After Dyson, new dorm is next

by TOM KELLY
Staff Writer

Remedying the housing shortage on campus by building a new residence hall is the administration's next construction priority now that the Charles Dyson Center is complete, according to college officials.

However, it may take as long as six months to one year before construction plans are approved, according to Mark Sullivan, executive vice president.

"It would not be before the fall of 1992 or the fall of 1993 that the building would be ready," he said.

Sullivan said he expects the project to be delayed until an environmental assessment has been conducted.

The residence hall project was temporarily delayed when the administration chose not to renew the lease for Marist East and the need for classroom space demanded the construction of the Dyson Center.

"Certainly the need is great and has not changed at all," said Mark Sullivan, executive vice president.

"If anything it has become more acute."

The proposed residence hall will be a nine-story building located behind Champlain Hall. It is expected to house 400 to 450 students in suite-type arrangements.

The cost of the project remains unclear. But original projections placed it at $10.1 million. That figure is expected to increase because it was projected two years ago.

The housing shortage has continued to force many students to seek off-campus accommodations or to reside at the Canterbury Garden Apartments six miles from campus.

Three seniors investing $25,000 for business independent study

by JENNIFER MC LAUGHLIN
Staff Writer

Three seniors have been chosen to participate in an independent study that entails the investment of $25,000 in the stock market.

The money, which is part of the college's endowment, was granted by President Dennis J. Murray and the Board of Trustees, and will be managed and maintained by these seniors as a student/collar portfolio, according to Dr. Chet Kobos, faculty advisor of the project.

Kobos, assistant professor of business, developed the idea for this independent study, and chose seniors John DiPalo, Beth Prescia, and Peter Nustrad to invest the $25,000.

The money, over which a broker has control, is currently in money market accounts, and the students are studying the Wall Street Journal, Investor's Daily, Barron's, Value Line and annual reports from different companies to research the market carefully.

"Right now we are concentrating on pharmaceutical, environmental and natural gas common stock; and General Electric and IBM long-term stock," said Prescia, a native of Jamaica Estates, N.Y.

"These types of (long-term) stock are the base of the market, would show steady growth, and stay in the portfolio for a long time," she said.

Although the students meet with Kobos (twice a week, most of the work is done outside the meetings), DiPalo, Prescia, and Nustrad were chosen by Kobos because of their involvement in the Finance Club and their contribution to certain finance courses at the college, Kobos said.

"The economy is not doing that well so we have to be extra careful in what we buy, because there are no longer any sure things," said Nustrad, a native of Sea Cliff, N.Y.

Predicates, a group of data bases, is another tool being used in the analysis and research of different companies. It is effective for researching the project, since the information it provides is a maximum of three days old, according to the group.

The group has been using Predicates under the instruction of Kay Silberer, head reference librarian.

"I believe (the independent study) is going to help us in the future by giving us the hands-on experience of working in the financial industry," said DiPalo, a native of Bayside, N.Y., said.

The independent research is worth three credits over the entire school year.

CSL approves new clubs

The Council of Student Leaders (CSL) unanimously approved two new clubs during Tuesday's meeting: a recognized club on campus include writing cohnens by-laws, establishing an organized structure to govern the club and uphold the rules and regulations of the college, said Kevin Desmonld, chairman of CSL.

Desmond said the clubs would probably receive money for operating expenses, but just how much money is to be determined by the judicial board.

Marist students living off-campus in the City of Poughkeepsie are becoming increasingly concerned about their safety in the area, following a number of muggings, burglaries and an assault since July.

In the last six weeks alone, there has been one house burglary and three muggings.

Junior Matt Giaquinto was mugged on Sept. 5 at 1 a.m. while walking home from St. Patrick's, a bar on 107 Parker Ave.

Robert Colbert, a junior from West Warwick, R.I., was mugged on Sept. 23 at 12:30 a.m. on Main St., while walking to his house on Everett Avenue.

Six juniors living on Church Street have had their house broken into four times since July, the most recent in late August.

Giaquinto said he was followed and then surrounded by four youths, who made racial comments as they rammed through his pockets in search of his wallet.

Although he was not carrying his wallet, the youths locked his hands behind his back, kicked his feet out from underneath him and slammed his head on the sidewalk.

