Cigarettes leave Marist in a puff
by Paul O'Sullivan

Concern over health and fitness prompted the administration to kick the habit of cigarette sales on campus, according to Marist officials.

The decision, made this summer by the president's Cabinet, called for the removal of cigarette vending machines at the Campus Center, Champlain Hall and other locations. The machines were located in Marist East and Donnelly South, at the request of adult students.

In addition, cigarettes are no longer available at the Sweet Shoppe, located in the Activities Center. Coin-operated cigarettes are still sold at the Marist College Bookstore. However, "we too will be phased out in the long run," according to the vice president of student affairs, Pete Cox, vice president for student affairs.

"This is clearly a health and welfare issue. All evidence shows that smoking is injurious to individual health."

Peter Cox, assistant dean of student affairs, estimated that 65 to 70 percent of the Marist community does not smoke, but he stressed the decision to discontinue the sale of cigarettes was made out of a concern for fitness and not a desire to bend to majority rule.

Economically, the decision will have little effect. Marist received only a 15 percent commission on the machines. The machines, which were not very popular, were brought in and maintained by an outside vendor, said Cox.

"The removal of cigarette machines was part of a larger plan to bring in vending machines that promote good health and nutrition. We're trying to make the machines more health-oriented by banning junk food available," said Cox.

Both Cox and Campinelli noted that students may encourage good health, said Gerard Campinelli, assistant dean of student affairs.

Low profile has CSL concerned
by Karen Goettler

Student Body President Jeff Ferony said one of his goals for the year is to let other organizations on campus know what the Student Leaders has as issues of concern.

"Students don't know we exist and we hope they do not bring their problems to the CSL," he said.

CSL is made up of the presidents of Student Academic Committee, Resident Student Council, Curriculum Council, College Union Board and the Student Body, according to Ferony.

This year will be considered the highest governing body over the major student organizations and Ferony said one of his duties as Student Body president is to set the charter of the CSL.

Ferony, a junior from Marlborough, Conn., is beginning his second year as Student Body president. His experience with basic procedures last year will increase his efficiency, allowing him to concentrate more on issues that concern students this year.

One of Ferony's duties is to act as students representatives on the college administration, including the board of trustees.

Ferony said once a month he attends a board of trustees meeting with all of the college administrators and acts as a

Few students tune in to the Great Debate
by Dave Martin

While millions of Americans viewed the Great Debate Sunday night, an informal College survey showed that the Student Leaders were tuned in to watch the presidential candidates.

There were some reports of students watching scattered throughout campus, but a walk through the dorms Sunday evening showed few students watching in the first debate of what may be their last year.

A survey of the lounges in Lebo, Shea and Champlain halls during the debate showed no televisions turned on to the presidential candidates. One television in a Champlain lounge was set to the right channel, but no one was there to watch it.

Of the students who did see Republican candidate George Bush and Democratic candidate Michael Dukakis debate, most agreed neither candidate came out the clear winner.

"They both made their points and stated what they believed in," said sophomore Mike Larkis, a registered Democrat from West Hartford, Conn. "But I tend to agree with what Dukakis stands for. He goes for the working man and the family. Bush goes for Big Business."

Interns hit road to sell a college
by Michael Hayes

Marist students are representing the college on a tour of more than 500 high schools and college fairs in the Northeast in an admissions intern program.

Admissions interns are responsible for making appointments and reservations, managing a budget and traveling a lot.

"You can't compare the level of responsibility an internship here to just about any other internship that is available. They're really doing a good job and it's a tough one. They're a big part of our recruitment strategy," said Chris Delgiglio, assistant director of admissions and former admissions intern.

Seniors Jennifer Clements, Maureen Smith, Louis Rego and Florence Floor are admissions interns this year. Each will receive $2,300, a car, an unlimited expense account and 15 elective credits.

While this is an attractive internship, the interns agree that they are doing it for the experience.

"You're representing the college in a professional way," said Delgiglio. "People look at you as a professional while you're still a student. I thought that was really attractive."

"I figured it would be something great to put on my resume," said Floor. "It would show that I'm responsible."

The intern leave Marist each Sunday and return on Friday after visiting places such as Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Long Island and the New England region. Once or twice a month they will spend a week at Marist working in the Admissions Office giving tours or doing paperwork, said Delgiglio.

Although this is the first week the interns will be on the road, they have been preparing for three weeks by meeting with department heads and other Marist staff.

Throughout this period the interns were required to meet daily from 8:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m., far more time than the average 15 credit student spends in class.

To become an admissions intern the student must submit a resume and cover letter, must be a junior or senior and have good communication skills, said Delgiglio.

"It's the kind of internship where you really have to love your product and our product is Marist College."

made each other look like fools. They were immature," said sophomore Dan Bowman.

