Alarms, lines mar registration
by Maureen Kerr

After fire drills, long lines and closed classes marred registration this week, Marist officials admit weaknesses in the system and will try to improve it for next semester.

Registrar Judy Ivanovic said crowding, partly caused by fire drills, was the biggest problem with the new registration process that ended yesterday.

Each night of the 11-day registration, the lines formed earlier than 100 freshmen camped outside of the Lowell Thomas Communications Center in the wee hours of a frigid Tuesday morning.

"Security let the students in Lowell Thomas at 3:20 a.m., two hours before it said it was going to. To complicate matters, two fire alarms went off last week and some students refused to abandon their place in line."

"In the beginning we thought the fire drill was humorous," said Ivanovic. "My assistant said to me, 'I thought we thought of everything.' After the second fire drill, we decided we had to do something."

When Ivanovic started giving tickets to students as they came in the door, fewer people were cut in line, she said.

However, Marist officials are looking into more long-term solutions.

This photo, taken by Lowell Thomas Jr., shows the Dalai Lama of Tibet at age 14. "Out of This World Retraced: Rare Photos of Lowell Thomas' 1949 epic journey to Tibet" will open Sunday in the Lowell Thomas Communications Center with a reception from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. The exhibit will be open until March.

Cold as ice: Freshmen M through Z
by Bill Johnson

Kevin Nelson showed up for class early at 11:15—quite a bit early.

It wasn't an 11:25 class Nelson was waiting for. It was Monday night, and Nelson, a freshman, was first in line to camp out outside the Lowell Thomas Communications Center to register for spring courses on Tuesday.

"I'm only the first of the freshmen M through P. Real or imagined, I think the availability of last-minute course offerings caused 700 of them to camp in near-arctic weather on the registration line, trying to be the first among the last to choose their classes.

Anticipating few course openings, the second half of the last group—students like Beth Williams and Chris Vaudel and Sara Wierzchonski said they didn't have the time, interest, or the desire to sign up."
March changes planned for Library

Student body may pay for Library's missing books

by Jennifer Becker

The system isn't as popular in the United States as it is in Canada, so it's not something that has been introduced here yet. The model will be introduced to more students and to other institutions in the future.

According to McGill, the system has been successful in other countries. It will allow students to save more and will help the library to save money.

The system will also provide students with the ability to choose the amount of their monthly payment and the type of books they want to read. The system will be introduced to more students in the future.

Student body may pay for Library's missing books

by Jennifer Becker

Marina students will be able to locate rare materials in the Library by using computers, as a result of the IBM Mainframe Study Program, "The problem is that the majority of the library's funds are tied up in the Mainframe, said Fox, a source from Bannanigage, R.I., a four-year-old IBM service bureau.

Many times students cannot find books or other material they need to complete their research. "In order to fix the problem, we must make the library more computerized," said Fox.

As a part of the IBM Mainframe Study Program, the Library will have to pay for the new computer. "This means that the Library will have to pay more for its annual budget," said Fox.

The new computer will be installed in the Library by the end of the year. "The computer will be able to locate rare materials in the library," said Fox.

In addition to the IBM Mainframe Study Program, the Library also has a plan to make the library more computerized. "The plan is to install a new computer network," said Fox.

The new computer network will allow students to locate rare materials in the Library by using computers. "This will make it easier for students to locate rare materials," said Fox.
Marist ups, downs: frost perspectives

by Des Johannesson

"The more things change, the more they stay the same," said Minnie the Mouse, and that's true about the expansion of Marist College. For the past 10 years, Marist has been on the move, and the change is never-ending. Overall, however, Marist remains the same, and that's a good thing.

The new campus of Marist College was also a big issue among students, who were excited and nervous about the change. Many students were concerned about the costs of the new campus, and whether or not their scholarships and loans would cover the new expenses.

"I'm excited about the new campus," said one student. "But I'm also nervous about the cost. I don't know if my scholarship will cover everything." Another student said, "I'm really excited about the new campus. It's going to be great." But others were more concerned about the costs.

The grand hoop season

by Wes Zabuta

The grand hoop season

There's a certain magical feeling in the air when you walk into the gym to see the Marist basketball team on the hardwood floor. The anticipation of the season is real, and you instantly understand that this is serious business.