Giaquinto suffered three facial bruises and a broken nose. But he did not report the incident to the police because he said they failed to help him to his satisfaction last September, when he was mugged by a man who put a gun to his stomach.

He said he doesn't fear for his safety. "My worst fear was having my parents find out and pull me out of college," he said.

"I don't feel unsafe or vulnerable. I'm not worried coming into my apartment late at night just because I'm living off campus. There are certain areas college students have to stay away from," Giaquinto said.

When Colbert was mugged, he said one man hit him in the back of the head, while another held a knife to his throat and threatened to kill him.

The two men stole $8 and fled when a resident yelled out his name.

"It wasn't so much the money as the fear for my personal safety, I couldn't believe people just driving by without coming to my aid," Colbert said. "I just don't want to get involved."

For the six youths living on Church Street, four break-ins and the loss of a microwave, a radio, mini-refrigerator, plates, blankets, and beer signs from their apartment are all that remains.

A waterbed was also split open, causing water damage to the first floor. Dan DellPrete, one of the seniors, said police were contacted, but no one was caught.

You Shouldn't Have to Cramp on Your Way Home!

By SCOTT DALY

The flu season is here, and you shouldn't have to cramp on your way home. Here are some tips to help you stay healthy during the flu season:

1. Wash your hands frequently with soap and water.
2. Avoid close contact with people who are sick.
3. Avoid touching your eyes, nose, and mouth.
4. Stay home when you are sick.
5. Get vaccinated annually.

By staying healthy, you can reduce the risk of spreading the flu to others and protect yourself and your loved ones. Stay healthy and safe this flu season.

Grads come back to new Marist

by JIM SAVARD

After Memorial Day break, The Coke bottles that once were the mainstay for the football games, also appear on our campus. The school newspaper, "The Canon" is now in its final semester under the guidance of our new principal, Mrs. Mary Regina. The new principal, who started at the beginning of the current school year, has brought many new ideas and strategies to the school that have helped to improve the overall atmosphere on campus. "The new principal, who started at the beginning of the current school year, has brought many new ideas and strategies to the school that have helped to improve the overall atmosphere on campus."

Phillis, an experienced aromatherapist, says that when she entered Marist, and she continues to serve the campus by offering various events and workshops. "We often have students who come to me for stress relief or to improve their sleep patterns. They come to me for help with their mental and physical health."

"The whole campus looks great," said Phillis. "It's much cleaner and organized. The landscaping in Champagne and Drexel Walk is really impressive."

"I'm really happy with the changes that have been made," said Phillis. "I feel like I'm part of a community that is growing and changing for the better."

Phillis said she was glad she decided to stay on the campus to see the Lowell Thomas Boarding House and the former home of former Marist President M. Charles D. Curran receive renovations. "I was really impressed when I saw the changes being made," said Phillis. "I'm really looking forward to seeing the final result."
Grads come back to a new Marist

Senior weekend brought many back to their alma mater. It seemed one of the football games, others came to support friends of the alumni. Some came to reconnect.

Kennedy of Tarrytown, N.Y. was one of the returning alumni. He came back to remember the days when the student body culture was more active. "We need to bring back the old spirit," he said.

David Kim of Washington, D.C. was another returning alumni. "I want to reconnect with old friends," he said.

Philips, who recently went on vacation before attending Marist, and his switch to the campus is working.

"The whole campus looks great," he said. Philips, "I was in Lowell Thomas and I think it's really. It's a little bit cold in Champagne and DePaul, I'm really impressed.

Philips said he had wished he had chosen to drive in Marist and not go through the fog. "It's much better to be here," he said.

"Every Friday afternoon, every dorm would have a keg on the front lawn.

"The reason why I came back was to see my friends, and I have to say it was a lot of fun.

"The whole place looks great, it's a lot of fun," he said. "I wish I had known about Marist when I was a student." Philips said he was impressed with the look that Marist had before.

"It was not so highly regarded in the local area. We knew a lot of Marist students," he said.

"Every Friday noon, everyone would have a keg on the front lawn. There would be drinking and the students would come out and socialize on the lawn."

"I was a freshman at Marist, I made my first trip back to Marist in my third year, and I said I knew Marist and the rest of the campus looked good.