One freshman said he and his friends noticed a big difference in Bush and Dukakis' delivery. Bush had his head tilted and was looking at the panel. Dukakis looked directly into the camera. "I think that will be a factor in influencing the American people — maybe not directly, but it will have some influence," said Tom Morgan from Madison, N.J.

Some students said the quips exchanged between candidates proved the candidates were avoiding the questions and somewhat denying Socialite Pete Hayland, a registered Republican from Farmington, Conn., said despite past mistakes, the overall record of the present administration is proof enough that Bush will make the better president.

"He answered the questions directly and I agree with what he stands for," Hayland said. "If we have Dukakis as president, he'll ruin the fabric and the backbone of our nation."

A registered Democrat from Staten Island, N.Y. said although Dukakis talked too much about his family's immigration background, both candidates evaded too many questions. "I thought they both continued on page 2

There has been no feedback from members regarding the nicotine removal. Students were not consulted when the decision was made.

Communication between students and the administration is much improved, according to Phung. "People actually expect us to be able to discuss things between the two groups." Phung said that she and her team have been working hard to improve communication between students and the administration.

"People want to be able to talk to the administration," Phung said. "It’s important for the administration to understand the students’ perspective and for the students to understand the administration’s perspective. Communication is key to creating a successful and harmonious environment." Phung emphasized that the administration is committed to listening to the students and working with them to find solutions to any issues that may arise.

Little attention was given to the issue before the vote was held. Many students felt that the decision should have been made sooner, and that more attention should be given to it now.

Little change will be made in the amount of cigarettes sold on campus. The number of cigarettes sold will remain the same.

New teacher recalls Third World
by Karen Germs
By her junior year at The College of St. Rose, Germs had already taught English as a volunteer for Medical Teams International. She recently graduated from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. Germs said that her desire to help others started at the age of 21, when she went to Indonesia where she became a volunteer for Medical Teams International. Germs was blown away by the way in which medical care was provided in Indonesia.

Through her teaching at U of I, Germs said that she learned to be more open-minded and to be more accepting of different cultures.

Thailand was one of the places where Germs had taught and she said that she really enjoyed her time there. Germs said that she had a great time helping others and that it was a very rewarding experience for her.
College attempts new program to curb campus alcohol problem

The college will step up efforts to combat student drinking problems on campus by offering an educational program designed to teach students how to recognize the problems, according to college officials.

The program, proposed last year and now an organized effort, will be directed towards students facing a second degree offense.

"The expectation is that students caught drinking will be referred to the program," said Robert Sprague, director of the Student Affairs Office. "The program is designed to help students understand the consequences of their actions and to help them change their behavior.

"The purpose of the program is to provide a structured way for students to address their drinking issues," Sprague said. "It is not a惩罚性的 measure; it is an educational approach.

The program will include workshops, counseling, and peer support. Students will be required to participate in at least three sessions, and they will be monitored for progress.

"Our goal is to help students make positive changes in their lives," Sprague said. "We want to empower them to take control of their drinking and to make better decisions.

"The program is based on the idea that students can learn from their mistakes and move forward. We believe that education is the key to addressing alcohol problems on campus.

The program is currently under development, and it is expected to be launched in the fall semester.

For once, Brits play it straight at debate
by Chris Landry

When the Majlis debate team faced the British national debate team in its annual exhibition, the crowd was surprised by its calm, measured, and respectful approach. The Majlis team was led by Tanya, a senior who was a member of the team for four years. She was known for her quick wit and ability to come up with creative and relevant examples.

"I think it was a great opportunity to showcase our debating skills," Tanya said. "It was a unique experience, and I'm glad we got to participate.

"Our team is always looking for ways to improve, and we're excited to see what we can learn from the British team.

"Overall, we had a great experience, and we're looking forward to future debates.

College attempts new program to curb campus alcohol problem

The college will step up its efforts to reduce alcohol-related problems on campus by offering an educational program designed to teach students the consequences of drinking, according to college officials.

The program, proposed last year, has received support from administrators, faculty, and students. It will be directed toward students facing a second alcohol offense.

"The expectation is that students found guilty of drinking can benefit from the counseling," said Andrew Rapacked, commuter director of the Alcoholics Anonymous, a nonprofit organization that offers counseling to help students who are alcoholics.

"We're hoping to change the way students look at alcohol. We want them to see it as a problem that they need to address," said Rapacked.

The program will include educational workshops, counseling sessions, and a support group for students who are struggling with alcoholism.

"The goal is to help students understand the impact of alcohol on their lives," said Rapacked. "We want them to realize that they're not alone in this struggle."

Cantley's tales: Is this life worth living?

by Wes Cantley

I don't want to be anybody but me. I've always been that way. I've never been a conformist, never wanted to be another person. I've always been myself, and I'm proud of that. I'm not ashamed of my differences, not afraid of being different. I'm just me, and I'm happy with that.

