Under investigation
Semi-Formal turns stomachs

by RON JOHNSON

An investigation is under way concerning events which took place at the Junior Class Semi-Formal last Friday, Feb. 18, at the IBM Club.

Some students claim to have seen vomit on the floor and in the restrooms as well as seeing some male students dancing in their boxer shorts on the dance floor.

Marilyn O'Connor, spokesperson for the Country Club, declined to comment on the alleged incidents and directed all questions to Steve Sanstr, assistant dean for activities.

"We're in the process of investigating," said Sanstr. Sanstr said he was not at any point to confirm or deny any of the rumors about the dance.

According to eyewitness accounts, a fraction of the 240 students attending were drunk and disorderly.

"If I stand up right next to my table," said Frank McKee, a junior accounting major, "I think I was a little out of hand. I think it would have been a really good dance if people were not getting sick and out of hand.

Sue Yanusz, a junior communications major, said people were drinking before the event and that caused problems.

"It's just a shame," Yanusz said. "Everyone was really drunk and stuff." Dan the bathroom. "Linda," a sophomore, said, "had a serious president who served as a chaperone for the event, said a majority of the students were being appropriate.

However, she said she saw some students dancing in their boxer shorts and saw one student throw something at the commode. "I think there were problems," said Cool. "People came in drunk, and people must have brought drinks with them.

"Another Richard Rancourt also chaperoned the event. He did not see anything unusual, though.

"I don't remember seeing anybody obnoxious drunk," said Rancourt.

Rancourt did admit to seeing one student dancing with his pants down, though.

Three of the four officers of the Class of '95 who sponsored the event were present.

Student speeches conclude SGA elections

by CARI OLIESKEWICZ

Managing Editor

Elections Commissioner Joseph A. Salavoy asked the crowd of 65 to "not be too nervous" and avoid catcalls and "ferncelshicker-ing" during Monday night's student body election speeches.

Both the audience and the candidates were relatively well-behaved, with most students giving cause based on issues that the student body president.

"I am pleased with the turnout," Salavoy said. "Normally, we do not see this much of a crowd at speech night, but this year we have the largest number of candidates." 24 candidates ran for the positions as class officers, student senators, and members of the Judicial Board.

Every candidate except for Kevin Lien, running for non-traditional commuter senati, showed up to give a speech.

Salavoy suggested to the audience that students remember who they voted and who did not show up when voting.

"I told them I was going to say something if they were not here," Salavoy said.

The speeches began with the candidates for class officers; the only contested positions being for presi-

Students running for positions on the judicial board ran unopposed, and both candidates pledged to work for the students fairly on the board.

Competition for commuter senator was also lacking; only one candidate only for both traditional and non-traditional commercator senators.

The race for resident student senato consisted of seven candidates competing for four seats on the senate. Only one of the seven was an incumbent senator.

The final speakers were the students body presidential candidates, who spoke about the same issues they debated on television and have been campaigning on since the beginning of the election.

Anthony Mignone, current excutive vice president, spoke on the importance of experience in a president.

"Student government is here for the purpose of adding the students," Mignone said. "The student body president has a big job and I understand the workings of the executive board and the senate.

"I think Gillies I made his belfish with a parallel that he had hoped would demonstrate that students cannot be frozen with the fear of opportunity.

Gillis said what separated him from the other candidates was his residence on campus. "I am a resident there because of the opportunities that a student can have because I live here," Gillies said.

Nick Capuano said that student government should strive to obtain a working relationship with students and encourage more student speeches.

"The students make up what the school is, the school does not make up what the students are," Capuano said.

First live debate garners praise and criticism

by CARI OLIESKEWICZ

The live presidential debate which took place last week was a success according to those who put it together and those who watched.

The only negative comments, according to Jim Graham, director of the debate center, were concerning the questioning of the candidates.

"I would have thought that a lot of questions were irrelevant," Graham said.

"I am pleased with the turnout," said the general manager of New York N.Y., said that he believed the debate was done well, however the questions were "terrible.

"The quality of the questions was very poor," LaCugna said. "There could have been better questions asked by the panelists.

"LaCugna said that many of the questions were submitted by the student body president or little or control over.

"The vision '94 question was inappropriate because the construction was not an SGA issue," LaCugna said. "The new campus being ready is not something the student body president can really control.

"We don't call SGA for these things," LaCugna said.

"I would have thought that a lot of questions were irrelevant," Graham said.