"When I was here, there was Clamstraw, Lou Donaldson and Shakin' Stevens," he said. "There was nothing to do but go out and have a good time."

"Marist was the best four years of my life," he said.

"The buildings look great, the food looks great, and the people are great," he said.

"Mike Stricker, of Pleasant Valley, said he hasn't seen the school grow and develop with all the new students.

"I try to keep a close eye on what's going on at Marist," he said.

Mariest alums hug at the Alumni Weekend picnic held at the McCall Field on Saturday.

Dona Tram, of Oakdale, N.Y., said she was happy to be back at Marist.

"The whole school building was just built with my own pose," she said. "There was a lot of construction, so I'm glad it's finished."

Marist alumni have returned to their alma mater to remember the good old days.

Is politics a lifetime job?

The Democratic chairwoman of the Massachusetts congressional delegation was caught in a phony scandal recently when her opponents, the Republican Party representatives, tried to impeach her in the state legislature. She was under fire for her policies in the last year. Now, her critics have suddenly realized that, with the recent national elections, they have lost in the state legislature.

It's just that these people feel trapped in the system. They feel that their lives are at stake and that they must continue to fight. And ultimately, they realize that they will never be able to change the system.

For example, Mike O'Flaherty's campaign manager realized that the federal government is so big and powerful that there's no way he can change it. So he resigned.

This is what makes the situation so much more challenging. Young people who are trying to make a difference are often frustrated and feel that they can't change anything. They feel that the system is rigged against them.

But, as young people, they are the ones who care the most. They are the ones who understand that the system is broken and needs to be fixed. They are the ones who have the most to lose.

Now, the young people who are running for office need to understand that they are running against a system that is rigged against them. They need to understand that they are running against a system that is rigged against them.

But, as young people, they are the ones who care the most. They are the ones who understand that the system is broken and needs to be fixed. They are the ones who have the most to lose.

Athletes right to privacy

Editor:

In response to Mike O'Farrill's column commenting on student-athlete privacy, I would like to offer a few thoughts.

Mr. O'Farrill, could you honestly say that women's basketball players and your mother's locker room? Or for that matter, do men's basketball players, baseball players, or any other players on campus have to worry about whether you would have to be in the shower while you were showering? Am I going too far? No, because the concern is not about the locker room, but about the people the athletes themselves want to keep their locker rooms private.

As a former basketball player at California State University, Northridge, I can tell you that there are no locker rooms, and the same holds true for most college campuses.

Can you see a difference? With these conditions for people with disabilities, the federal government must take action to protect the rights of students with disabilities.

Mr. O'Farrill, you too lack in the public eye, so report on all campuses, you are a part of the problem! The only difference is that these athletes are taking action to keep their privacy while you are taking action to make the world a better place.

Viewbook gets support

Editor:

This is an important issue, and I would like to add my voice to the debate. As a student athlete, I support the idea of a viewbook for students. These viewbooks would allow students to see what life is really about and make informed decisions about their future.

At times in recent years, the ground has not been level for student-athletes. In some cases, the emphasis has been on winning at all costs. However, this is not the case. Student-athletes should be allowed to choose their own path and not be forced into making decisions that they may not be ready for.

The viewbook would be a valuable resource for students and their families. It would provide information about the different programs offered, as well as the benefits and drawbacks of each.

If this issue is not addressed, then our schools will continue to suffer. Therefore, I urge all students and parents to support the idea of a viewbook for students.

Editor's Notebook

The viewbook would be an excellent way to inform students about the college experience. It would also help to reduce the cost of college, as students would be able to make informed decisions about their future.

Cross Country looks to improve
by MIKE O'FARRELL
Sports Editor

Closing off a difficult season this past weekend, the Marist cross-country team finished in 6th place out of 20 teams at the Lafayette Invitational at the Fossil Trace Course in Colorado Springs. The Marist runner to complete the course, Thomas Lawrence, finished the race in a time of 22 minutes, nine seconds.

Marist runners two through four rated out the rest of the race and continued to maintain their lead through the competition. Lawrence was the only Marist runner to complete the course, finishing the race in a time of 23 minutes and 41 seconds.

The Marist runners were led by Thomas Lawrence with a time of 22:15. Chris Anderson and Matt Londe also ran for the Red Foxes.