It's not that I don't want to be loved, or that I don't want to be accepted. I just want to be myself. I can't be anyone else, I'm just not capable of it. I can't force myself to be someone else, it's just not who I am. I have to be true to myself, and I know that I can't do that if I try to be someone else.

I'm not saying that everyone should be like me, that everyone should be different. I'm just saying that I don't want to be anyone else. I want to be me, and I'm not going to change for anyone.

I'm not saying that life is easy, that it's always going to be fun. I'm just saying that I don't want to be anyone else. I want to be me, and I'm not going to change for anyone.

I'm not saying that everyone should be like me, that everyone should be different. I'm just saying that I don't want to be anyone else. I want to be me, and I'm not going to change for anyone.

The right to vote

On Sunday night, George Bush and Michael Dukakis squared off in their first debate, one that is likely to shape the American voting public. In fact, many of the voters who are participating in this election are not even American citizens. Across the globe, people are being suppressed by governments that have been found to be unfair. Yet their right to vote, which is enshrined in the American Constitution, is a fundamental right that we should all be fighting for.

Job students

To the editor:

Governor Mario Cuomo has proclaimed the week of September 26-30 as "Job Awareness Week." In an effort to promote job readiness among students, several workshops and seminars have been scheduled throughout the week.

The workshops will cover topics such as resume writing, interviewing techniques, and job search strategies. In addition, there will be guest speakers from various industries who will share their personal experiences and insights into the job search process.

For more information, please contact your career center or visit the Office of Career Services. Thank you for your cooperation and understanding.

Sincerely,

Students tell tales of learning, fun overseas

by Carrie Boye

Taking good-by is never easy, said Maria Avila at a news conference with the rest of her classmates who are leaving Texas Tech in two weeks for a year in Germany.

"I think that the best part of this trip is that we get to live in a different culture, and learn about the history of the country," she said.

Carlos Rodriguez, another student from Texas Tech, said that he is looking forward to meeting new people and experiencing new things.

"I think that the best part of this trip is that we get to live in a different culture, and learn about the history of the country," he said.

Mike Martinez, a student from Rice University, said that he is excited to see the sights and sounds of Berlin.

No. 9 Adelphi blanks booters

by Ken Foye

The Marist College soccer team is getting a lot of bad bounces lately.

The Red Foxes, 1-5 overall and 0-3 in the Northeast Conference, lost a non-conference game to nationally-ranked Adelphi last Saturday. It was the Red Foxes' fourth consecutive loss.

The results of Tuesday's game against Fordham were unavailable at press time. The Red Foxes' next game is Saturday at Oneonta State at 1 p.m.

In Northeast Conference news, St. Francis (N.Y.) was declared ineligible for any postseason play because the college did not field the required six women's teams during the past academic year, said Bob Steffen, head cheerleader of the Northeast Conference.

Because the Terriers are ineligible for postseason play, games they play against conference opponents will not be included in the conference standings, according to Steffen. The ruling applies to all sports, not just soccer.

Since Marist is ineligible for postseason basketball play, six of the seven remaining conference teams will qualify for the conference tournament in March, to determine which team will get a bid to the NCAA tournament.

In the Adelphi game -- as in Marist's previous games, a 3-1 loss to Robert Morris -- the Red Foxes played well, but their opponents just played better, said coach Howard Goldman.

"We had a good day, but they had a better one," Goldman said. "For a while it was anybody's game, but they scored their first goal (in the first half) and that helped their confidence.

Adelphi was ranked ninth in the country going into the game.

Goldman said that freshman defender Phil O'Hara was Marist's standout player against Adelphi. O'Hara, who stands 5 feet, 8 inches tall and weighs 140 pounds was outstanding marking Adelphi's top scorer, Diane Robinson. Robinson, however, managed one of Adelphi's two goals.

Offensively, the Red Foxes continued their season-long scoring drought.

Marist has scored more than one goal in a game only once this season -- in their only victory of the season, a 2-1 win over Fairfield on Sept. 8.

A Marist's next conference game will be against Loyola on Oct. 15. Loyola earned a berth in the NCAA tournament last season. After that game, the Red Foxes' only other conference game will be against Long Island University on Oct. 26. LIU also made the tournament last season. Both games are away.

Crew opens with strong showing at Head of Hudson

by Tim Beuser

The crew team rowed its way to first, second and fourth place finishers at the Head of the Hudson Regatta last Saturday at Albany.

The 3.3-mile course in 19:45 to take the first place in 19:45 to take the first place by more than two minutes over Community Rowing of Boston, one of the few coasts who participated in the regatta.

The Red Foxes boat of (how to stare) Cathy Pazzino, Mary Beth Wood, Jessie Valette, Elizabeth Murphy, Ed Fluidi, Mike Longo, John Andreassen and Jay Murray finished the course in 21:56, compared to Community Rowing's 21:57. SUNY Albany's boats placed third and fourth. Skullscree was fifth.

