leading Marist to a 14-3-1 record and the ECC Regional tournament championship. He was selected to the CACC All-Stars and to the first team all-state, the first Marist player ever so honored.

Moving indoors this winter, Zenone continued his incredible scoring feats with five goals and the MVP in the RPI Tournament which Marist won.

Tenisaw McGraw was the award winner last year, while Joe Cirens was the first recipient in 1975.

INTRAMURAL STARS ROMP

Led by the fast breaking of Keith Yearwood and the inside dominance of Richie Crump, the Intramural All-Stars demolished a team from the Cultural Center 8-1 Wednesday and won their first basketball game to be played in the McCann Recreation Center.

Marist controlled the contest with relative ease, pouring in 8 goals in the first half and 1 in the second. Yearwood scored 3 of his game-high 13 points in the first half, mostly as a result of fast breaks.

Crump, who finished with 10 points, came on the bench in the second half and electrified the crowd with several block shots, a slam dunk and an offensive goal-tying basket.

Next in scoring in the Marist was Kevin Gergoity with eight points, followed by Ed DeFalvala, Greg Giles, Chip Ehrhardt and "Doc" Morrison with six points apiece.

The game was organized by the Champlagnire House Council and all proceeds went to the Dutchess County Home for the Aged.

VARIETY LIGHTWEIGHTS NAMED ATHLETES OF THE WEEK

The variety lightweight crew has been named Marist College Athlete of the Week for the week ending yesterday but has not been honored by the regular campus press yesterday, but continued showers have rendered the fields virtually unrowable.

The Marist men's lightweight "rainout," "Glory's Boys" continued to pace the West with a 5-4 record, including a 2-4 decision over the "Ace Heads" last Sunday.

The big guns in the West, however, have been "Bond's Boys," who exploded for 33 runs last week in consecutive wins over the "Ace Heads" (2-3) and "Erin Roses" (12-5), for a 4-2 record.

In the East, the "Wallkays" (5-4) have opened up a two-game lead despite a 3-6 loss to the "Banjous" on Friday. The "Banjous," "Erin Roses," "Ace Heads," and Duling Services were all in contention for the fourth and final playoff spot before Wednesday's action.

INTRAMURAL ROUNDUP

The semifinal round of the floor hockey playoffs was held last night with the winners advancing to tonight's championship game at 8 p.m. in the old gym. The "Mission Killers" in the East and "Dark Horse" in the West had already clinched spots in the semifinals. In contention for the other spots were: "Learn to Lose," "Curley's Crew," and "4 Crew.

A special congratulations to "Third Time Around," which repeated as volleyball champions with a 124-57 victory over "Mike's" on Wednesday. The 129-81 defeat of the "Arabians" and "Belarus," "Roum Slawolf," Gary Glass, Deena Korea, Jay Metzger, John Vandervoort, Lynne Fee, John Covel, Nei Lajennusene, and "The Gentlemen".

NOTES FROM THE SPORTS DESK:

Jerry Schubler and Bob Cofal were elected last Thursday as co-captains of the 1977 cross-country team. At that meeting the team also voted on its goals for the upcoming season, a list which includes: a top ten finish in the NCAA Championships, first place in the SMU Invitational and completion of at least 50 miles this summer by every member of the team.

With the new gymnastic equipment delivered to the McCann Center, the Gynastic Club is in the process of becoming an official sport. The first meeting of the group will be held tonight at 7 p.m. in Campus Center, Room 369.

All men or women who have any interest in the sport are urged to attend. No previous experience or expertise necessary.

THE FINAL NOTE:

As my term as CIRCLE sports editor draws to a close with this final column, I've decided to dedicate this line to all those individuals who have assisted in any way with our sports coverage over the course of the year.

To all of you, all others that I have failed to mention, I want to express my deepest appreciation.

Finally, congratulations to the entire Marist community on the opening of the McCann Center and good luck.