Ruggers crush Maritime;
win two
by KENT BINDERSTADT
Staff Writer

The Marist rugby team increased its record to 7-1 last Saturday when it crushed New York Military Academy 27-0.

Club president Stephen Bina and the rugby team were well on their way to a big win back in early October when they dropped a first game 21-0, but have won two straight games since then.

"We played a great game," the coach said, "and we really put the entire game." But now we're starting to play rugby, not just rugby, and we're starting to play rugby properly.

The Red Foxes were led by three points, Jordan Frank with three points, respectively. The team played some defense early, but we were completely contained, "he said. Now, we're starting to play better defense. We have come together as a team and are improving each game a bit.

The Red Foxes were 7-1 in the first game, but they won their last two contests by 11 and 12 points, respectively.

The Marist women's tennis team increased its record to 7-1 last Friday when it crushed Rider 8-1.

The team continued to dominate the game's outcome and secured victory with a 6-1 and 6-0 win on court one and two, respectively.

"We played well," the coach said, "and the ladies are coming together and doing well. They're really doing well for us.

Women's soccer

Marist women's soccer player Lorry Novak was named to the All-Eastern College Soccer Association's Orange County Community College Player of the Week award.

Although her college education began with summa cum laude at Lehman College, Champion, a computer in formation systems major, used Marist as his home for the next four years.

It didn't look like Lehman because it couldn't get rid of a ball. It was the first ball she was seeing. "Champion is the only person who can handle this ball," said team manager John H. Sedman, who has just completed his first year as the sports director for the college.

Champion said he wants to do well in college so that he can help other students to move on to the future.

"I'm not going to Lehman because it couldn't get rid of a ball. It was the first ball I saw that I could handle," said Champion.

O’Connell said he felt that the offense had yet to hit its true pace. "We moved the ball well, but we could have written our backs," he said. "We made some team penalties, but that will not come around. We are a 4-1 team, this is where we should be.
O’Connell knew for 24 yard field goals to keep the score at 20-13 at the half. Palniko, who had a school record of nine field goals, was the hero for the Marist.

The Red Flash had another easy moving on their own passat-ion. After a fourth down pass, Marist couldn’t get it as Palniko only needed one play on the same line and was able to take the win. With the win, the game was now 23-13, Marist.

The defense rose to the occasion limiting Brandeis to just three single plays on the 3rd, 4th, and 6th down.
Despite the win, Marist didn’t have come problems – just penalties – said head coach Rick Paprocki. "However, I am proud of our players that made the adjustment and played solid defensive football too.

Gridders make it into history books: win four

by MIKE O'FARRELL
Sports Editor

The Marist football team earned its first victory last Saturday when it increased its winning streak to four games by defeating St. Francis (PA) 23-22 in a a pivotal Atlantic Collegiate Atlantic Conference (ACPC) game. Celebrating the 25th anniversary of the Atlantic Conference, Saturday marked the first time in the school's 13-year history of Division 11 play that a team has won four straight games.

In its first possession of the opening half, winning four straight, I really can't explain the junior defensive end Chris Prati.

The win gives the Red Foxes an overall record of 4-1 and an ACPC record of 3-0. After downing St. Francis, Marist now owns sole possession of first place in the ACPC.

This Saturday, Marist travels to New London, Conn., to take on the United States Coast Guard Academy, also in an ACPC conference game. Last year, the Cadets downed Marist 40-13.

Against St. Francis, the Red Foxes wasted no time in getting on the board. On the first possession, Marist marched 67 yards in 8 plays to grab an early 6-0 lead. The drive ended when senior quarterback Mike Giordano hit junior flanker Dan DelPrete on a 20 yard touchdown strike. Brian Gibson's kick made the score 7-0 for Marist.

Marist was quick to strike again. On its second possession, the Red Fox only needed six plays to score. After completing a 30 yard pass to Scott DeFalco, O'Donnell countered and kicked Marist a 20 yard touchdown strike to tight end Adam Gibbons. McCourt added the extra point making the score 14-0.

The Red Fox defense dominated the first half of play by limiting St. Francis to 22 yards of offense on only 26 plays.