The four men in the boat had just finished rowing the men's eight when they went on a normal break before the mixed race. They did not even have a chance to get out of the boat, something that concerned coach Laura Cross.

"They were on the water two hours due to an equipment problem waiting for the first race," said Davis. "They just came to the dock and the four women got in. Then they had to wait another hour to start that race. It is like sitting on a bench for three hours, not to mention rowing two three-mile distances.

The team started in the back of the pack and worked their way up to the lead, winning going away, said Davis.

The women's eight, composed of (how to stare) Pazzino, Wood, Murphy, Karen Groves, Yvonne Hendrick, Kellie Martin, Valente and Sarah Brown and coxswain Rachel Farrar, beat all the boat teams, losing only to Community Rowing. Community turned in a time of 20:42, followed by Marist (21:00), Ithaca (21:06), Skullscree (21:28) and SUNY Albany (21:32).

"It is the first time we beat Ithaca in the heavyweight eight at 10 years," said Davis. "We beat them last year. They did a good job and didn't beat their first boat. We beat them by a fair margin. Ten seconds is third-four boat margin.

Ithaca won the women's eight in 19:45, followed by Skullscree (20:03), Ithaca (20:04), Marist (20:18) and SUNY Albany (20:59).

The team (of how to steer) Ed Miller, Ryan Applique, Rob Jeanne, Bob Hunt, Fluidi, Longo, Anh studying at Calabaroso is like the other teams, they perform a little better than they were expected to, said Davis.

The team is tentatively scheduled to compete Oct. 15 at Long Beach, N.Y., in the Head of the Long Island Regatta.

Ceriello keeps women running

by Kevin St. Onge

She was sitting on the curb in front of the Mico Center, wearing running shoes and shorts, talking to members of the women's cross country team. She could have passed for a junior or senior runner, but one thing set her apart from the other girls sitting on the curb, she's especially (Darryl) Strawberry but he'll probably be a runner like his parents," she said.

Billy's mother is Maryanne Ceriello, the new coach of the Lady Fox cross country team. Ceriello came to the team a week into the season but the late start has not dampened her enthusiasm.

"We have a young team with three freshmen and only one senior, but the girls know they will be competitive every week so they can relax and simply perform to the best of their ability," Ceriello said.

The Ceriello family is quite active. Maryanne's husband Ken, who was recruited by Ceriello's cross country coach Rich Stevens some 10 years ago, Maryanne is a fitness supervisor across Rout 9 at All Sport Health and Fitness. Ceriello comes to Marist by way of Cortland State, where he ran track and majored in physical education.

"In high school I was more of a sprinter but in college, I started running longer distances for the fitness aspect of the activity and that has carried over into my everyday life up at All Sport."

"When Pam had the opportunity to coach at West Point, and the Marist position opened up, I said, 'why not?' said Ceriello. "I reached high school of a 96 runner in years in the Syracuse area and the last thing I wanted to do on level sounded appealing.

"College runners are fun people to be around. The girls are here because they love the sport and they want to improve themselves. My position as coach is to provide them with the proper training to do just that,"" Ceriello said.

Harriers win another King's Invitational

by Kevin St. Onge

The running Red Foxes have scored a 26 and 2 record after only three meets, defeating 13 teams including St. Peter's College, while the lady Foxes entered two runners at the King's Invitational meet, Saturday.

Winning the King's Invitational has become a tradition for Marist as the Foxes ran away with first place for the third year running.

Plagued by sickness and previous commitments, the women bracketed a team of two runners. Senior, Trish Webster placed 14th with a time of 20 minutes, 11 seconds. Her freshman runningmate, Megan Bell, covered the 3.1 mile course in 21:32.

Women's coach, Maryanne Ceriello, was pleased with their effort. "Running without a team is tough but Trish and Megan impressed me with their determination, Megan and I set a goal of cutting her time by twenty seconds and she shaved 22 off her previous best."

What was expected to be a very close meet against rival St. Peter's was turned out to be a convincing victory for the men. After the men's races, the two teams faced off for the third time as many weeks and the Foxes downed St. Peter's by 41.

Scott Kendall again led a determined Marist squad, placing sixth in 27:06. Coach Rich Stevens last week predicted the return of Peter Antis to the varsity lineup would impact the race, and he was right as Antis placed a solid 10th in 27:51.

Freshman Shane Fidgeon's first effort coming off the injury list was impressive with a first place show-while sophomores Mike Coakley and Mike Sammon were hampered by soreness as he finished 37th but with a respectable time of 28:56.

In the 18-place field in the top 50 of a 96 runner field. The next meet is October 22, at the Lenoyse Invitational. Race time is noon.