"The question about housing during the construction was an example," Hall said.

"Housing and construction are administrations matter," said Graham.

"We all asked legitimate questions that would involve the student body president and his role on campus," Jason LaCugna, MCTV news director, and panelist, said.

LaCugna added that he had a time constraint to consider when questioning the candidates.

"We were dealing with a format that was very structured and very precise," LaCugna said. "We wanted to cover as wide a base as possible with the questions.

"The questions were formulated from the descriptions of the student body president in the SGA charter," Graham said.

"The criticism of the panelists choices and biased questioning are invalid," Graham said. "Everyone is biased in their own way.

There was a lot of praise for the first live event covered by MCTV. Joseph A. Salavoy, elections commissioner, said that everyone in SGA was excited about the debate and pleased with the outcome.

"I think the debate served to enlighten the campus more than they would have been had they only had the speech night to rely on," Salavoy said. "The Marist community was able to see who is best qualified for the position of student body president.

Hall said that the live debate was a good experience for the candidates and involved a lot of people on campus.

"This had a good impact on the campus," Hall said. "It helped people to know more about student government.

Rachel Smith, a senior, said that the debate was a good opportunity for candidates to get their ideas out and for voters to see who was able to present themselves.

"A lot of students tuned in to this, more than if we take off the number," Smith said. "This was good for the student body because there was something visual to put with the posters and signs.

Bob Lynch, the only administrator to attend the debate, said that it was a good chance of ideas.

"The debate was a very healthy experience," Lynch said. "It was done professionally and it is encouraging that MCTV and the campus center are working on things like this,"

Graham said that the event was definitely worth doing.

"The debate enhanced the reputation of MCTV," Graham said. "This was an en-xercise in campus communication, and I would do it again if given the opportunity.

Future bright for Med-

Hard work does pay off.

"Medical technology is a fast-growing field," said Katharine Greiner, an associate professor of the Marist med-tech program.

"With the growing population of delays and diseases, there will be enough people to care for them." We are attracting 20 students in the medical technology Marist. "Students go through biology and chemistry courses, then during their junior and senior year take the med-tech courses," Greiner said.

There would include many hands-on laboratory classes in which students can gain a solid background in the field.

"We are the middle-man betother medical services," said David Whitehead, a junior in the program.

The analysis of blood, solid tissues, and other bodily fluids is the key purpose for people in this field.

"We are always in the laboratories, so people don't see us," Greiner said. "The results of our reports, a doctor could use this to help patients.

Men sue squirrel after campus altercation

In December, a judge in Maricopa County, Ariz., ruled in favor of a man who claimed that a squirrel had attacked him on a college campus. The man, who was a student, was walking on campus when a squirrel approached him and began to attack him. The man claimed that he had been injured by the squirrel's teeth and that he had suffered a broken arm as a result of the attack. The judge ruled in favor of the man, awarding him $10,000 in damages. The squirrel was later killed by campus security officers. This is the first time in history that a court has ruled in favor of a human in a case involving a squirrel.

The appearance age group in this year is 19 to 21-years-old. This is partly because of the new laws that have been passed. The law that says that if you are under the age of 21, you cannot drink alcohol. This is a change from the law that was in place before. I think that this law is a good idea. It will help to reduce the amount of alcohol that is sold to minors. It will help to reduce the amount of alcohol that is consumed by young people. I think that this law is a good idea.

The administration has said that they would like to see more interaction between students and faculty. However, many students feel that this is not happening. Last week, I interviewed some students to get their perspective on what goes on at the school, beyond what the job description requires.

This was refreshing to see Rob DeCicco in attendance at the faculty meeting. Having a faculty present at the meetings is important. It is great to see the students interact with the teachers and each other. The students are part of a larger community, and they play an important role in the education process. However, it is important to remember that students are individuals, and they have different perspectives and experiences.

Baird paces runners in NEC champs
by GREG BIBB
Staff Writer

Junior Andy Baird was the pace-setter for the men's track team last weekend at the NEC Championship meet held in Fairfield, Connecticut.
Baird ran a personal best in the 5000 meters with a time of 15 minutes, 29 seconds.
In women's action, the team of Pam Goltz, Patty Schneider, Allison Murray and Karen Mangan placed first in the distance medley relay, recording a 13:11.5 finish.
Coach Greg Schneider also participated in the 300 meters, coming in first in his respective time of 45.5, another school record.
The men and women will return to action this weekend when they travel to Seton Hall.