It was the defense that scored next for the Red Foxes. With DeFalco now finishing the ball on its own one-yard line, St. Francis runners tried to pound it in. But, Red Fox safety Dave O'Donnell was tackled in the endzone by the backup Joe Ricardi for a safety.

"We were coming off the ends real well with our defensive line. They were unable to contain our linemen," Prati said.

"We had great defensive intensity," Prati said. "They were put out of sorts on the line that through them off guard." The second half started off much like the first with Marist scoring on its first possession. Despite a 10 yard holding penalty and a loss on the punt, Marist found itself in the one yard line. The touchdown was set up when O'Donnell connected with DeFalco on a 27 yard strike. St. Francis was able to muster some offense, but couldn't do enough to score predominantly because we had a total team effort," Prati said.

Last Tuesday, Marist suffered a 3-0 defeat to Army, 15-18.

Despite the loss, VanCarpals was pleased with his team's effort. "I'm proud of the way we played. It was a close game in row and are one of the top teams in the nation. It was a good experience for our team to play against a team of their caliber," VanCarpals said.

Andrews and Conciola led the Marist attack. Andrews, who was playing with shin splits, slammed down seven kills and three blocks. Freshman Carlynn Gianetti also had a strong performance as she filled in for the injured Kim Andrews. Gianetti had seven kills.

Head coach Vic VanCarps was pleased with the team's performance. "Robbi took over offensively and Marianne was able to control the match," he said. "We were planning to rest..."

Volleyball splits: now 9-6

The Marist women's volleyball split two matches last week increasing its record to 9-6.

Monday, the Red Foxes scored an impressive 3-2 victory over Pace University, 15-17, 15-9, 15-13, 13-15, 15-9.

Senior co-captain Marianne Conciola led the attack as she notched 25 assists. Sophomore Robin Gess slammed down 11 kills and added two aces. Karen Wiley, a junior, added eight kills and three blocks.

Freshman Carlynn Gianetti also had a strong performance as she filled in for the injured Kim Andrews. Gianetti had seven kills.

New appreciation grows out of a 'Challenge'

I guess I never really understood crew

Prior to Saturday, I not only questioned the people that took part in it, but who were there to row a boat competitively was beyond me. What was even more so is that the man making sure we were on track to do well, the caretaker and mentor of the team, couldn't be any more involved.

Kolankait said the boat was strong throughout the race. "It felt good, I think everyone was happy," he said. "It's great to win a big race like this when you come from the area."

Murray said he was happy with the team's performance. "It was a really tough race," he said. "We were really excited for this race. It was definitely a big win for us. This has been one of the best stints in the fall."

This year, when it was originally scheduled to compete in two other races, the New York State men's and women's races, but regatta officials canceled the races due to rough weather on the Hudson.

Davis said the river was calm until around 2 p.m. and as it turned out, it settled down later. "It's a definite disappointment," he said. "I think the fours would have been able to place also, or maybe even come away with another victory. However, the wind and the stability of our crew might have been swapped so the decision was made. We ended up rowing out, the river but the officials have no way of knowing that."

Davis said the seedlings of the afternoon races, Davis was pleased with the regatta and said he would definitely return.

"It was a quality regatta," he said. "The competition was great, and it was run quite well. We would have no problem going back next year even if we didn't win." Sunday, Marist had one boat compete in the Head of Connecticut Regatta in Middletown, Ct.

The team of Hunt, Longo, Murray, John Garrity and cowxman Steve Scott wascompeted in the men's four event. Davis said the team finally ran in the fifteenth place.

"The guys felt they rowed a nice race," he said. "Three of them had rowed the day before and they were real tired. However, they wanted to go to the Connecticut and they did a good job considering."

The Challenge was sponsored by Scenic Hudson Inc., a Poughkeepsie based environmental group that promotes the Hudson River Valley.

The race attracted over 30 col- leges and universities from around the world, including the United States...

There is more pressure in an eight person race than in a single race. There is pressure on each rower to come together with the rest of the boat. One person can throw off the performance of the entire boat.

Seeing a finely tuned crew in action is quite a sight. The crew becomes one with the boat.

The Red Foxes will be in action again on Sunday when they take on the reigning NCAA champions Peter's College in a tri-match at 1 p.m.