The intramural competition and the games try to take open play to the next level. Marist has always been known for its intense competition, and this season is no different.

The students and faculty are both competitive, and the games are always exciting. The intramural competition is the big event, and it's always a great time.

Wes Zatkoff

It's a magical feeling. It's as if you wake up with a new heart. I feel like there are no boundaries, no limits, and no one can hold me back. I'm ready to take on the world and I can't wait to see what happens next.

There's a sense of excitement in the air, a feeling of anticipation. I can't help but feel like anything is possible. I'm ready to give my all and make this season one to remember.

The atmosphere is electric, the passion is palpable, and the energy is infectious. I'm ready to make this season one that I'll never forget.

The hoop season is here, and I'm ready to embrace it. I can't wait to see what challenges come my way and how I'll rise to the occasion.

Money, freedom pull students off campus

by Laurie Amode

Chris Purcell decided he had to get out of school a few weeks ago. The main reason was his desire to explore the world and all it has to offer. He had always wanted to do it, but now he felt like the time was right.

Some friends in the same boat as Chris got together and decided to start their own business. They had been planning this for a while, and now they finally had the freedom to do it.

Biting sarcasm migrates South

by Ed McCarthy

There are those who say that biting sarcasm is a south-of-the-border import, but I beg to differ. I might have been born in the Midwest, but I grew up in the South, and I've come to believe that biting sarcasm is a natural part of our social fabric.

It's often used as a way to deflect criticism or to express disdain for something. It's a way of saying "I don't agree with you," without actually saying it. It's a way of making a statement without making a statement.

Biting sarcasm is a form of communication, a way of expressing our feelings and opinions in a way that is both direct and indirect. It's a way of saying what we mean without saying what we mean.

Biting sarcasm is a reflection of the South's complex social fabric, a way of dealing with the challenges of living in a place that is simultaneously welcoming and judgmental. It's a way of expressing our feelings and opinions in a way that is both direct and indirect. It's a way of saying what we mean without saying what we mean.

Dubliners question much America knows about education

Whether it's to avoid the box, in which you say that you are looking for employment, or because you are afraid of losing the set for a week, you may be tempted to lie about your age when applying for a job. However, it's important to remember that lying about your age can have serious consequences for your future career. If caught, you may be fired from your current job or even be denied employment altogether. It's always better to be honest and to disclose your true age. It's the only way to ensure that you are treated fairly and given the opportunities you deserve. So, the next time you find yourself wanting to lie about your age, think twice before you do. After all, honesty is the best policy.
Justice and Iran-contra continue to be strangers

By Thomas E. Patterson

To many people's surprise, it would appear that the Iran-contra scandal is quietly coming to a close. The reasons for this are not immediately apparent. However, some observers suggest that the scandal is quietly coming to a close. They point to the fact that journalists and scholars have largely abandoned the investigation. Additionally, recall that the scandal is quietly coming to a close. Thomas E. Patterson is The Circle's political columnist.

People who try to live closer to their grocery stores, for example, are often considered "environmentally friendly." But the term "environmentally friendly" can mean different things to different people. Some people might think of it as living in a house that is built to withstand the elements, while others might think of it as using renewable energy sources.

Intramurals may receive new schedule

In the fall of 1989, the Marist College Intramural program was expanded to include a new schedule for the spring of 1990.

The new schedule will be implemented on the basis of the following guidelines:

- All intramural games will be held on the College campus, on the dates specified in the schedule.
- All intramural games will be open to all students, regardless of their affiliation with any particular sport or team.
- All intramural games will be played according to the rules and regulations of the Marist College Intramural program.
- All intramural games will be scheduled on a weekly basis, with games being held on a consistent basis for the duration of the semester.

The new schedule will allow for a greater number of students to participate in intramural activities, as well as provide a more structured and organized approach to the intramural program.

The Office of Residence Life has been conducting a survey of residential halls and has been receiving feedback from students. The survey has been conducted by the Office of Residence Life and has been aimed at improving the living environment for students.

Survey results have been used to help improve the living environment for students and to identify areas for improvement.