Marist beats Wagner; Mountaineers tonight
by ANDREW HOLMUND
Staff Writer

The women's basketball team will be looking to push its winning streak to seven games this evening as it travels to Emmitsburg, Md., to face Mount St. Mary's in a Northeast Conference action.

On December 14th, against the Red Foxes (9-14 overall, 8-7 in the NEC), the Red Hawks did not have a second-half lead which would hold up in its previous setbacks.

Against Seton Hall, 18 points at halftime, 31-17, Marist went on to defeat the Scarlet Knights, 70-58, in front of 237 spectators at the James J. McCann Center.

The two game winning streak is Marist's longest since 1966.
The Red Hawks were led by guard Lori Keys, who scored a career-high 30 points and grabbed 13 rebounds, recording her first career double-double.

The co-captain was named Northeast Conference Player of the Week on Monday.
Senior guard and co-captain Cindy Carroll collected 11 points in her final regular-season home game. Carroll and sophomore guard Jill Heller distributed a team-high four assists.

Head coach Ken Babineau said the team's defense and Key's performance were keys to the triumph.

"We played hard-nosed, scrappy defense," Babineau said. "I came in and didn't let them come back in the second half. Lori had a monster of a game."

Last Wednesday, Marist received its 31st point dressing against Long Island University by knocking out Monmouth College, 76-61, in Popkessie.

Soccer and lacrosse revamped
by MATTHEW DAVIS
Feature Editor

It was only a matter of time before Vision '94 personnel Marist.

"Beginning next year, women's soccer moves from a club to Division I status, while the men's lacrosse team looks to become the founding member of a new East Coast Athletic Conference lacrosse league.

Elevating the five-year-old program from team status to amateur status is the main reason for the proposed, in Athletic Director Gene Doris October, before the voting poll before the trustees Feb. 5.

"It took lots of homework," said Doris. "We didn't want to raise the club to a varsity level without providing the resources to do it, but the proper path to the seasons with the stages with minimum delay.

Under the proposal voted into effect by the trustees, the soccer club will undergo a transition year in 1994, keeping its club status, and operational budget from 1995.

Coach the Year possibility for Magnar
by Ted Holmlund

The Red Foxes' 72-67 victory over Wagner Saturday night was, as the cliché goes, "a big win."
It not only kept Marist in contention for a home game as the fourth-seed, but the win gave the team confidence, because it showed that they could win a close game against a quality Northeast Conference opponent.

It may be a big win for head coach Larry Magnar and his future at Marist.

After the victory, Wagner coach Tom Cannon correctly lauded Magnar, saying he is a top candidate for NEC Coach of the Year and has done an excellent job with a young team.

Sure, Captrust is clearly lobbying for his good friend Magnar, but let's face it, Coach of the Year honors is Kevin 'Binnin, whose team will most likely finish the NEC again the same. This is despite the fact FDU was predicted to finish in the middle of the preseason coaches poll.

Magnar is well liked around the league. The opposing coaches, who are vying for the award, want him to stay in the league. If Marist wins one or two more games, his chances of winning look better.

The school shouldn't be surprised if Magnar wins Coach of the Year.

I know the college wouldn't fire a Coach of the Year because it wouldn't look good. It wouldn't provide a good "vision" of the college. We all know that most coaches' jobs are becoming more and more secure.

Inside strength
The women's basketball team seems like they are on the verge of breaking the right time.

With the NEC Tournament fast approaching, the women's team (9-14-7 NEC) has now won two in a row.

The Red Hawks' recent success can most directly be attributed to the increased effectiveness of the squad's inside game.

Junior forward Lori Keys and sophomore center Stacey Dugger have the charge on the blocks hard for a long time to attain that status, but it may never have happened if it were not for the NCAA Article 9—gender equity.

The concept behind gender equity is that women athletes will be afforded the same opportunity as men athletes.

This is a good rule because it puts something of a check on colleges who might tend to focus solely on football and basketball—the money-making sports.

However, this caused a dilemma for the athletic department.

"If a man's power became a Division I varsity team, the existing structure would have to change. It would mean that some men's sport would have to be expanded," said Doris.

Would all the men's sports lose some scholarships? Would a man's sports suffer?

Issues like these were discussed by the Board of Trustees and the Athletic Department during its meeting on Feb. 3.

The decision-makers came up with a good solution. The scholar...