The survey results have been used to identify areas for improvement, including:

- Improving communication between students and their hall staff.
- Providing more opportunities for students to socialize and interact with each other.
- Creating a more welcoming and inclusive environment for all students.
- Ensuring that all students have access to essential amenities, such as quiet study areas and lounges.
- Providing more opportunities for students to participate in extracurricular activities and clubs.

The survey results have been used to help improve the living environment for students and to identify areas for improvement.

Lady Cagers at .500 mark

In the annual meeting of the Lady Cagers, the Marist College women's basketball team, it was announced that the team has achieved a .500 record for the first time in its history.

The Lady Cagers are a group of women who play basketball at Marist College. The team has been playing at the College since 1980 and has been led by coach Mary Cimaglio. The team has been successful in recent years, with several players achieving All-Conference and All-Region honors.

The team has been working hard to achieve its .500 record. The players have been practicing every day, and the coaching staff has been working closely with the players to help them improve their skills.

The Lady Cagers are looking forward to the rest of the season and hope to continue their success.

Cagers open with three wins
Men net runner-up spot in Hartford Hawks tourney

by Mike O'Farrell

HARTFORD, Conn. — Four losses to open the season, some may be surprised that the men's basketball team's record stands at 3-1. But this group believes in themselves and are trying to show that the Hawks are capable of playing," said senior guard Joe O'Connor.

After opening the season with two wins in men's basketball games at the Carrier Dome, the Red Foxes traveled to Hartford, Conn., where they took part in the Hartford Hawks Unlimited Tournament. In the opening game of the tournament, Marist defeated the Drexel Dragons in what may have been the most exciting game of the entire tournament.

A balanced attack and tremendous defense allowed the Red Foxes to come away with a 74-72 overtime victory. Senior guard Joe O'Connor connected on an off-balance baseline jumper as time expired to give the Red Foxes their third straight victory of the year. That win raised the Foxes' record to 3-0 -- equaling the best start ever by a Marist team dating back to the 1987-88 season.

Marist was led by three points at the half, limiting Drexel's scoring sensation Todd Lehman to just seven points.

However, Lehman finished the game with 29 points — scoring 27 points in the second half -- connecting on seven of his eight three-point attempts.

Andy Lake hit a three-point basket from the corner with just 31 seconds remaining to put Marist up by three. However, Lehman came right back at the other end and fed the game to a 3-pointer of his own.

Lehman began the overtime period with another three-pointer. Continued on page 11

‘Classic’ returning following absence

by Mike O'Farrell

After a two-year absence, the Pepsi-Marist Classic will return to the McCann Center at the University of Vermont, Columbia University and Howard University will join Marist in the quest for the championship.

Marist, which is hosting the tournament for the fourth year, has never lost the championship.

The first game, which starts at 6:00 p.m., has the Bison from Howard up against the Columbia University Lions.

Competing in the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference, Howard compiled a record of 9-19 overall last season. The top returner for the Bison is Skip Bynum. Bynum, a 6-foot-2-inch junior guard, averaged 13.7 points per game last year.

Howard also has juniors Tyrone Powell and Guy Owens back from last year's squad. Powell and Owens averaged 12.3 and 12 points per game, respectively.

The Lions, representing the Ivy League, finished 8-18 overall while going 4-10 against conference foes.

Playing out of the North Atlantic Conference, the Vermont Catamounts will be the opening round foe for Marist. The game will begin at 8:00 p.m. at the University of Vermont, Vermont compiled a record of 6-21 last season while compiling a conference record of 2-9.

Kenny White, a sophomore guard, is the leading returning player for Coach Tom Brennan. White averaged 11.2 points per game last year.

Kevin Robertson is the leading front court player returning for this year.

Marist comes into the tournament sporting a 3-1 record.

Marist is the favorite on paper, yet coach Dave Magarity is not overlooking their tournament foes.

"We've got competent," Magarity said. "We need to take one step at a time. We believe in ourselves."

The action begins Friday night at 6:00 p.m. and 8:00 p.m. The losing teams from the opening round will play on Saturday night at 6:00 p.m. in the consolation game and the winners will meet in the championship game at 8:00 p.m.

Marist basketball — who would have thought...

Well, four games into the season and the men's basketball team is 3-1. Surprised? Who would have thought that after creating Division II Mount St. Vincent and the Red Foxes would come out and upset George Mason and Drexel before losing to the University of Hartford — a game which Marist had plenty of chances to win.

Many people had thought that at this point of the season, the Foxes would be 1-3 going into the Pepsi-

Marist Classic.

Of course coming out of the Classic, the same people figured Marist would have a win or two as a tournament and as a result, don't invite the most powerful teams to participate.

But Marist have to make it to do it.

At the Hartford Hawks Unlimited Tournament last weekend, the University of Hartford at least received some competition. Continued on page 11

Marist basketball — who would have thought...

It is 4:30 p.m. and the McCann Center Gymnasium is filled with men in shorts and tee-shirts excited and talking about the game.

Basketballs are being passed from one person to another and the hummed air is filled with buzzers sounding and rubber sole sneaker squeaking on the wooden floor.

Five of these athletes suffer an injury, just 25 feet away is a haven of whirlpools, sausages, and Head Athletic Trainer Glenn Marinielli.

Marinielli, in his sixth year as Marist's trainer, helping students and athletes rehabilitate their sports-related injuries.

Marinielli, a 32-year-old former Notre Dame basketball athlete, started his basketball training almost by accident.

"I was injured when I was in high school and the injury wasn't too bad," he said. "After that a friend of mine who was in the training program at Springfield College and I thought it sounded interesting. So I applied and..."

Glenn Marinielli applied, I got accepted, and he didn't."--After getting his bachelor's degree at the University of Virginia, he could make athletic training a career.

"I really enjoy this job," he said. "I'm not at a desk from 9-5 and I get to run out on the field with the coaches and see about the players. For me, it really gets a job as a caring for the athletes as fur as their injuries go is probably the biggest thing we do."

"Just being able to treat them when injuries happen or preventing them before they happen. Preventive, is the thing we like to do."

The existing training room, which looks like a corner bunter directly offset from the main hallway, is about 150 square feet. From last summer and the newness is simplified by the smell of fresh paint which had just been applied last month.

"To get the room functional so we could move into it -- the plumbing, the electrical work, the office being built, the carpet, the tile floor - it costs about $7,000, but it is needed to be done," Marinielli said.

Marinielli almost looks like a student himself, as his sits comfortably in his environment.

"Glenn treats everyone the same," Brian Ierardi. "He has a really good rapport with kids this age because he doesn't look down on them."

Lake job is deep jeopardy.

In the first round Friday night, the Red Foxes face the Vermont Catamounts. Last season the Catamounts were 6-21.

Nothing wrong with that. The Aggies want to reach the championship game and probably could win a game on the floor. In the championship game, Marist will face either the Columbia Lions or the Northwestern Wildcats.

Columbia, who's basketball team has not had much success than the football team, was 8-8 last season and finished in seventh place in the less than powerful Ivy League.

Howard is probably the best team visiting Poughkeepsie this weekend and they were 9-19 last year.

But looking down the Bison schedule, their record is justified by the tough schedule they play.

Losing to Bowie State, Fayetteville State, Wright State, Bethune-Cookman and Coppin State will take its toll on any team.

The Red Foxes do not appear to have the toughest weekend ahead of them. Sure, perhaps an early Christmas gift."

"Some may wonder how the following fits in a sports column, but the obvious connection to Marist basketball is the justification. It may not seem like much to most people at Marist but that's probably because no one could notice.

With the exception of part of the WMCR, not too many people noticed that Marist had its own radio station at the Hartford Civic Center to broadcast the Red Foxes' two games there.

The University of Hartford was the only other school that sent its station to the games. But being at home, it was not that far of a travel.

Neither Drexel or Brown brought three stations — making Marist's presence on press row rather impressive.

It was the first time the station had done a live broadcast of that sort from outside the McCann Center.

Sure, it's great to have an on-campus station that jams and rocks, but when people can not listen because of the time and effort involved in figuring out a radio, it is a shame and takes some of the importance out of a landmark program like that.

In the future, it would be great to see the entire Marist community — including those off campus and in Canterbury — able to hear the game at the Hartford Civic Center.
